Vol. 44 No. 18 | Five Sections | Lancaster Farming, Saturday, March 6, 1999 | $29.50 Per Year | 60¢ Per Copy

Industrial pollution in the water supply around McConnellsburg has raised questions about the future for the next generation, including Caitlin Glazier, almost 4 years old. Caitlin holds some of the prize-winning corn from the field of her grandfather, Kenneth L. Glazier. Generation After Generation, Cattle Learn To 'Weed Out' Best Forages

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Animals on pasture have been working for millennia to perfect the process of forage selection at ground level, while university research on the process stretches back only about 50 years.

Determining exactly how a grazing animal can select for plant parts with protein levels differing sometimes to a minuscule percentage as part of the their genetic programming continues to receive university attention, according to a forage expert who spoke Wednesday morning.

"I put a lot of confidence in animals, in what they can do," said Jim Gerrish of the Forage Systems Research Center of the University of Missouri. Gerrish noted the grazing animals develop almost a "business sense" of how to select for improved nutrient value among the forages in the field, generation after generation.

And scientists are still trying to understand how.

In the meantime, work on improving forage quality continues at the university.

Gerrish, an experienced grazier for a beef cow/calf and finish herd, spoke at the two-day Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference at the Holiday Inn, Grantville. More than 130 producers and agri-industry representatives attended the event Wednesday and Thursday this week.

During Wednesday's session, Gerrish spoke about steps to obtain and maintain pasture quality.

Gerrish noted that he had recently returned from a national symposium on forage quality. He exa-

Reasons For Biosecurity Won't Wait For Dairy Industry To Act

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The laissez-faire attitude of many dairy producers toward biosecurity is potentially one of the most serious business risks faced by the industry today.

It is also a major drain on dairy farming operational costs.

According to David Tomsche, DVM, with Veterinary Associates of Melrose-Albany-Upsala, in Melrose, Minnesota, current practices of the dairy cow farming industry are inadequate to deal with the threat of infectious disease.

"To say the least, there is significant room for improvement relative to the current state of the heifer replacement business in the United States," Tomsche said.

He was one of 15 speakers who gave presentations as part of the two-day 1999 Mid-Atlantic Dairy Management Conference, held Feb. 24-25 at the Radisson Penn Harris conference center in Camp Hill.

The conference is a cooperative venture between Monsanto Dairy Business, Purina Mills Inc., Pa. Farm Bureau, Land O' Lakes Inc., and seven universities — Penn State University, University of Pennsylvania, Rutgers University, University of Delaware, University of Maryland, Virginia Tech University, and West Virginia University.

Speakers' topics ranged from business considerations when increasing the operational size of a business, to environmental concerns for dairying, and the feeding and health care of dairy animals.

An 140-page compilation of presentations, including speaker biographies, was made available to those who attended the event. For the most part, the speakers closely followed the printed version of their presentations. However, certain speakers, such as Tomsche, provided additional information, opinions and anecdotal information that gave the material a perspective and emphasis impossible to garner from the printed version.

The Mid-Atlantic Dairy Conference arose out of a need for a higher-level intensity educational program by the state's dairy production community, in addition to the highly regarded, but less technical, traditional Extension educational programs.

The Mid-Atlantic Dairy Conference provides a forum for receiving continuing education of research-based information and pratical business experience discoveries.

Tomsche's presentation was included in a time block dedicated to information management and

Given for overall achievement and contribution to the dairy producer industry, the Robinson award is the highest honor given by the state association.

Pennsylvania DHIA Holds Annual Meeting

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - The Pennsylvania DHIA presented herd management awards to its top members in the state, as well as the Clyde Robison Award for service at its recent annual awards banquet in State College

The herd management awards for highest production went to the top three herds in each breed, including mixed breed, goats and Red & White Holsteins, as well as the herd with the lowest average somatic cell count for 1998

Top overall managers were Karl and Daniel Brandt of Lebanon County, who milk 100 Holsteins three times a day and raise feed on 100 acres

The breed winners were

Holsteins (1) Karl & Daniel Brandt, Lebanon County, (2) Carl A Farms, Inc., Schuylkill County, and (3) Melvin & Judy Peachey Mifflin County

Guernseys (1) John & J E Marchezak, Washington County, (2) Richard O Smith, Bucks County' and (3) Roger A Garber, Franklin County

Jerseys (1) Ralaine Jersey Farm, Bedford County, (2) Rodney Swope, Fulton County, and (3-tie) Maran-atha Farm, Somerset County, and Jemi Jerseys, Cumberland County

Mixed Breed (1) Calvin Hostetter, York County, (2) Glen & Dawn Anderson York County and (3-tie) Rebecca Darling, Lackawanna County, and Dane Yeager, Mercer County

Ayrshires (1) Dean E Varner Huntingdon County, (2) Dale & Pattie Mayfair, Lebanon County, and (3) Don Gable Chester County

FEEDER PIGS WEDNESDAY 656 LAST WEEK 438 LAST YEAR 285

TREND: Compared to last week, feeder pig prices were sharply lower. Last week's active trading and higher prices were replaced with light demand and a very weak market. Even slaughter buyers were slow to purchase pigs in their favorite weight groups. Around 54 percent of supply was sold for slaughter. Around 53 percent of supply was sold for slaughter. All pigs weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weight.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was light to fair at best and was generally noted as below first-of-the month projections. Seller offerings varied, but were adequate overall. Live supplies were moderate to light; weights remained in a range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 54 to 68 cents. Trade sentiment was steady to fully steady. In the parts complex, volumes and items available continued to vary from plant to plant, but supplies were usually noted as fully sufficient for the generally light and unaggressive buying interest.

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Mar 03, 1999

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY

Grain and soybean bids were mostly lower for the day in dull trading. Wheat bids declined due to profit taking on the Boards and slowed export sales. Corn bids fell slightly on lack of foreign news and weakness in wheat bids. Bean bids were down on a slight pick up in farmer selling along with lack of export orders. Wheat 1 to 2 cents lower except Portland 3 cents higher. Corn 1 to 2 cents lower. Sorghum 2 cents lower. Soybeans 1 to 4 cents lower

In the dairy business, income over feed cost is the name of the game Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements offer dairymen the means to maximize this value while getting the most from their cow's natural abilities

Pro-Lix liquid feed supplements are concentrated sources of just what ordinary feeds lack protein energy, vitamins, minerals -- everything animals need for economical milk production and growth

For replacement heifers, Pro-Lix means faster maturity and assurance that they ll get to the milking herd on time If you trust your heifers to forage alone they might not make it (Bouvatec Is Available)

For lactating cows, the nitrogen content of Pro-Lix means plenty of protein available for milk production and growth

Finally, for dry cows, Pro-Lix not only helps maintain their health during the dry period it prepares them for the next lactation The Ca P ratio in Pro-Lix helps control milk fever while the Vitamin E and selenium aids in clean-up after the birth of a calf

Best of all, Pro-Lix works with all types of pasture grass or forage as a free-choice supplement, a top-dressing, or a ration mix

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

ST. GREGORY, MARCH 12.

BLIZZARD OF '88!

From the vantage of '99, why not remember the Blizzard of '88 — 1888, that is — that hit the Northeast with such force? March '99 is predicted to have more than its share of snow in New England but nothing like the Blizzard of '88, which dumped 58 inches on Saratoga, N.Y., 50 inches on Middletown, Conn., 46.7 inches on Albany, N.Y. and 20.9 inches on New York City. The '88 blizzard was followed by record cold. Between the snowfall and the frigid temperatures, over 400 people were fatally caught by the weather.

To live through March gives immunity from death until January.

TIP OF THE WEEK

To soften cookies that have gone hard, put a few slices of apple into the cookie jar.

CINNAMON BUNS

- 2 cups milk
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 6 tablespoons butter
- 1 yeast cake
- 1/4 cup lukewarm water
- 2 eggs
- 4 cups flour
- 3 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup raisins

Scald the milk, add sugar and butter and let cool. Dissolve yeast in warm water, add to milk mixture. Beat in one of the eggs. Sift flour with spices and salt and add to the milk mixture alternating with remaining egg. Fold in raisins. Knead and let rise until almost double. Knead and let rise again, then shape into buns and bake at 350 F for 30 minutes.

Makes 12 to 18 buns

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

The winds of the daytime wrestle and fight, longer and stronger than those of the night

As it rains in March, so it rains in June

If it does not freeze on March 10, a fertile year is expected.

OPINION

Worth Something

Thanks to soaring prices, academic agricultural and biological journals, which for 200 years have provided information on advances in biology, food production, plant diseases, and animal science, are likely to go the way of the plow horse That's the view of a Cornell University faculty task force that has been studying the problem.

Subscriptions to the 312 research journals studied by the panel are as high as $5,000 a year and nine of the scholarly journals studied now cost more than $3,000 a year. In 1994, the panel's report says 24 of the biological titles were from commercial publishers, as opposed to university, government, and society publishers.

"If subscriptions continue to rise at their present rate, the end result will be the extinction of many journals—because they will no longer be commercially viable—and drastic reductions in scope of many university library journal collections," says Kraig Adler, Cornell vice provost for life sciences, professor of biology, and chair of the task force.

As prices increase beyond inflation, more libraries are forced to cut journal subscriptions. The costs of the journals are then spread out over an ever-decreasing number of institutions at still-higher prices that even fewer institutions can afford.

We have long decried the overall decreasing dollars available for agricultural research as food production is strangled by laws initiated by the opponents of agriculture that make it illegal to farm. To maintain our world food production leadership, we must keep moving ahead with new technology advances. But as our nation's farming enterprises are forced to shut down and move to more favorable ag production business climates in Central and South America, there is less and less incentive for major companies to invest research dollars in the U.S. A decreasing enterprise gives no promise of an agricultural market large enough to provide a return on research investments.

The Cornell study seems to us just another manifestation of an ongoing trend. What good are the research studies we do have if other researchers, students, agribusinesses, and farmers can't have access to the findings.

The Cornell report asks the question, "How can faculty combat the trend of escalating subscriptions?" The answer is suggested that researchers could decide not to submit articles to high-priced journals and that university researchers could withhold their editorial services from the journals. Academics, it says, must be aware of the implications of their publishing patterns and of the subsequent costs to the institutions and their readers.

We might also suggest that a lot of these research findings could be published in Lancaster Farming free of charge. This may not bring the research author the prestige of being published in a $5,000 technical bulletin, but it would get the report in the most sought publication in Penn State University Libraries' archives That should be worth something.

To Check Generators

We never know when a power outage may occur. Thus, it is very important to keep your stand by generator in operating condition at all times. Some tips to help prevent stand by generator problems are: 1. Keep the generator clean and in good working order. 2. Operate automatic units once a week to ensure controls are functioning. 3. Operate the generator once a month under full load and long enough to reach normal operating temperature. 4. Make sure your generator does not back feed into your electrical supplier lines, and 5. Check fuel level daily to make sure the generator did not come on when you did not know it.

Have Children's Health Insurance

Your children qualify for Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) coverage when your family income is within certain limits. This income may be from jobs that do not provide insurance, from self employment, from alimony or child support, from survivor benefits or other sources. Most children who qualify for CHIP receive free coverage. For others, CHIP coverage is at monthly rates much lower than insurance usually costs. CHIP is administrated by the Pennsylvania Insurance Department, but the coverage is for quality medical services through regular insurance companies. Qualification depends on family size and income. For a family of four including parents, you qualify for free CHIP if your annual income does not exceed $32,900. CHIP covers regular check ups and immunizations, prescription drugs, emergency care, certain dental, vision, hearing and mental health services, diagnostic testing and up to 90 days of hospitalization in any year. For more information call 1-800-986- KIDS.

To Calibrate Liquid Manure Spreader

Calibrating manure spreaders is a very important key in making sure you are following your nutrient management plan while protecting the environment. According to Leon Ressler, Lancaster County Extension Agriculture Environmental Agent, for most liquid manure equipment, getting the proper application rate is a matter of adjusting ground speed. One method of calibrating can be done by spreading a full load in a square or rectangular pattern with the typical overlaps. Calculate the area covered in acres by multiplying the length in feet by the width in feet to obtain the square feet of the area covered. Then divide this number by 43,560 to determine the number of acres covered. Next divide the number of gallons in your spreader by the number of acres covered. This answer is the number of gallons spread per acre at the speed used for this calculation.

After you have determined the application rate for the first load, repeat the procedure for different ground speeds. This will give you a good understanding of the spreading rate over a range of operating conditions.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

INCARNATION, ANYONE?

March 7, 1999

Background Scripture:
John 1:1-18; 20:30, 31
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 33:1-9

The late Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick said that, when Jesus first began his ministry, many people said, God sent him. Throughout Jewish history, God had sent an ample supply of prophets, rulers, champions and so forth.

After a while, however, says Fosdick, "that sounded too cold, as though God were the bow and Jesus the arrow." So, some probably went on to say, God is with him. And for a while, that seemed adequate. Jesus could not do what he did unless God was with him.

Eventually, it was not enough, so that people began to say God came in him. "That was not so much the theology at first as poetry," said Fosdick. "It was an exhilarating insight and its natural expression was a song. God can come into human life! they cried. God has come into human life!" That is what the incarnation means.

In beginning his gospel the Evangelist used a very special Greek term: Logos. The English rendering of Logos—Word—is rather weak by comparison. This Greek philosophical term was introduced about 500 years before the birth of Jesus, probably by Heraclitus of Ephesus. Stoics and Platonists understood the term to mean "the mind of God," reflected in the rationality, order and harmony of the universe.

To Jews, the "Word of God" represented God's penchant for expressing and revealing himself creatively. In Psalms 33:6 we read: "By the word of the Lord the heavens were made..." The prophets were given the "word of the Lord," In Proverbs 8:22-31 God's wisdom is the word of God, as William Hamilton puts it, "a portion of God extended into the world." Later, the Jewish philosopher Philo of Alexandria attempted to merge the Greek and Jewish concepts, both of which were impersonal in their nature.

When John the Evangelist used Logos in the opening of his gospel, however, he used it in a way that they had probably not anticipated: "And the word became flesh and dwelt among us, full of grace and truth" (John 1:14). This was a giant step, for he is saying that to many of us was unthinkable: the creative, expressive faculty of God became a human being! As much of God as can be expressed in human nature is what we encounter in Jesus Christ.

GOD'S CHARACTER

Christians have played kinds of semantic and percentage games with the concept of incarnation. It is impossible. Jesus was not 50% human and 50% divine or any other percentage breakdown. The best that we can say—that he was 100% human and 100% divine—is good poetry but lousy mathematics. The fact of Christ, says Dr. Carnegie Simpson, "does not indeed show us everything, but it shows us the one thing we need to know—the character of God." A. Ian Burnett comments: "In other words, God must be like Christ. The character of the Creator cannot be less than the highest He has created, and the highest is that babe born to Mary on the first Christmas morning."

J.B. Phillips' translation of John in The Gospels puts it with beautiful clarity:

At the beginning, God expressed Himself. That Personal Expression was with God and was God, and he existed with God from the beginning. All creation took place through Him... So the Expression of God became a human being and lived among us. (Macmillan, 1953)

The human mind can never comprehend the Creator of the cosmos. We can never analyze God's nature nor devise a theology that adequately explains how he works in this world. But, because of Jesus Christ we can know all we need to know. We can entrust ourselves to the mercies of a God whose character is glimpsed in the life of Jesus.

The incarnation, however, does not stop with Jesus Christ. St. Irenaeus tells us that "The Word of God, Jesus Christ, for his great love for mankind, became what we are in order to make us what he is himself." The object of Christian discipleship is for each of us to incarnate God in our own lives, however imperfectly.

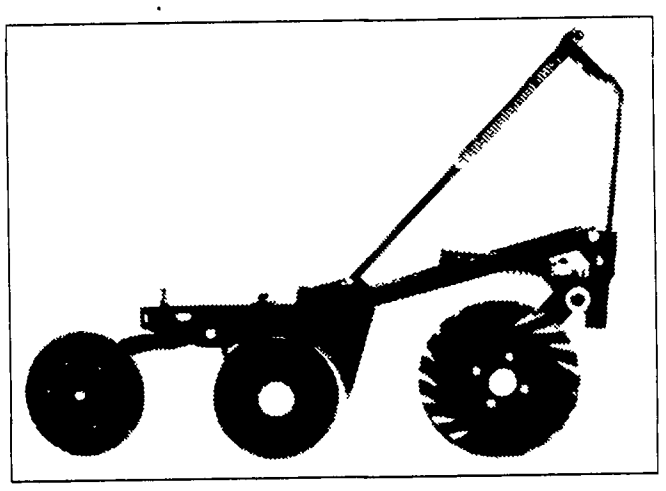
THE CONSERVATIONIST

The most comprehensive, time-proven set of no-till drill features in the business.



The proven Great Plains no-till system utilizes a coulter to prepare a mini conventional seedbed for the openers to place the seed at the precise depth selected.

- Utilizes proven coulter-and-opener no-till system.
- Compact, well-balanced design transports easily.
- Heavy-duty coulters cut through tough ground and heavy residue.
- Dry fertilizer, small-seeds and native-grass options.
- Lock-out hubs disengage drives for transport.
- Large 9.00 x 24 tires provide a smooth ride and consistent seed metering.
- 705(7') and 1005(10') models available

RING-DRIVE SILO UNLOADER with Polar Claw™ chain
POLAR CLAW
Polar Claw and the Polar Claw logo are trademarks of Patz Sales, Inc.
Distributor to deflect feed when filling for improved packing. For larger silos, a motorized kicker can be added.
Blower for easy servicing
• Replaceable lower blower band with extra-thick, 1/4-inch steel
• 4 swinging, adjustable, cupped paddles with stainless steel pins
• Double-grooved pulley with taper bore hub
An optional independent electric motor rotates the unloader and distributor while filling Chain guide wheel mounting to track silo wall closely
Big 9-foot drive ring flanged to the inside for added strength
The Polar Claw is ideal for frozen and hardpacked silage. The cutters-and-claw chain aggressively tears silage loose and quickly moves it to the blower Fast (634 ft./min) chain speed for high-volume delivery.
Ideal replacement unloader for your suspension:
• 3-cable tripod
• 3-cable hexapod
Powder coating is the new standard in finishing systems. It provides a superior, uniform and durable finish.
Add these new features to your Patz Model RD-820 unloader.

LAST WEEK	2430	1764
LAST YEAR	2615	1775

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, the slaughter steer and heifers market started out firm and then closed .50-1.00 higher on late-week gains. The market finally moved past the low that has kept average Choice cattle from breaking the 64.00 mark, since the beginning of the year. However our improvements were minor compared to the Western feedlot market that rose 1.00 to mostly 2.00, to close from 64.00-65.00 live and mostly 102.00 dressed. Local Holstein steers sold steady on a good offering. Slaughter cows ended the week uneven, demand was best for Lean cows (over 85 percent) and prices were fully steady, but fleshier cows closed mostly 1.00 lower. Slaughter bulls sold 1.00 higher. Supply included 44 percent slaughter steers, 6 percent slaughter heifers, 36 percent slaughter cows, 4 percent slaughter bulls, with the balance made up of feeder cattle.

SLAUGHTER STEERS: High Choice and Prime 2-4 1110-1450 lbs 63.00-66.25, few up to 68.00. Choice 2-3 1010-1495 lbs 60.50-64.50, late mostly 62.00-64.00; 1500-1550 lbs 58.25-60.75. Select and low Choice 2-3 1015-1495 lbs 56.75- 61.75; 1505-1655 lbs 54.50-58.25. Select 1-3 1055-1420 lbs 54.25-59.25.

More Producers Sought For Farmers' Markets

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Tom Ridge, Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes Jr. recently announced that the Farmers' Market Nutrition Program (FMNP) is seeking additional producers for markets in Southeastern Pennsylvania.

They include two Chester Farmers' Markets in Delaware County, the Norristown Community Farmers' Market in Montgomery County and the Philadelphia Growers' Markets.

"These farmers' markets have shown to be ideal locations to purchase fresh, locally produced fruits and vegetables," Hayes said. "The Nutrition Program would like to build upon our success in helping needy families to obtain nutritious produce by inviting additional growers to participate."

The Farmers' Market Nutrition Program provides fresh fruits and vegetables to families enrolled in Pennsylvania's Women, Infants Children (WIC) program.

In 1998, more than 437,000 Farmers' Market Nutrition checks valued at $5 each were issued to eligible women and children under the program.

Nearly 434 growers participated in the program at 330 market sites across Pennsylvania last year.

The Chester Farmers' Markets operate on Tuesdays at the Chester Senior Center, and Thursdays in the parking lot of Trinity United Methodist Church, 9th and Kerlin streets, Chester.

In 1998, the program issued $52,000 in checks to WIC participants and seniors to purchase produce at the markets.

Opened in August, the Norristown Community Farmers' Market operates on Saturdays. It is in a county-owned parking lot at Marshall and DeKalb streets in Norristown. In 1998, FMNP issued approximately $20,000 in checks to WIC participants through the market in Norristown.

The Philadelphia Growers' Markets, operated by the Farmers' Market Trust, has several sites in Philadelphia. Currently, nine growers participate in these markets.

Pennsylvania Absolutely Ayrshires March 13

DELTA (York Co.) — The Pennsylvania Ayrshire Breeders Association has announced that its annual meeting and convention is to be held March 12-13 at the Holiday Inn Holidome and Conference Center, York.

All Ayrshire enthusiasts are invited to participate.

Youth are encouraged to attend and participate in a swimming party, miniature golf and other activities.

Included is a noon, March 13 "Absolutely Ayrshires" convention sale of young Ayrshire heifers.

A deadline for registration was not specified in a news release. However, they can be made by contacting Teresa Pomraning, 491 Slab Road, Delta, PA 17314, (717) 862-3280 in the evenings, 1-800-551-6567 during the day.

Reservations need to be made for a Friday, March 12, evening banquet, as well as for a March 13, awards breakfast.

For both meals, tickets are $33 per person. For the evening banquet only, the price is $25. For breakfast only, the cost is $9 per person.

Room reservations need to be made directly with the hotel at 1-800-HOLIDAY. Indicate that the reservations are being made in conjunction with the Ayrshire convention.

Planned activities for the March 12 evening banquet include the crowning of the 1999 Pennsylvania Ayrshire princess and her court, the presentation of the state Junior Ayrshire production awards, and presenting an award recognizing the assoication's outstanding Ayrshire supporter.

State and local dairy promotion royalty are to be on hand for a social hour at 6 p.m., followed by a buffet banquet featuring turkey and london broil.

On March 13, a breakfast buffet is to be followed at 9 a.m. by the organization's annual business meeting.

While the business meeting is being conducted, a quiz bowl team practice is to be held, and animals are to be readied for the sale.

The "Absolutely Ayrshires" spring sale is to feature consignments from across the state, to be sold starting noon by Martin Heaps of Susquehanna Auction Service and Derek Hopkins.

biosecurity.

In addition to speaking about biosecurity and techniques for raising healthy replacement heifers, Tomsche serves as a consultant in raising healthy young dairy cattle for dairy herd replacements, and he also is involved in a four-partner ownership and operation of custom heifer-raising. The business (Stearns Custom Calf) emphasizes producing healthy, disease-free tested dairy replacements, ready to boost the quality of a herd.

To provide perspective on the issue, disease control among domestic animals is an ongoing battle for every species of concern.

Among the traditional domesticated livestock species, the general biosecurity measures and practices used by those who raise dairy cows falls far behind what peers do who raise other livestock species.

For example, it is considered next to impossible, if not criminal, to trespass into a broiler house without first receiving authorization, putting on appropriate clothing (to protect the birds in the house more than to protect the wearer), disinfecting footwear, and following a strict biosecurity routine.

Through experience with infectious diseases, concerns about consumer confidence, and demands of other nations regarding agricultural trade, the poultry industry has developed strict research-based, industry wide disease control protocol.

The same is true for many swine facilities, where permission to enter farm lanes is reserved only for those with a need and prior clearance to enter the lane.

Some in the dairy industry do practice some biosecurity measures, such as washing footwear completely before leaving a farm, taking pains to not contaminate the boots or other equipment before it is loaded onto a vehicle for a trip to the next farm on the circuit.

This is practiced by artificial insemination technicians and others whose regular business demands they travel from dairy farm to dairy farm.

In comparison, among the recommendations for many poultry operations is the advice to wash down vehicles before they enter the lane to the farm, and to wash them again before they leave.

That doesn't typically happen on a dairy farm.

However, should it be discovered or even widely perceived that an infectious disease of dairy cattle can infect humans, it can be expected that many dairy farms will face either adopting similarly strict biosecurity measures or going out of business.

While many tour groups and open house functions at dairy farms make visitors don disposable boots during the visit, most dairy farms operate without siginficant or meaningful biosecurity measures.

It's common for a visitor to walk into a barn looking for a dairy farmer. That visitor could be carrying enough contamination to infect a herd and cause years of profit-draining, difficult to detect subclinical disease.

Tomsche said that he has been involved in the business of raising replacement heifers for years, but the last two years with Stearns Custom Calf has been focused on specializing within that segment of the dairy industry.

Surveys of dairy farmers revealed that the top characteristic sought in a replacement heifer was health.

However, the greater part of the industry does not follow research-based recommendations for disease prevention and providing calves with the maximum immune system protection, such making sure the calf gets 4 quarts of quality colostrum within the first several hours of birth and is separated as soon as possible from the dam.

The disparity between what is desired and what is practiced has provided an opportunity for raising replacement healthy, disease-free tested heifers profitably.

Such animals can be expected to last longer in the herd and have a better opportunity for being a profitable animal.

The Stearns custom operation developed a working relationship with specific dairies who supply calves.

The birthing and immediate care of the calves is done by an established protocol at the insistence of Stearns, whose staff picks up the calves when they are 2-days-old.

The calves are kept isolated from each other and older animals. They are tested, vaccinated properly, and later, dehorned properly, etc. — everything is done to maximize the discovery and prevention of infectious diseases in these calves, and ensure that aren't already infected from the source farm.

The heifers are bred accordingly, and, when ready to freshen, are made available for sale back to the operation that supplied and sold the calf to Stearns.

Tomsche said that while dairymen say that what they most want in a 2-year-old springing or fresh replacement heifer is health, many allow the cost of purchase to be the final determinant in what animals they get.

"The things that matter most must never be at the mercey of things that matter least," Tomsche said, citing quoted material.

Under a heifer quality assurance program, Stearns typically sells heifers back to the original farm, or to others, at $1,300 and additional costs for some of the treatments.

Generally, dairymen buying replacement heifers from unknown husbandry backgrounds and unknown exposure to disease frequently pay about $1,100 or less per animal.

But what they purchase is not a less-expensive animal, but the most expensive, according to Tomsche. One infected animal can ultimately destroy the value of a herd, or cause years of subpotential production because of underlying and undiagnosed diseases.

By paying a slightly higher amount for a quality assured animal, the purchaser can rest easier having an accurate paper trail behind each animal that shows animal identification, test results, breeding, feeding, etc.

The Stearns Custom Calf business expanded into offering 2-year-old heifers that have been raised to be free of specific diseases. The concept animal is a "quality assured replacement heifer."

The dairy operator who purchases such a heifer can, of course, practice poor husbandry and biosecurity and infect that animal and cause poor performance.

But, according to Tomsche, the dairy producer who follows sound biosecurity practices and works with their own calves in such a manner, or develops an alliance with an operation as Stearns Custom Calf, can expect to prevent unnecessary risk and avoid unnecessary losses in production and high-cost health care in older animals.

Tomsche said he tests and culls calves and heifers for disease reasons, which is far less expensive that feeding the animal for two years and then discovering an underlying health problem and have her leave the milking herd when she still hasn't made enough milk to pay for the investment.

From a business standpoint, Tomsche said, it makes much more sense to spend a little bit more on purchasing or caring for beginning animals in order to prevent spending a lot or losing a lot of money on older animals.

While he said the business is a constantly changing work because of constant scrutinization, self critique and modifications of protocols and standard operating procedures, after working with heifers in his veterinary consulting practice, he concluded there are essentially nine parts to an effective disease prevention program.

His list of nine starts with establishing a working relationship with a veterinarian.

Tomsche is a veterinarian in a 16-vet practice and he said that Stearns Custom Calf is the largest customer of the veterinary practice's diagnostic lab referrals. Every animal that dies is given a necropsy, or a post-morten examination.

The findings and results of the examination into the cause of mined a manual totalling 1,050 pages and managed to come up with a simple, working definition of forage quality: "low fiber, high protein, and tasting good," he said.

To do that, producers have to understand the reproductive growth of the forage and how to maintain that growth for optimum quality.

For many producers, using an intensive rotational grazing system can be more cost-effective when producing milk than when raising finishing calves or managing feeders.

But to obtain maximum forage quality, improve gain efficiency in the cattle, and boost milk production in the dairy herd, what happens in the paddocks between April 1 and May 15 can spell success or doom for getting good pasture quality.

That time period "will dictate what we'll have in terms of quality the rest of the year," he said.

The key is to run short grazing periods with high stock density to manage the forage grazed. Those first six weeks of intense management is important, grazing them hard enough to keep them from stemming but not too hard that they can't recover.

And cool season grasses can be grazed through the season.

"Cool season grasses are not low quality in the summertime unless you allow them to stem," Gerrish noted.

Time is critical when determining how to manage forage quality. Manage the pastures for animal intake needs.

Many grasses need to be maintained before extensive leaf, and eventually buds, appear on them. The closer to the bud and bloom stage, the less forage quality of the plant. The more the plant matures, and the longer the season stretches on, the more forage quality declines.

Legumes will provide higher quality forages overall than grasses, though producers shouldn't leave out the potential for warm-season grasses in a drought. And weeds have their forage potential, to some extent, especially under rough drought conditions.

"My favorite warm season weed is crabgrass," noted Gerrish.

But coming up with a definition of "weed" can be difficult, since some of the broadleaves and grass weeds have forage merit. The question producers need to ask themselves: is the weed displacing productive forage? But under drought conditions, it would help having a legume.

In Missouri, Gerrish noted that red clover, which can withstand drought because of its deeper root over white clover, is interseeded in places at about six pounds per acre. Clover is regularly broadcast as frost seed after the last snow and proves to be a high-quality legume and one of the most cost-efficient ways to boost forage quality in existing pasture stands.

The additional value of the clover component in the forage can add up to $8-$9 of real value every year. It can prove to be "one of the best paybacks on the dollar in the beef cow/calf feeding business, just by overseeding it," Gerrish said.

Improving Stands

Wednesday afternoon Gerrish spoke about ways to improve pasture stands.

There are no simple solutions to dealing with problem pastures, according to the University of Missouri grazing specialist and grazier. "You need to take a systematic approach to the problems and try to correct several of these factors," he said.

In many cases, simply spreading nitrogen down is a quick, easy, but ultimately lost payoff for turning the quality of forages around. What producers need to do is soil test and see if soil pH using lime or bringing phosphorous levels to optimum levels can be done cost-effectively.

However, in many cases, the animal returns most of the nutrients to the land. Often those nutrients are displaced in shady areas, under trees, or near water sources. So managing that distribution of manure is key.

Gerrish noted that a 1,100-pound beef cow puts out about $100 pounds of nitrogen, phosphorous, and potassium per year.

About two-thirds of that is dropped near a water trough or a shade tree — nonproductive areas of a grazing operation.

Gerrish resumed speaking about improving pasture quality through interseeding legumes. But when doing so, producers need to select a legume that fits the soil environment and "slowly build up the fertilization over time," Gerrish said, "in small increments over a long period."

To do so, control competition growth by grazing, clipping, burning, tillage, or by chemical methods. Interseed legumes, frost seeding effectively, using broadcast and harrow, or no-till drill. "Hoof and tooth" methods, using cattle to tramp seed in, can take too long.

Manage grazing through the application of the proper stocking rate, provide a rest period so the plants can recover, and don't graze too short or too late in the fall. Gerrish noted that he stops grazing 30-40 days before frost.

For legume interseeding, spring works better. For grass, late summer interseeding is best.

Economic Outlook

The trend in agribusiness in the next several years, according to Steve Ford, associate professor of ag economics at Penn State, is toward "clusters" — huge agribusiness linkups that will create "ID-preserved products" for consumers.

Ford said that in the future, farmers won't be working for themselves anymore. They will be working for these clusters.

Niche marketing will work for some, but finding selective markets will create only small opportunities for farmers and those opportunities will "fill quickly," Ford said.

Many farms continue to operate because of the existence of cheap feed. But how long can that last, and how will graziers be able to adapt?

Ford noted that the low-cost producers will be "better able to withstand the shocks to the industry than their confined livestock competitors." Trouble is, as the larger crop industry moves to genetically enhanced and bio-engineered corn and soybeans for animal and human consumption, those growing forages aren't receiving technological benefits because of a lack of university and industry research. The reason? Corn and soybeans get sold a lot more than forage seed.

Of the amount scientists receive for research nationwide, only about 5.5 percent of those dollars go to forages. Cereal crops get the most.

Technology must be developed to benefit graziers as much as their competitors. But to do so, graziers must rethink their position in the marketplace.

"Stop thinking of yourself as just marketing a commodity," Ford said, and start finding ways to "retain customers or consumer value." He challenged the producers to aggressively pursue new use opportunities to gain economic advantage.

More information from the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference, sponsored by the Penn State Grazing Research and Education Center and the Pennsylvania Forge and Grassland Council (PFGC), will be published in the next issue of the PFGC Foraging Around, a section of Lancaster Farming, scheduled April 17.

PFGC Honors Graziers, Industry Members At Annual Banquet

ANDY ANDREWS

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — Forage producers, graziers, and agri-industry representatives were honored Wednesday evening here at the Holiday Inn during the 39th Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC).

The PFGC Special Award, the highest recognition given by PFGC, was presented to Dr. Larry Muller of the Dairy and Animal Science Department at Penn State.

The award, presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution direction to the PFGC and to the state's forage and livestock industry, honors Muller for his contribution to quality forage in the dairy ration. Muller has secured funding and coordinated the Regionally Based Professional Development Program for Grazing Systems Management Program. This program, according to Dr. Marvin Hall, Penn State forage specialist, provided in-depth grazing and pasture training for industry and agency employees throughout Pennsylvania and the Northeast.

"Dr. Muller was also instrumental in establishing the Grazing Research and Education Center at Penn State," noted Hall. "This center, along with PFGC, assists in planning and sponsoring the Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference each year."

The Conservation Award recipient is Gary Stockum of the Washington Conservation District. Stockum has been active in providing opportunities for the residents of Washington County to learn about uses of forages and grazing management through the DEP-funded "Project Grass" program, according to Hall.

"Gary tries to emphasize the role forages can play in proper conservation practices," said Hall. "Although Mr. Stockum discusses grazing management with many landowners on a one-to-one basis, the educational opportunities of Project Grass also provide an opportunity for larger educational experiences such as field days and pasture management meetings on farms throughout southeast Pennsylvania."

The field days and meetings are supplemented with presentations on a variety of related topics presented by farmers, businesses, lending agencies, and government agencies.

Stockum's involvement in Project Grass has brought together many diverse groups and organizations and stimulated better cooperation toward the goal of conservation farming.

The Conservation Farmer Award recipients are Lewis and Harold Welch, who have implemented numerous conservation practices on their dairy in Wayne County. They have incorporated intensive grazing into their forage system to maximize permanent ground cover and minimize erosion.

The Welches have also installed a liquid manure pond so that they can store manure until the soil conditions are suitable for application. They have been very cooperative with their cooperative extension and soil conservation offices by hosting field days and tours of their farm and conservation practices.

Outstanding Pasture Producer awards were presented to those producers who exemplify progressive, industry recognized methods of grazing and forage production on their farms. Outstanding Pasture Producer Award winners include:

• George Kepple, Armstrong County. Kepple owns and operates the premiere rotation grazing system in Armstrong County, according to Hall. Kepple developed and implemented the grazing system after extensively reading about and observing other rotational grazing systems. He is always willing to host field days on his farm and take time to share his ideas with other farmers. He recently spoke to the Armstrong Conservation District and the Farm Service Agency on the benefits of rotational grazing. An Armstrong County district attorney, Kepple's "dedication to rotational grazing and environmental protection along with his willingness to help other farmers makes George Kepple deserving of the award," noted Hall.

• Greg and Deb Farr, Columbia County. The Farrs operate a rotational grazed cow/calf herd. Their grazing operation has evolved over time into an exceptional example of outstanding grazing, noted Hall. The changes in their grazing system have come from their involvement in educational programs as both students and teachers and research and demonstration projects on their farm. Some of the projects include pasture accumulation rates, alternative pasture species, and altering rotation periods for optimum production. The Farrs have also hosted educational meetings and field days on their farm.

• Titus Martin, Franklin County. Martin milks 90 cows on his rotational grazed farm in Franklin County. Martin began converting his 145-acre farm over to pastures and rotational grazing in 1992. It has been a continual process for Titus, said Hall, as he learns new things and experiments with them on his farm before he adopts them. Martin turns the cows into a new paddock after each milking. He has a herd average of more than 19,000 pounds per year. Martin has stabilized the cattle laneways to minimize erosion and to make it easier for the cows going to and coming from the pastures. Martin was instrumental in starting and continues to be a driving force in the Franklin County Graziers group. He is actively involved in many farm organizations and is a strong advocate of grazing in Pennsylvania, Hall said.

• Duane and June Hertzler, Perry County. The Hertzlers milk 150 Holsteins on their 320-acre farm. Prior to 1994, they grew corn and alfalfa on all their cropland, plus 400-500 acres of rented land. In 1994, they decided to go into intensive grazing. Since then they have converted all of the land (275 acres) to intensive grazing. A few of the changes they have made since converting are installed shale laneways, a portable water system to provide water in all paddocks, fenced streams, installed cattle crossings, and increase use of movable polywire fence for improved management of pastures and cows. "Duane and June have also been very cooperative in hosting field days on their farm, and sharing their experiences with others," Hall said. Duane spoke at this year's conference.

• Lewis and Ben Hawley, Susquehanna County. The Hawleys seasonally milk 75 cows on their 140-acre grazing operation. The cows freshen in the spring to match the pasture season and are milked in a newly constructed double-10 parlor. The Hawleys have implemented numerous practices to improve their pasture and herd management. They continue to focus on optimizing pasture production and utilization to increase animal performance. Their farm recently received the Dairy of Distinction and Conservation Farmer of the Year awards.

In addition, Paul Craig, PFGC president, stepped down. New president is Ed Rits, Honey Grove.

New directors were elected: Rich Adams, New Holland; John Pergosky, New Tripoli; and Matt Sanderson, State College.

Lancaster County Conservation District Announces 48th Banquet Activities

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The board of directors of the Lancaster County Conservation District have announced an invitation to the general public to join them at the 48th annual banquet 6:30 p.m., March 18, at Yoder's Restaurant in New Holland.

The program is to include musical selections from a local barbershop quartet, "Evening Mist," and award presentations.

The awards to be presented are for the outstanding cooperator, building industry, youth conservation school, agency and service.

Tickets are $14 and can be purchased from the District at its office in the Lancaster Farm and Home Center in Lancaster. Call (717) 299-5361 for tickets and more information.

Farmland Preservationists Celebrate 30,000 Preserved Acres

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Farmland preservation leaders in Lancaster County gathered this week on the Greystone Manor Farms in Warwick Township to celebrate achieving the milestone of 30,000 acres of preserved farmland in the county.

The 30,000-acre mark was attained when Lancaster Farmland Trust, a private, non-governmental farmland preservation organization, preserved a 70-acre farm in East Hempfield Township near East Petersburg on March 1.

"This was a very representative farm," said Tom Stouffer, executive director of LFT. "It was preserved immediately prior to being sold to a new farmer, and we're seeing that much more often. For many farmers, it is the right time financially to preserve a farm."

Leaders from the Trust, the Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board and Manheim and Warwick townships, on Monday gathered on Greystone Manor Farms, on the Oregon Pike to commemorate the event. Both preservation groups and both townships contributed funds to preserve 335 acres of the farm.

"this was our largest and most successful collaborative farm preservation project, so we thought it was appropriate to meet here to mark the occasion," said Terry Scheetz, chairman of the Land Preservation Committee of Lancaster Farmland Trust's board of trustees.

The county reached 10,000 acres preserved in June of 1991 and 20,000 acres at the end of 1995.

"We're lucky to have the support of the farmers. They are the ones who make preservation possible," said June Mengel, director of the county Agricultural Preserve Board.

The combination of partnerships and programs has made Lancaster County's preservation efforts one of the most successful in the nation. The county ranks second in the nation in the number of farms preserved.

Lancaster Farmland Trust has seen a marked increase in interest among Amish farmers over the last 3 years, who will not take government payments from the County Agricultural Preserve Board. On the other hand, the County Preserve Board continues to see strong interest among non-Amish farmers, with 160 farmers on a waiting list, representing 15,000 acres.

Tom Stouffer said, "We've been farming in Lancaster County for 250 to 300 years. We've been preserving farms for 18 years and already we've preserved more than 6 percent of the county's 380,000 acres of farmland. This shows that the direction is good and we're helping farmers accomplish something."

Lancaster Farmland Trust is a private, not-for-profit organization actively working to preserve farmland in Lancaster County. Since 1988, the Trust has preserved 96 farms and more than 6,200 acres. The Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board is a publis agency and acts as an advisory board to the county commissioners. The APB has preserved 259 farms and 23,330 acres.

Standing at the Greystone Manor Farms, where the largest farmland preservation effort in Lancaster County has been done to commemorate 30,000 acres of farmland preserved in Lancaster County are, from the left, Bruce Bucher, Warwick Township supervisor; Bill Ebel, Manheim Township commissioner; Terry Scheetz, secretary of the Lancaster Farmland Trust; June Mengel, director of the Agricultural Preserve Board; Paul Thibault, county commissioner; Gene Garber, chairman of the Agricultural Preserve Board; Tom Stouffer, executive director of the Lancaster Farmland Trust; and John Schwartz, president of the Agricultural Preserve Board, as well as director of Lancaster County Extension.

PDA Announces Honeybee Restrictions

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Samuel E. Hayes, Jr. this week announced a quarantine restricting the movement of honeybees into Pennsylvania from four southeastern states because of the presence of small hive beetle, a destructive insect.

"Since the movement of honeybees by man may contribute to the spread of small hive beetle, this is a precautionary step we can take to protect Pennsylvania's bee colonies from the destructive pest," said Secretary Hayes.

Native to South Africa, the small hive beetle Aethina tumida has been detected in beehives in the states of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The quarantine signed by Secretary Hayes prohibits the movement of honeybees into Pennsylvania from any state where small hive beetles are established, unless the bees are certified to be free of beetles and their larvae

Specialists in the Department's Bureau of Plant Industry will conduct periodic surveys throughout Pennsylvania to monitor for presence of the insect

Herd Replacements - Article 38

The goal is to raise or acquire good herd replacements economically

Herd replacements are a major cost of producing milk Like any other costs, they should be held to reasonable levels So, how many heifers do you need to raise?

1 Number needed is affected by

- Heifers removed (died, culled merchandised) from the heifer herd
- Cows removed (died culled, merchandised) from the milking age herd
- Age at first calving
- Expansion needs

2 The impact of these factors on number of heifers to raise is shown in Table 1 Note that 50% more heifers are needed when calving age is 28 months and cull rates are 38%, compared to a 22 month calving age and a 30% cull rate That requires 50% more housing, 50% more feed and 50% more labor All of this amounts to about a $200 increase in replacement cost per cow per year and a $1 00 increase in cost per cwt of milk produced!

Table 1 Number of Replacements Needed per 100 Cows and Costs
(assumes a 10% cull rate of the heifer herd)

1 Formula = no cows x cow cull rate x calving age + 12 x (1 + heifer cull rate)

Raising heifers is costly

1 Raising all your heifer calves and calving them out to "prove" them can be costly
   - The fresh heifer may force another cow out of her stall sooner than you had planned to sell her, just to make room for the fresh heifer That cow may have already paid for her cost to first calving, and has finally reached the profit making stage of her life and her years of peak production Don't move cows out just as they start to reach the profit-making stage of their life, only to absorb an $800 net replacement cost bill to make room for a fresh heifer!
   - Heifers may cost $1200 to raise to calving age (cash costs plus non-cash costs) but they, or the cow they replace, may be worth only $400 when culled from the milking string Perhaps that same heifer could have been sold as a "springer" for $1200 before calving That's an $800 loss in sale value - just for the privilege of freshening the heifer and "proving her"!

2 Keep the best, sell the rest
   - Raising heifers and selling them may not be very profitable either, especially if you can not get much more than what it cost you to raise them
   - Too many calves may lead to overcrowded conditions and stunted heifers

3 Contracting heifers out or buying replacements may be a cost effective option if - -
   - Someone else can do a better job raising heifers, or do it cheaper than you
   - You have inadequate facilities, or a shortage of feed and labor
   - You can use the heifer facilities to house more cows and generate a higher return from your capital investments, your feed and your labor If this can be done, it might be profitable, even if you have to pay a grower more to raise your heifers than what it cost you to do it for yourself
   - You need some better genetics, or some healthier animals to help you overcome a disease situation You can buy the kind of cattle you need

There are some things to be concerned about when contracting heifers
   - Will the grower do a good job with your cattle?
   - Will the grower commingle your heifers with heifers from other farms?
   - What health precautions are taken to prevent the spread of diseases and infections?
   - Are the terms clearly spelled out in a written contract?

QUESTION: What is the proper mixing time when feeding a TMR?

ANSWER: The answer to this question actually varies from farm to farm. We will look at a common sense approach so most farm situations will be covered.

Let us first think about the variation among ingredients in most TMRs.

As a rule, we have what we can consider macro and micro ingredients.

The macros are items fed to cows in pound increments, such as haylage, corn silage, hay, etc.

I think you get the idea.

The micros are those ingredients that are supplied to cows in ounces or fractions of a pound, such as minerals, bicarb, vitamins, etc.

These mircros also hae one common property — they are fine and will easily absorb moisture. This in itself should dictate when to add these portions.

All TMR mixers in today's dairy industry have the ability to mix feeds uniformly if given the opportunity.

When all the parts of the TMR are macro ingredients, there is much less opportunity to not mix properly, and time becomes the determining factor. How long should we mix?

I have this question asked of me at least once each day, as I visit farms.

Following manufacturer's recommendations leaves too many variables unanswered.

The size of the batch, tractor rpm, moisture, order of ingredients, all influence this recommendation.

Twenty years ago, when I mixed my first TMR, I used a bag of red jellybeans to help determine the "how long" question. Since then, I have progressed to a method that is a bit more accurate.

The jelly bean experiment will point out gross under-mixing, but should serve only as the first physical step.

Another step not often thought of is to examine the feed out of the wagon first, against the feed out later, or at the end.

Pay particular attention to color differences. Heavier concentrations of grains tend to make the TMR look light colored.

Comparing moisture differences in the same way can also be helpful.

If you see no variations in the physical evaluation, you can collect proper samples and have them analyzed at the lab. Do this with the help of your feed advisor, as he is trained in proper sample collection.

The micro ingredients that we us in today's dairy diet can present a challenge in providing a uniform ration to our cows. Premixing with concentrated ingredients as a carrier is always the best option from a physical standpoint.

What should we do when we can not premix?

Items that are often used, but not incorporated for some reason in a premix or protein supplement, such as charcoal or probiotics, can be of little use if not all the cows get them.

As a rule, add these ingredients to the part of the TMR that is the driest, finest and most uniform.

Use your mixer to make a premix by adding the micros to feeds like protein supplements, corn meal, high moisture corn, etc.

Adding these types of ingredients to corn silage or very wet haylage will cause them to clump together because of the moisture, and even distribution will never be accomplished, regardless of mixing time.

Overall, answering the question of how long to mix hinges more on common sense than anything else.

I encourage dairymen to look for the right answer on their farm.

I also suggest developing a plan to monitor and evaluate the feed delivery to our cows. Make sure that from feeder to feeder the same things are done.

More importantly, make sure that the diet you feed is the same cow to cow.

As an example, when feeding a single ration diet across a group of animals in similar stages of lactation, the MUN should be very similar and exhibit a very narrow range difference. If not, what is wrong?

Here we are, back to letting the cows evaluate our performance by evaluating theirs.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Corn, No.2y — 2.37 bu., 4.24 cwt.

Wheat, No. 2 — 2.55 bu., 4.26 cwt.

Barley, No. 3 — 1.64 bu., 3.51 cwt.

Oats, No. 2 — 1.45 bu., 4.52 cwt.

Soybeans, No. 1 — 4.64 bu., 7.75 cwt.

Ear Corn — 72.62 ton, 3.63 cwt.

Alfalfa Hay — 97.50 ton, 4.88 cwt.

Mixed Hay — 101.25 ton, 5.06 cwt.

Timothy Hay — 100.00 ton, 5.0 cwt.

Tobacco Auction Moves

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — This week the Pennsylvania Tobacco Marketing Association Auction finished its final sale here at Orlan Industrial Park and has a new home in Leola.

Tobacco is being accepted for auction at a site located on 322 E. Main St., Leola, on the south side of Rt. 23 just east of Farmersville Road. The auction phone number, (717) 355-5336, is the same.

According to Dennis Hess, auction manager, noted the short-term lease on the auction facility in New Holland ran out. The first sale at the new location was conducted Wednesday with a report on prices scheduled this issue.

Hess noted that a buyer is expected to bid on some of the growers' old 1997 crop, if growers are interested in selling. Growers can call Hess at the auction.

The association needs tobacco to sell at the new location. Contact Hess at (717) 355-5336.

Shaping the future with 4-H and FFA.

First Union's Agri-Finance Department is proud to support 4-H and FFA members and programs. We believe preserving the family farm is one of the most effective ways to ensure a betters future for everyone. So First Union is committed to working with young people and supporting their goals.

With guidance and encouragement, they will develop the skills and values they'll need to be successful in farming or wherever their lives take them. And their achievements will benefit us all.

Reasons For Biosecurity Won't Wait For Dairy Industry To Act

death are entered into the Stearns computer records and clients are informed monthly on those results.

"There is no doubt that having ongoing necropsy reports has allowed us to be able to abate problems much earlier than we ever could have before," he said.

Next on the list is establishing and sticking to an effective quarantine area and program.

He said that new arrivals to a farm must be quarantined for 21 days. "Most vaccines require 10 to 14 days to mount a proper immune response, and 21 days is considered the required wait for incoming animals who may be incubating disease."

He said that there should be no contact at all, not even a shared fenceline, between the existing herd and the incoming animals.

Also, he said that sick animals need to isolated from the rest of the herd for 14 days, and that sick pens should be located so that the animals can be observed closely and frequently, but they should not be in a pen where they can pass on a potentially infectious disease.

"Sick animals need additional attention and the sick pen should be located in an area that will accommodate the task of frequent observation and treatment."

A vaccination and parasite control program is essential as well, and requires effort by the farmer and the veterinarian.

"Be advised that the current immune status of your heifer calf will dramatically effect the success or failure of your vaccination program," he said. "Remember also, all the vaccines in the world will not compensate for poor nutrition, poor management practices, or overwhelming exposure to disease organisms."

He said it is imperative to sit down with the vet and determine the diseases of concern for the farm. It can well be different for each farm.

The resultant vaccination and parasite control programs must provide two fundemental functions, he said. "It is essential that these programs pass both the test of good immunology and the test of practicality."

At the calf raising operation, where Tomsche said he currently is co-owner of 6,000 calves, "We have tried to keep the program as simple as possible while ensuring our goals.

"In our hutch farm (where calves are kept in individual hutches), we have all but eliminated the major causes of scours due to the vaccination program we demand of our dairy producer clients," he said.

"Rotavirus, corona virus, E. Coli, salmonella and clostridia infections are a true rarity in our 'wet calves.'

"We insist that the dry cows are vaccinated with two shots of Scour Guard 3K-C. In addition, all the newborn calves are vaccinated with Calf Guard at birth," he said. He added that, in cases where there is some deviation of practice, additional measures are taken to ensure proper treatment.

"Animals vaccinated prior to three months of age must be boostered again due to the possibility of matrenal colostral interference (the effects of the antibodies passed on through the colostrum that can interfere with the desired immune response from the vaccination).

"We use only modified live vaccines for BVD, IBR, and BRSV protection. The recent release of Pasturella haemolytica vaccines has also eliminated a frequent cause of both death and illness."

According to Tomsche, animals are only vaccinated when they are as free of stress as possible. "In fact, we attempt to vaccinate prior to anticipated stress, such as weaning or moving into larger comingled groups."

Another aspect of disease control is "metaphylaxis," he described as "... a new term for an age-old plan of mass or systematic treatment," he said.

While Tomsche said that vaccinations should be given when the animals are stress-free, he said that the use of blanket treatments should be timed to coincide with otherwise stressful situations, such as weaning, transporting or if there are early signs of a disease affecting the group.

At the Custom Calf operation, Tomsche said calves are treated with AS-700 for five days after weaning.

Another part of a good biosecurity program is the use of testing for disease and culling. He said it is a good tool but underused. Furthermore, the associated costs of the program must ultimately be negotiated between being absorbed by the buyer or seller.

Though limited by time during his actual presentation, in his published work, Tomsche describes the use of group movement of animals from housing area to housing area, instead of moving animal by animal into occupied housing.

For example, at a regular family dairy operation, newly born animals should be moved to calf hutches until weaned, and then to small group holding pens, and then into heifer facilities.

Some farms don't practice grouping well. Others, because of facilities limitations, don't necessarily provide proper groupings.

In many instances, pens are not cleaned and disinfected between groupings of animals, and animal groups thus are able to come into physical contact with manure or other potential disease-carrying materials from other groups of animals. Inadequate isolation between groups of animals allows potential contamination to pass between animals through a gate or fencing.

When it comes to controlling the spread of disease, these types of situations don't.

Tomsche said the more current poultry industry practices — all in, all out — can serve as a model for the dairy industry.

In theory, disease outbreaks in dairy animals can be better controlled if groups of animals are taken by appropriate age class, isolated when young, grouped in small groups next, gradually increasing group size until heifers are prepared for freshening and tie or free stalls; and the age-classes of animals are kept physically separated (including preventing manure equipment, other equipment and possible spreads of manure from one age group into the next).

If disease breaks out in one group, the other groups aren't immediately suspect as much, and the chances of controlling an outbreak before it spreads onto the entire farm or onto other farms are greater. The disease can be better isolated and animals treated, without involving the entire herd and the entire operation.

With a veterinarian's knowledge of diseases, transmission vectors and barriers, it should be possible to come up with some possible solutions for designing disease control practices and modifications to a specific dairy farming operation.

Without the vet's help, and continuing to operate in complete disregard to the spread of disease, continuing to allow the cost of vaccinations determine the risk to the entire dairy herd, continuing to allow mixed-age young animal groupings, and continuing to practice housing cleaning schedules based on the build-up of waste rather than based on housing use by animal or groups and disease control, the entire herd and the entire farming operation is at risk.

Strong and effective rodent and pest control practices need to be in place, as well. Pests and rodents are carriers (vectors) of diseases. Disease can be spread not only by contaminated humans and farm animals (even cats and dogs), and the tools and equipment, but by the pest rodents and birds.

Furthermore, a good sanitation and manure management program are essential to controlling disease. "As a veterinarian, I subscribe to the 'germ theory,'" he said.

"The axiom states, 'If you expose an animal to enough pathogens it will eventually succumb to the disease, despite the number of vaccinations administered.' There is no hope of long term success if this issue is not adhered to."

In fact, he said he doesn't understand the thinking, or the apparent lack of thinking, involved when a farm is built or expanded and manure handling is given secondary concern.

According to Tomsche, especially with today's environmental regulatory demands and food-safety issues, the first concern of a dairy facility — whether for calf-raising, heifer raising or milking herd — should be to consider how the manure is to be handled. The design of the housing facilities should come next and be designed to complement the manure handling strategy, not the other way around.

Finally, while he said that every dairy operation ought to be trending toward a closed herd, when there are purchases to be made, the working relationship with a veterinarian can have additional value.

The buyer can ask his veterinarian to directly contact the veterinarian who works with the herd from where the purchased animals are to come to find out about potential disease risks and what programs are in place.

Tomsche said that veterinarians are held to a standard whereby if the information provided each other is misleading it can be better resolved, in court if need be.

That provides a relief from the more typical situation whereby two farmers, unhappy with the outcome of a transaction involving diseased animals, are unable to prove their side in a dispute over the spread of disease, or what if any misleading statements may have been made during negotiations.

In discussing some of the specifications of his business's quality assured heifer program, Tomsche re-emphasized the need for biosecurity in the dairy industry, and how behind the industry is, when compared to the poultry and swine industry.

What those industries have done should serve as an example of what needs to be done in the dairy industry, he said.

He strongly suggested that, if individual producers don't adopt such practices, they may well find in short time that outside demands will require them to exit the industry or restructure to conform.

Some states and federal government have developed and can be expected to develop disease-free status programs for dairy farming operations. Those who ignore the opportunity to participate in such programs (such as Pennsylvania's Johne's program) may well find themselves and their entire business in jeopardy.

(With regard to Johne's, he said that it is possible to get rid of the disease from a farm, although it takes years of testing and culling under a tight biosecurity program. Anything less may reduce the clinical signs of the disease, but won't get rid of the disease or its subclinical profit-stealing effects.)

Furthermore, he said that those who raise and sell calves also can expect to assume some legal liability for the health of those animals, especially if they don't have a veterinarian-approved or designed protective program.

According to Tomsche, a fairly recent lawsuit that was settled out of court resulted from an incident where an infectious disease was introduced into a herd through a heifer and resulted in the infection and culling of a high quality maternal line of animals.

The farm owner who unknowingly purchased the infected animal sued the supplier of the animal because the animal was infected.

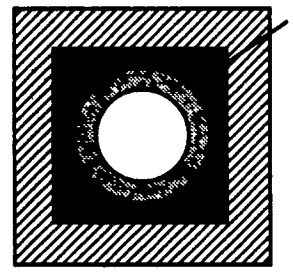
... For New Construction Why Not Examine The "Chimtek Difference."



Chimtek Inner Liners are madeof volcanic pumice and high-tempertature refractory cements, Its round shape provides even temperature inside flue and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gasses. The volcanic pumice in Chimteck liners adds considerable insulating value.

All three chimneyliner systems disbritubed by DS Machine Shop are of super design, super performance, and super value. With all their advantages these chimney systems often cost no more than ordinary chimneys. Write or call us for more specific liner information.

Cow Comfort Requires Constant Attention

NEWARK, Del. – As we move into the winter season, cows will be spending more time on the concrete areas of the barnyard than on the more comfortable pasture.

For this reason, it is even more important to make sure that your cows are comfortable in the areas where they lie down and walk around.

When cows are in uncomfortable surroundings, these conditions will be reflected in problems with feet, legs, hocks, knees, udders, even reproductive efficiency, and thus cause expenses in treatments and reduced production, thus reduced income on the dairy farm.

This is as true for loose housing with free stall management as it is for traditional barns with stabled cows in stanchions or on chains.

In either case, even when there is snow on the ground, cows should go out and get off the concrete as much as possible every day

Cows enjoy snow on the ground as long as it is not raining; they do not mind dry cold. When it is wet and icy, cows get tense and insecure about walking around.

To ensure good footing for cows, put down sand and provide floor grooving to prevent cows from falling "spread eagle" on slippery ground

Sharp-edge gravel and the large stony kind are, however, unsuitable, because cows can injure the tender parts between their hooves and their heels, and lame cows aren't productive.

Cow comfort begins with good bedding, a difficult concept to comprehend for even the better farmers.

Lack of plentiful bedding means sore hocks and knees, udder infections, manure-dirty flanks and udders, lameness, even reduced quality of milk and loss of production income.

It also means that management and the hired labor are not checking and improving daily the condition of bedding in each stall and under each cow.

When I milked at home and later as herdsman, the last task before going to bed at 9 30 p.m. was to go to the barn once more and rearrange the bedding under each cow in the stable.

I removed the manure into the gutter, and checked the general condition of each cow.

I did this again the first thing in the morning, when we started milking at 5 a.m. Then, after milking was done, the cows were released from their stanchions and let out to pasture, where they not only grazed, but lay dow . comfortably on grassy ground.

This provided the best cow comfort and health, as well as kept the cows clean.

Then, in th 1960s came the new invention; loose-housing management with free stalls

The number-one promotion for the new system was that it would require much less labor for bedding the cows.

Too many farmers have taken this literally, checking the stalls of their cows maybe once a month instead of several times daily.

As a result, the concept of cow comfort disappeared (or was ignored) until trouble appeared, followed by a general awakening that good cow behavior and cow comfort must be observed and provided. Otherwise, milk production and income will suffer.

This same situation has been noted often in recent years on dairy goat farms, except that goats are much more surefooted than cows But they also get sore feet, legs, hocks, knees and infected udders like cows, when they are not provided with good bedding Exposure to concrete must be kept to a minimum daily

An interesting article in the Michigan Dairy Review (vol. 3, #3, Aug. 1998) refers to the "Dairy Free Stall Housing and Equipment" publication from the Michigan Sate University Plan Service, East Lansing, MI 48824-1323, which discusses how free stall comfort impacts on a cow's performance

Actually, it should cover not only cows, but the comfort of calves, heifers and dairy goats as well for optimizing farm income.

One objective of free stall design is to provide a clean and dry place for the cow's udder, not just for the cow!

To encourage use of free stalls, farmers must make sure cows are comfortable and that it's easy for the cows to lie down and get up again. Cows let the farmer know when the free stalls are uncomfortable, either because of faulty design or negligent labor.

Here are some hints:

•Are more than 10 percent of cows standing in free stalls instead of lying down at certain times?

•Are cows lying backwards in the free stalls?

•Are some cows frequently sitting like dogs in the free stalls?

•Are some cows not using the free stalls at all?

•Is there a lot of manure or urine in the free stalls?

•Are fewer than half of the cows lying down in free stalls within 2 hours after feeding?

A simple way for you to check up on existing design or maintenance problems is to get down on your knees and feel what the cows feel at that level; check for temperature, draft, cold floor, hardness of concrete and dirt.

If your pants are dirty and your knees hurt, then you know how cows feel and how their hocks, knees and udders hurt.

Also, if the hairs are worn off on the hocks and knees of your cows and goats and the skin is bare--even pink and swollen--then this is telling of a real problem to your animal's comfort.

Cows like to lie down facing

Pasture Walk At Landis Farm

KIRKWOOD (Lancaster Co) – A pasture walk and information meeting has been scheduled for Wednesday, March 10, at the Arden Landis farm, Kirkwook, located along Puseyville Road. Starting time is 10 a.m.

Featured speaker is Doug Gunnick from Minnesota. Doug is a former county agent and farm management instructor. He now farms and does consulting work in sustainable and profitable agriculture, sourcing low cost New Zealand ideas such as forage and pasture management, fertilizer recommendations and feeding cows.

Doug was a speaker at the 1999 ACRES conference and writes in Stockmen Grass Farmer and Pasture Walk.

130 Dairy Youth Attend All-Breeds Convention

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — More than 130 youth and adults participated in the recent 4th annual All-Breeds Junior Dairy Convention in State College.

Sponsored by the Penn State Dairy Sciences Club, youth representing the six recognized dairy breeds and 20 Pennsylvania counties convened for three days in State College to participate.

The first evening of the convention included a socializing program where youth made barnyard animals out of newspapers, followed by a dance.

The next day, younger youth toured the Penn State Creamery, made ice cream by rolling cans on the floor, and surfed the World Wide Web.

For the intermediate-aged youth, Dr. Judd Heinrichs taught a three-part nutrition workshop that included calculating ration dry matter, determining forage particle size, and working with cannulated cows.

Senior workshops were held at the Dairy Breeding Research Center and were presented by Dr. Michael O'Conner.

Youth learned about in-vitro fertilization and worked with female bovine reproductive tracts.

Meanwhile, parents who accompanied youth toured the Penn State mushroom farm and surfed the web.

After lunch, seven people representing different careers convened to form an agricultural careers panel.

Following the panel discussions, the youth divided into two groups.

Parents and older youth were given a presentation on the marketing and breeding of dairy cattle. During the program, Jim Trotter of the Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeders Association, Kirk Sattazahn of Sire Power, David Lentz of Holtein USA provided tips on selecting a calf and discussed the apparent possibilities for the future dairy industry.

Younger youth participated in a fun-oriented workshop with Cindy Weimer who helped them make milk mustaches and then had them take photographs with their mustache. They also received a "Milk, Where's You Mustache?" photo holder.

That evening's activities featured a mock sale and dance with Kirk Sattazahn serving this time as a disc jockey.

The convention ended with a Sunday brunch and featured speaker John Rogers of Belleville, who presented a motivational speach, "If it is to be, it is up to me."

Cow Comfort

uphill slightly. Thus, the free stall should have about 1/2-inch slope per foot, which equals a 4 percent, or a 3 1/2-rise in a 7-foot stall.

Sand bedding should be at least 6 inch deep, with the same degree of slope.

The dimensions for the free stall recommended by the Michigan bulletin are 44 to 48 inches wide for mature Holstein cows A brisket board and neck rail should be 66 inches from the curb and the neck rail should be 40 inch above the bed. For other species and sizes of animals, the bulletin gives appropriate dimensions

Cows also need comfortable space to get back up; otherwise they will remember and therefore then avoid the free stall.

A "loop" with a "side-lunge" design (Michigan or New York Style), or an extra foot of stall length, or an open front help

If loops and neck rails are mounted too low, especially after new levels of bedding, this causes problems for cows getting up easily

Too much space is not desirable, because it induces cows to turn around in the stall, which can cause serious problems

There are other problems that can be noticed

•Damp chopped straw, damp sawdust and silt laden sand becomes compacted, hard, mounded and uncomfortable Frequent stirring and leveling is needed

•Plain concrete floors in free stalls are totally undesirable So are hard rubber mattresses Both must have plenty of soft bedding on top, several inch deep, to provide the necessary cow comfort

•Lumpy mattresses because of shredded rubber underneath are very uncomfortable Cows have a way of working deep lumps into any bedded are because of their weight and moving while lying down

A free stall is seldom a management design that does not require frequent checking, correcting and bedding rearrangement Cow comfort must be your goal or a price will be paid for laziness and neglect Maximizing cow and goat comfort on the dairy farm really pays off

PA DHIA Annual Member Management Report

DAVE SLUSSER
General Manager

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — It has been an honor serving as the General Manager of PA DHIA for the last five years. This report includes what has been accomplished during the last five years, plans for 1999, and projections into the 21st century. PA DHIA has completed the third straight year of profit and introduced a 1999 budget that requires no fee adjustments. PA DHIA is very proud of this record, however five years ago it was a different story.

In 1994, PA DHIA had a major operating loss, and along with National DHIA, N.E. DHIA, Vermont DHIA, and Ohio DHIA, was involved in a major lawsuit. For the next 3-1/2 years, the association paid out over $1,500,000.00 in debt reduction and legal fees, however during that same period of time, new services and accomplishments occurred. The association's innocence was vindicated, however not before accumulating large legal bills.

Those services are as follows:

1) developed a strategic long range plan

2) improved accuracy of usable records from 75% to 83% (the highest in the nation)

3) introduced MUN testing, having tested to date 1.5 million cows

4) supported MUN with educational meetings

5) became first DHIA to transfer data to farmers and consultants through the Internet

6) introduced Performance Economics to DHIA

7) became the national leader in innovative test plans

This past year was no exception to the forward progress. A new cost reduced owner sampler program, which recorded a 45% growth during the year was introduced. Other accomplishments were:

1) a statewide membership marketing program with David Bigelow

2) PA DHIA farm consulting service with George Cudoc

3) partnering truck routes with milk cooperatives, partnering in field service with AI cooperatives

4) a new nitrogen management report

5) new laser printers for farm management reports

6) development of Heifer 98, the first Windows 95, 98, NT farm management software

7) uniformity in MUN testing throughout the US DHIA system

8) restoration of unity in National DHIA

9) provided a field certification survey for California DHIA

10) began development of other outside sources of income

None of these accomplishments could have been made without the hard work and loyalty of members and employees. This spirit will be the driving force that propels the association into the next century.

PA DHIA is not a cost to dairymen but an investment If you are not getting a 200% return on your investment, please contact the association DHIA can improve your profits. George Cudoc is a valuable help in the utilization of PA DHIA records. The association has received positive comments from members using his service. Dairymen with 3 consecutive MUN tests with PA DHIA are entitled to a free farm visit from George upon request. This service will improve farm profitability through improved milk quality and production efficiency. DHIA supports its membership with accuracy of information.

Plans for 1999 are more exciting. Windows 95, 98 NT labAnalyst program has just been released. This powerful program is designed for users of lab test analysis, SAP herds and consultants. The cost of this program is $30. The MUN report, somatic cell report and many other reports are just as they appear on hardcopy reports. The herd management program, Barn Owl 2000—now in test herds— will include Heifer 98 and the labAnalyst program. These powerful programs are developed by this farmer-owned and controlled PA DHIA Most of these accomplishments would not have been possible without have a Data Processing Center and programmers onsite.

Other activities being planned for 1999 are:

1) converting entirely to PC processing

2) researching possibilities of connecting Barn Owl 200 to a financial package

3) performing our own meter repair and certification of meters

4) performing new lab services

5) seeking further partnering including breed associations

6) continuing our attempt to bring National DHIA together

The next century will bring new excitement and challenges to Pennsylvania and PA DHIA Farm management information technology will be the future with large and small herds alike. Data entry services and sample collection will be important roles for field service. The most powerful computer programs in the world are worthless without high quality data entry. PA DHIA will project more information into the future, giving projected calving intervals, days open and cash flow. PA DHIA will provide American farm management technology, information technology, and processing throughout the world via the Internet With this information highway we will increase the opportunity for members to market genetics

PA DHIA has challenged the status quo in American DHIAs and now are challenging it throughout the world Dairy farmers can govern and control their cooperative and their own destinies Farmer to farmer, the world can be improved one cow at a time

Annual Meeting

Michele Reasner of Cumberland County received the third place award for herd management in the Jersey breed.

from Bucks County, and his wife Kay nominated Wurster for this award While managing the family farm in Oxhill, Wurster provided hands-on training to dairy science students from Delaware Valley College and Penn State As a Master Farmer (1984) who had a 20,000-lb herd average and later a Chester County extension agent, he unselfishly shared his knowledge with fellow farmers He also served as president of his local school board, extension leader and board member in Bucks County Extension Service, and member of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau

Foot Health

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Poor cow foot health cost dairy producers profits. As dairy producers increase production and herd size, foot problems often increase as well. And cows pushed for optimum production will spend more time on their feet at the feed bunk and in the parlor, opening the possibility for foot problems.

To increase dairy producers' and industry professionals' understanding of the dynamic issues associated with foot health, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Monsanto Dairy Business, and the Zinpro Corporation are sponsoring a program called, "Improving the Dynamics of Foot Health at Your Dairy to Maximize Profits."

This one-day seminar on dairy cow foot health will be held in three locations in Pennsylvania on March 23-25. Presenters include Dr. Jan Shearer, Dr. Gabriella Varga, Dr. Chris Canale, and Dan McFarland.

Shearer, from the University of Florida, will discuss the type of foot problems commonly encountered in dairy herds and how to prevent many of them. This presentation will also relate foot problems to hot weather management as dairy cow foot problems always increase during periods of heat stress.

Varga with Penn State University and Canale with Agway will be team teaching a segment on rumen health and function as they relate it to lamintis in dairy cattle. Learn how nutrition can prevent certain foot problems and influence recovery.

Dan McFarland, ag engineer with Penn State Extension, will talk about dairy facilities and their impact on foot health. McFarland has traveled extensively in the United States, making this presentation to dairy producers. He is considered an expert in dairy facility design and management.

Dairy producers, veterinarians, nutritionists, consultants, hoof trimmers and contractors are all invited to attend this seminar. Please choose the location most convenient for you.

- Tuesday, March 23, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland.
- Wednesday, March 24, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Penn State's Meat Lab Auditorium, State College.
- Thursday, March 25, 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Lighthouse Restaurant, Chambersburg.

A fee of $10 per person will be charged. Checks should be made payable to Extension Special Fund, and mailed by March 18 to: Adams County Extension, 1135 Chambersburg Rd., Gettysburg, PA 17325.

More information can be obtained by calling (717) 334-6271 or (717) 624-4525.

Dairy Farmers Recognized at Cooperative Meeting

WAKEFIELD (Lancaster Co.) — Members of Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative were honored at their local district meeting on Tuesday, December 8 at the Fulton Grange Hall. The following milk producers were recognized for reaching the highest quality milk level every month from August 1, 1997 through July 31, 1998:

• William and Wanda Creeger, Rising Sun, Md.

• David Gerhart, New Providence, Pa

• Mason's Chrome View Limited, Nottingham, Pa.

For this achievement, they received several "Quality Producer" awards including a farm sign, embroidered shirts, and an engraved plaque, along with a $50 credit at the cooperative's farm supply and equipment warehouse

For producing premium milk for 11 of the 12 months, the following winners received embroidered "Quality Producer" shirts, a framed certificate and a $50 credit at the cooperative warehouse.

• Steve Carson, Rising Sun, Md

• Isaac and Barbara Fisher, Peach Bottom

• John and Lydia King, Lancaster

• Nelson and Velma Nolt, Peach Bottom.

• Leon and Donna Ziegler, Villa Pine Farm, Myerstown.

Re-elected to a fifth three-year term on Maryland and Virginia's Board of Directors was R. Steven Graybeal, Peach Bottom. From 1980-83 and since 1990, he has attended monthly cooperative board meetings and currently serves as first vice president. Graybeal represents 95 dairy farmers in Cecil County, Maryland and Chester, Lancaster and Lebanon counties in Pennsylvania

As one of 23 fall district meetings in the middle Atlantic area, this local meeting attracted over 70 dairy farmers. Highlighting the meeting was a cooperative and market update by general manager George Walgrove and assistant general manager Robert Shore Cooperative earnings for 1997 were 81 cents for every 100 pounds of milk produced in 1997, 93 percent, or 75 cents, was paid to members in cash This figure includes over-order premiums, patronage dividends, profits from raw milk sales, and quality premiums Milk, cheese and butter price trends, along with cooperative news and strategic planning were also reported.

Presentations were also made by president Jack Hardesty, a milk producer from Berryville, Va , and Leonard Greek, Maryland and Virginia's Outstanding Young Cooperator (YC) and a dairy farmer from Delta, who discussed the benefits of the YC Program, an educational and leadership development program for young members.

Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative Association, headquartered in Reston, Va., is a milk marketing and processing cooperative that markets milk for over 1,160 dairy farmers throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Delaware. The cooperative includes Marva Maid, a milk processing division in Newport News, Va , a manufacturing division in Laurel, Md , and an equipment division in Frederick, Md

Training Courses For Dairy Employees

COLUMBUS, Ohio — As Ohio's dairy farms expand, dairy owners are hiring more people.

It's important that these new employees are properly trained, so milk quality and production levels don't suffer, said Maurice Eastridge, Ohio State University Extension dairy farm nutrition specialist.

"Someone new to dairy farming may not know how to recognize when cows have mastitis or when and how to treat them," Eastridge said. "They may not know the importance of sanitizing milk lines to keep milk quality high. Or, they may not realize that treating cows poorly or abruptly changing milking routines could affect production."

To help train recently hired dairy farm employees and people pursuing work on a dairy farm, Ohio State University Extension and the Agricultural Technical Institute are holding their second Dairy Farm Employee Short Course, March 16-18 at ATI in Wooster.

"The short course is for dairy employees who are in the parlor milking or out in the barn or pasture feeding cows, or taking care of the calves," Eastridge said. "It's a focused program with hands-on training, not a broad topic, hit-or-miss program."

On Tuesday, March 16, participants will get an introduction to the dairy industry and its importance to world food production. Animal behavior, detecting when a cow is in heat and observing animals for health problems also will be discussed.

Participants can choose to spend Wednesday learning about milking management, feeding management or calf management. Anatomy and physiology, sanitation, milk quality, milking procedures, mastitis control, and milking systems will be covered in the milking management section.

Feeding managaement topics will include digestive anatomy and physiology, dry matter intake, Total Mixed Ration (TMR) management, feed types and characteristics, feed storage, nutrition and herd health, and working with a feed salesperson.

Calf management information will be offered for the first time, Eastridge said. Topics covered in this area will include calf health, feeding and weaning, housing, growth standards, and caring for newborns.

"The short course is an opportunity for farm employees or potential farm employees to come together, share ideas and talk with Ohio State and industry personnel," Eastridge said. "The nature of the course is to share information that can be used on the farm. The program will be very hands-on, with training at the ATI dairy center, the Krauss Dairy Center at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center and on a farm visit."

During the farm visit, participants and Ohio State personnel will point out things discussed in class, such as strengths of the operation and things that could be improved, he said.

On Thursday, farm safety and getting along with employers and other employees will be discussed.

"We're trying to make the short course more than just feeding and milking training by including other issues that are important to dairy farm employees," Eastridge said.

People who complete the three-day short course will receive a certificate verifying their completion of the program. The certificate may be helpful to people seeking employment on a dairy, he said. Last year, 16 people completed the short course.

"We got a really good response back from participants last year," Eastridge said. "And an employer we contacted said he noticed better performance in his employees who attended. He also said they required less supervision."

Last year's participants who would like to take part in the short course again this year only have to attend on Wednesday, he said. For example, if they attended the milking management section on the second day last year, they could come back this year for either the feeding or calf management sections and would not have to pay for the whole three-day course.

The registration deadline for the Dairy Farm Employee Short Course is Feb. 19. The three-day fee is $225 and includes two lunches, refreshment breaks and course materials. The fee for last year's participants attending only on March 17 is $120.

Participants will need to make their own lodging reservations. The course is limited to 75 people — 25 for each of the Wednesday sections — and is offered on a first-come, first-served basis.

For registration or more information about the short course, interested people can contact Tom Noyes, Extension dairy agent at the Wayne County Extension office, (330) 264-8722, or Jan Elliott at ATI Continuing Education, (330) 264-3911, ext. 1220.

Ag Adds To Quality of Life

Guest Columnist: Roger M. Rohrer, Vice President of Agri-Finance, First Union National Bank, and Agriculture Committee Member of The Lancaster Chamber

Recently the Agriculture Committee of The Lancaster Chamber of Commerce & Industry met at a brainstorming session to plan our activities for 1999. One significant objective we developed is the education of the non-farm public on agricultural issues and the contribution of agriculture to the quality of life. In the nation's ever-changing political climate, we see this objective becoming more of a priority for everyone in production agriculture and agribusiness.

As an example, I often find myself riding an elevator or sitting in a meeting with individuals who live throughout Lancaster County. And, although the county has a large agricultural community, many of these individuals are more than one generation removed from production agriculture, and I find it very interesting to hear their unsolicited perceptions of modern agriculture. More often than not, individuals do not realize how the United States' relatively low food prices help to boost our economy.

While most of us realize the amount of money we spend on food, we do not recognize exactly how much we are saving compared to people living in other countries. For instance, the average American spends about 10 cents of every dollar on food, compared to 20, 30 or 40 cents on the dollar citizens of other industrialized nations may spend. Therefore, we in agriculture must convey the value of the United States' economically priced food to the consumer.

Each of us must continually remind our neighbors, co-workers and friends that because of the money not spent on food, we are able to improve our quality of life. For some people this may enable them to afford extra food rather than "just enough" to get by, or for others it may mean increased income to spend on vacations or hobbies. The low cost of food is putting more money in our pockets, and our goal should be to make the average consumer aware of how they are saving money

In addition to the economical benefits, we also should appreciate the aesthetic value of agriculture in the community This may be a more challenging area in which to communicate our goals, but in Lancaster County we have, with our rolling hills of farmland, one of the most picturesque areas in the world to act as an example to other communities Despite heavily traveled roads and growing suburbs, we still have a substantial amount of open land Possibly best of all, is the fact that almost everyone, whether its during work or play, is able to enjoy the beauty that abounds in all parts of Lancaster County It is hard to put a dollar value on the contribution this agricultural beauty makes to the quality of life, but it is clearly substantial After all, thousands of tourists, from around the world, visit Lancaster County each year

In agriculture, we are very good at producing food, now we need to tell everyone about its effects on the quality of life It is up to us to promote agriculture to the fullest potential. Maybe this means becoming involved with national organizations such as the Pork Coalition, the Poultry Council or the Milk Marketing Board However, you can make a difference closer to home as well. Consider becoming involved in your local chamber of commerce, helping at your local farm show, volunteering during career day at your area schools or inviting neighbors on a tour of your farm By becoming involved, you can only help spread the word on the economic benefits of agriculture

Farm Expansion, Nutrient Management Top Bradford Dairy Day' Agenda

Alternate Bradford County Dairy Princess Jackie Schriner interviews Floyd Isbell about the 1999 Dairy Day Program.

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Bradford Co. Correspondent

EAST SMITHFIELD (Bradford Co.) — "We had an excellent day. This is the best one we've had," said Bradford County Extension Agent Tom Maloney as he spoke about the 1999 Bradford County Day.

His comments were echoed by both visitors and exhibitors as they filled out comment sheets and spoke about the day's events.

"We had positive comments from just about everyone I talked to," Maloney said.

More than 40 exhibitors showed their wares and met with farmers while programs ranging from dairy trivia contests to pesticide updates were offered in various classrooms of SRU High School, Monday, Feb. 15.

First on the agenda was Dr. Robert Graves, Penn State department of agricultural engineering, who focused on changes and expansion in the dairy operation.

"Change isn't new. The only thing constant in a successful dairy business is change," he said.

Graves also noted that planning is the secret ingredient through all the changes that may affect the farm, whether that means adding cows, changing the structure of the operation, concentrating in one area of production or in exiting the dairy business.

"You need to have a plan," he said. "Make that plan and then work that plan."

If expansion is in that plan, he reminds farmers that everyone must look forward, not backward. In looking forward, a farm needs benchmarks to mark the progress.

"How do I match up with the competition? And who's my competition?" Graves asked. How is my business doing compared to others? We are in a global market so we need to look around and we need to recognize that we're not just in this little area of our milkshed."

Benchmarks not only apply to a farm's balance sheet, but also to areas like hired labor.

"Maybe when it comes time to find good quality help, we're going to be competing with other businesses, so we're going to have to look at what it is that they do with their help and what we can do to make our positions attractive likewise. We can't just take leftover help anymore. The dairy business is too important."

When all resources, goals and benchmarks are considered, a farmer must decide what changes to make to make his business better.

"For many farmers, expansion is not just adding cows and building a barn, it's changing cow housing type, milking method, feeding method, feed storage or other things," he said.

When looking at new housing in particular, Graves outlined several possible barn layouts and he reminded the listeners to consider animals, machines, manure, water, personnel, feed, milk and waste water, among other things.

Location of the barn is also an important consideration.

"When we put in a new barn, it's like putting in a magnet. We need to think about where we want to put that magnet," he said.

During his talk, Graves challenged producers to think about their own operation.

LANCASTER FARMING'S INTERNET HOME PAGE DRAWS FAVORABLE COMMENTS

In recent months Lancaster Farming joined the wide world of agriculture on the Internet with a homepage that has already started to draw favorable comments from our viewers and advertisers. We have worked hard to keep traffic counts of 25,000 plus per month for our advertisers. We have worked hard to keep our down-on-the-farm values in this ultri-modern communication system. The first items we put on line, mailbox markets and public sale registry, still bring a lot of people back again and again each week. Farm News headlines, Glenn Shirk's dairy management course and the archives of the Penn State's Dairy and Animal Science Department's columns that run in the paper, have added to the popularity of the site.

Today, we have the Pennsylvania Corn Contest Winners, Accu Weather reports, a featured recipe from Section B, and from time to timet we add the program schedules for various conferences and conventions. Tomorrow, who knows? We'll find other things of interest and educational value as they come and go. And we'll keep updating the weather, recipes and news headlines each week.

In addition, we are pleased to announce that a few advertisers have chosen to place banner ads and display pages on-line with us too. When you visit our site you will want to see the farm equipment, auction, and other ads with products and services that are so much a part of our weekly publications. Of course, you can subscribe to Lancaster Farming by the email hot link, and you can find a short history of our forty-two years.

SO, IF YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY TO GO ON-LINE AND WANT A GOOD PLACE TO BOOKMARK, RIDE YOUR MOUSE TO OUR CORN CRIB.

Bradford Dairy Day Agenda

"Quite honestly the thing that I'm trying to do is to try to prick you a little bit to get you thinking. You're off the farm for a little while and I want to get you thinking that maybe there are some different things I can do; some different ways to milk cows whatever. When you get mad at what I'm saying or what I've suggested, funnel that right back into 'I'm going to go home and get out my books and my numbers. I'm going to prove to that turkey up there from Penn State really didn't know nothing.' There's a chance that I'm not right. But on the outside chance that I'm right, if you just went home and looked at things, that has to help."

Consider Renovation

When you think about dairy facilities, most farms have what they call a new wing, even if it was built more than 25 years ago. When expansion is considered, farmers must be careful not to just patch up the old facilities, but to plan for the first part of the 21st Century dairy business.

"Ask yourself, how does this expenditure of resources help me get closer to that 21st Century dairy facility that I want to have and something that my kids will want to be working with?"

Norman Conrad, senior research associate with the Nutrient Management Program, also presented a program on Nutrient Management changes.

Conrad explained that the current nutrient management laws are a result of many years of research, public meetings and industry input.

"This is the longest time it took them to come up with regulations, because in the past, they had somebody in Harrisburg just sit down and write something that looked good and it became law. The way this law got support from the farm community was that it had to have farmer input."

The regulating board in Pennsylvania includes many people who are affiliated with agriculture. Pennsylvania plans are relatively simple, noted Conrad, and include the farm and water shed location.

"If that water shed is a high quality one, they may ask farmers in that location to do something a little more stringent. That's one of those things that's happening a little more in Pennsylvania and I think will happen more with the federal program too."

Differences may include using setbacks or buffer strips. The next part is a summary of the plan, which includes the number of animals, the amount of land, and the amount of manure.

"It's a one-page summary of what's going to happen in this plan," said Conrad.

The third section is a nutrient section including the crops grown, where the manure will be spread, what the crop utilization and yield will theoretically be and the amount of nutrients that will be used and needed.

Right now Pennsylvania's law is based on nitrogen.

"What's interesting about Pennsylvania's law is that every five years, the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Environmental Protection have to get their heads together and see if this plan really made the improvements that we thought it was going to.

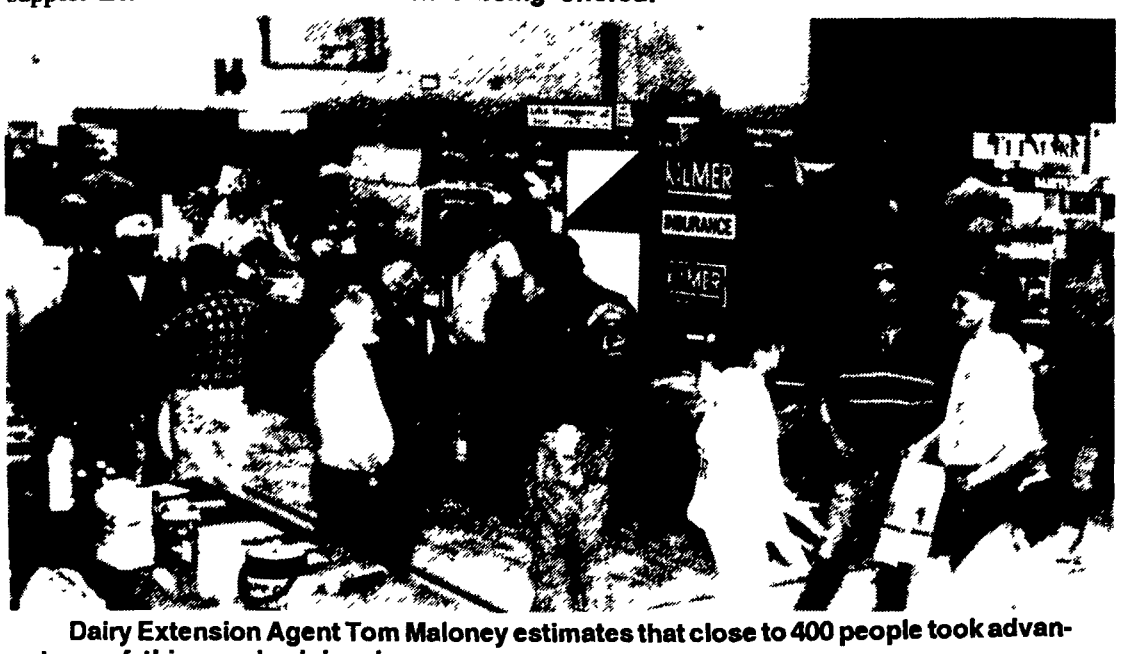
Bruce Roy speaks with William Muth of Guthie Robert Packer Hospital as they set up the emergency reporting form. The form, which will be laminated, includes directions to the farm and emergency telephone numbers.

Bradford County Dairy Princess Talitha Coolbaugh talks with Dick Packard about some of the new promotional materials being offered.



Dairy Extension Agent Tom Maloney estimates that close to 400 people took advantage of this year's dairy day program.

"They can say, well we worked on nitrogen and nitrogen is nice because we can do a number of things with it to manage it. But with phosphorus, it doesn't come off as a gas, it doesn't move, it tends to stay put. We use a whole lot less phosphorous in farming than we do nitrogen."

Also included in the plan is what to do with the excess manure whether to dry it and sell it or give it to a neighbor.

Some of the tougher questions asked is what's happening in the barnyards?

"That's actually where we find our biggest improvements," said Conrad. "You guys are in a situation right here that everywhere you look you're either downhill or uphill from somewhere."

Storm water runoff is also a major consideration. Conrad also overviewed the various cost share programs that are now available.

"There are many people certified to write a plan or you can write one yourself. Either way there are

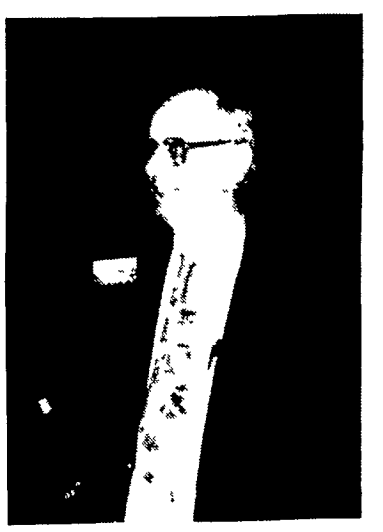
Norman Conrad, senior research associate with the Nutrient Management Program, offered insight into the Nutrient Management Act as well as new cost share programs.



"Change isn't new," said Dr. Robert Graves, of Penn State's Department of Agricultural Engineering as he delivered a talk about dairy farm expansion.

cost share monies available to cover the cost of writing the plan. This time monies for improvement are being made available as a revolving loan at about one percent interest," he noted.

Conrad urged all farmers to get in line for the money now, by filing a nutrient management plan and working with the conservation district.

Eventually other areas will come under scrutiny including fertilizers used on golf courses, road de-icers, septic system malfunctions, and other areas.

"At the end of five years, they'll not only re-examine the ag side of this, but I often tell farmers that the non-agricultural shoe is going to drop," said Conrad. "To what extent the legislature has the fortitude to do what it needs to do, we'll see, because controlling two percent of the population is not too hard, but when you're telling the other 98 percent to do something different, they holler."

Other afternoon sessions included a pesticide update where pesticide credits were offered and a review of new corn weed control products were given. Dr. Graves presented a seminar on maximizing cow comfort. The Guthrie Rural Health and Safety Committee gave a session on power take-off situations as part of their First on the Scene for Farm Families Course, and farmers could get their hearing checked, get a relaxing massage, have blood pressure checked or see a podiatrist about foot ailments.

Lacey's 4-H Dairy Project Grows Into Family Dairy

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

SPRINGBORO (Crawford Co.) — Pennsylvania First Alternate Dairy Princess Lacey Jean Zakostelecky lives with her parents Jeffrey and Laurie Zakostelecky and a brother Scott on a farm that has been in the family since 1816.

The fascinating history reveals many changes to the land, the houses, and to the farming operation. Although only 16 years old, Lacey, herself, has perpetuated a major change.

It was Lacey who influenced her family to go into the dairy business. The family farm was operating as a beef farm when Lacey joined 4-H at nine-years of age and started a heifer project. For the next few years, she added to her 4-H projects with more Brown Swiss heifers. When the heifers were old enough to milk, the family did not want to part with the bovine animals.

At first Lacey's dad hooked up some old vacuum milkers to milk the cows and fed the milk to the pigs and cats on the farm, then dumped the remaining milk down a wood chuck hole.

"We always say that Lacey's 4-H project got out of hand," her mother said. "Eventually we needed to make a decision: either sell the cows or go into dairying."

The decision was thoroughly debated. "I grew up riding horses—not milking cows—but my husband was from a dairy farm and enjoyed it," Laurie said. "We knew we'd be tied to the farm if we did (decide to operate as a dairy), but we decided to do it," Laurie said.

One of the influencing factors was that the Zakostelecky's son Scott has cerebral palsy. Because of the added care required, Laurie needed to be a stay-at-home mom. Together they decided that dairying was a job that could be fit into the family's schedule.

In retrospect, the family said that the decision to start milking cows in 1994 was the right one.

"I can't think of a better way to raise kids," Laurie said. "Lacey wouldn't be the person she is today, and Scott, either."

Scott has thrived on the farm and helps in the barn with chores.

"He has a physical disability with his hand, but that is something that can be worked around, and he is expected to complete chores just like Lacey," Laurie said.

Although Jeff works full time off the farm, his schedule is flexible enough for him to help out during seasonal and unexpected crises. Laurie does much of the work with the herd.

The farm's facilities needed to be changed to prepare them for a dairy herd. Jeff transformed the old horse barn on the property himself by pouring concrete and building tie-stalls.

Today the Zakostelecky farm has 40 registered head of Brown Swiss.

The family farm was operating as a beef farm until Lacey joined 4-H at nine years of age and started a heifer project. For the next few years, she added to her 4-H projects with more Brown Swiss heifers. When the heifers were old enough to milk, the family did not want to part with the bovine animals, and her dad remodeled the property's horse barn into a dairy barn.

The Zakostelecky farm has an interesting history. It was given to Laurie's great-grandfather (Captain Elisha Bowman) five generations back as payment for serving in the Revolutionary War. The large house at one time was much larger. It had a north and a south wing, both of which were rolled up town on huge logs in the early 1900s and placed at different spots in town to be used as separate homes. Both are still in use today.

The Zakosteleckys purchased the property from Laurie's mother in 1984.

"My dad had died 10 years before that, and the farmhouse was really in need of repair when we purchased it," Laurie said.

The couple remodeled the farmhouse to make its appearance much as it was in 1905, except for a diffe-

Agriculture Spells Opportunities For Cowanesque Students

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

COWANESQUE (Tioga County) — When Clair Zerby was a young man, he never imagined that some day he would be completing a 34-year career as a teacher of vocational agriculture. When he looks back at all the lives he touched during his career, he is sure he made the right choice.

In fact, Zerby draws great comfort when he thinks of former students who are making noteworthy contributions to society. Some have gone on to professions not related to agriculture and have left the area, while other former students are making a contribution to the local community.

"We've had students who have taken leadership positions with large companies. We've had students who have gone to France, South America, and Switzerland on exchange programs. We've had a lot of students who have done exceedingly well at state contests and have gone on to compete in Kansas City and Springfield," he said.

"As I look up and down the valley, I see many former students who have become people who are an important part of the community," said Zerby. "It's quite satisfying. I myself had a tremendous ag teacher who had a big influence on my life, and I just wanted to share that with other young people."

It is possibly that good community basis that gains Cowanesque's agriculture program such high marks with administrators, fellow faculty, and school board members.

Zerby shares teaching responsibilities with Marty Heyler. While Zerby focuses on the animal sciences, Heyler concentrates on the mechanics and industrial arts side of the program. With two teachers, more students can take advantage of the ag curriculum and a wider variety of courses can be offered. In fact, through a grant from the Earl and Ina Taber Foundation, the FFA department plans to purchase a portable sawmill in order to expand their forestry program.

"We have a unique, tremendous rapport between the administrators, fellow faculty, and the community," said Zerby, "It's a big family."

Those involved in the planning of the curriculum agree that agriculture is a big part of the educational package, and that all high school students have the opportunity to select ag classes to fill science or humanities requirements.

For further educational and leadership opportunities, Zerby and Heyler encourage students to join FFA. Currently about 75 percent of the students take advantage of the extra opportunities; but every year, Zerby hears the same lament from people who wished they had gotten involved earlier rather than toward the end of their high school careers.

"We've been fortunate in the last few years that our students have done well when they compete in contests and this serves as an incentive for others to get involved. They see some of their peers going places and they'd like to be involved, so they join. Then they find out that they have missed a lot and that they wished they had joined earlier," he explained.

Senior Jake Steinfelt is a staunch supporter of the ag curriculum.

"It's a great experience. I think everyone should have the chance to be involved and should be involved."

Fellow classmate Phillip Erway agrees. "You learn a lot," he said.

Over the years, Zerby has witnessed many changes. Perhaps the biggest is the source of the students for the ag classes.

"Teaching was what I expected when I first got into it, but it has really changed, because there are fewer and fewer kids who grow up on farms," said Zerby.

"We're seeing more rural non-farm and urban students and a lot of people will say, 'What are you doing teaching ag to those people?' We educate people, we don't teach them 'ag.' We educate better consumers, more informed consumers and we get them involved in developing leadership talents, which they may have but don't recognize."

Computers have now entered the classroom in full force. Zerby has also seen a change in the actual curriculum.

"It was straight production ag when I started out," said Zerby. "When I came to Cowanesque, it

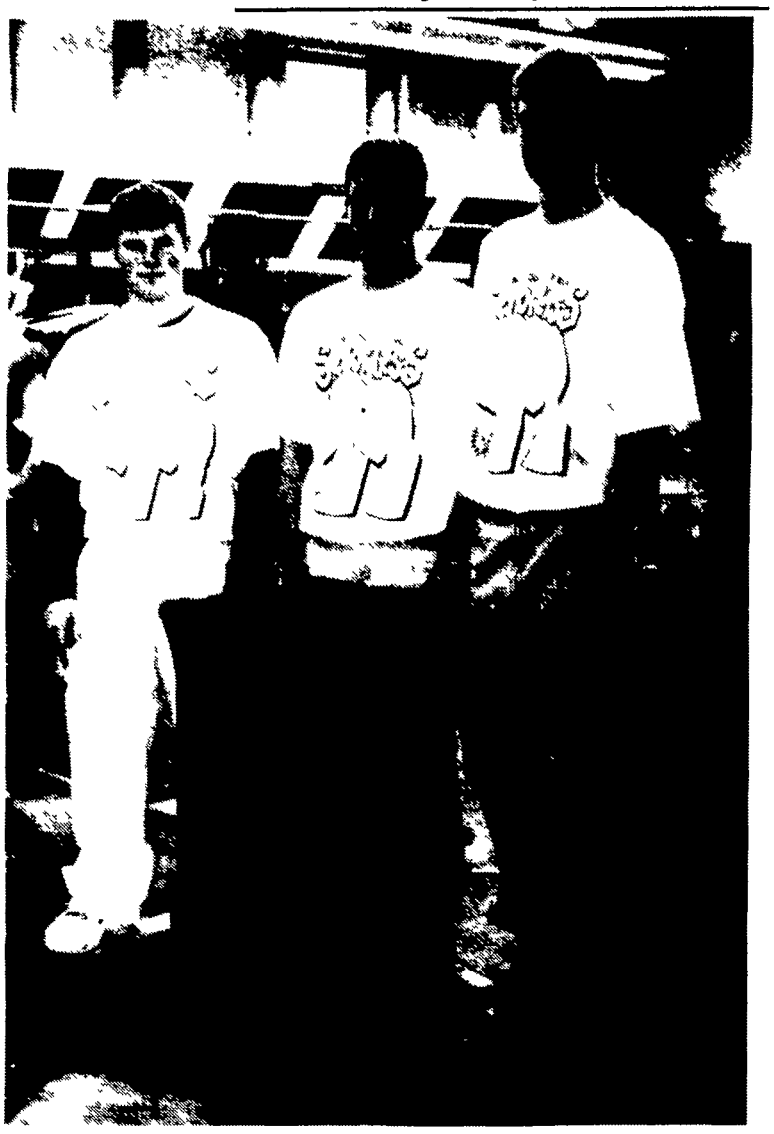
Justin Pratt, Garrett Tice, and Clair Zerby check the latest weather report on the DTN, which was made available to the school through Sovereign Bank. With this machine, students can track weather and market reports and incorporate the data into projects they are working on in class.



Replacing a tractor engine in the machine shop are high school seniors Kenny Miles, Jake Steinfelt, and Phillip Erway, who are enrolled in the power mechanics course. Each of these ag students received their Keystone Degree in January. Steinfelt was also named the North Central Region Star Farmer in specialized agriculture for his maple syrup enterprise.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

I've been reading that Lancaster County is one of the 10 top attractions in the country. The top three are Washington Monument, Smithsonian, and the Grand Canyon. Pennsylvania Dutch Country was listed as fourth. Walt Disney World was fifth.

Those of us who have lived here all of our lives, probably do not appreciate the beauty that surrounds us. The landscape is appealing, and the farm buildings are neat. Many visitors come to see the Amish. Their grey buggies, horses, and style of dress are a big attraction.

Lancaster County was settled in the late 1600s. All of my ancestors came here in the early 1700s. We are lucky to have the most fertile farmland in the world. Agriculture is very important in our county, but, now many people from other areas are moving in and we have a diverse population.

Many of the buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places. I believe that I have visited most of the historical places in Lancaster County. But, when we have visitors, I'm glad for the opportunity to see them again.

It is almost spring and I have many winter activities unfinished. In fact, I've only started on another braided rug. The seed catalogs have not been looked at. Although, I do keep a lot of my own seed. Landis Valley's Museum's "Heirloom Seed Catalog" lists "Risser Early Sugar Pea" and "Risser Sickle Pea." The early pea is usually ready by the end of May and the sickle pea is similar to the sugar snap pea.

The other day we saw bluebirds sitting on our rail fence and the forsythia twigs that I brought inside to force are blooming. The little white bird that we saw in the fall seems to have stayed here all winter. So, a few more weeks and I'll be making trips to our garden in the corner of our yard. There is no escaping the fact that spring is fast approaching.

Agriculture Spells Opportunities

was still pretty much production ag. Today we put a lot more emphasis on mechanics, ag business, and the sciences of agriculture. It's been difficult really, because I'm oriented toward production and you have to educate people to marketing, finance and leadership skills and the environmental impact of everything and the regulations. It's much more stressful for everybody."

Zerby, who grew up on a dairy farm in Centre Hall, began his career at Penn State University where he enrolled in the agriculture education program. After three years, he switched his major to animal science. He gives much of his credit for graduating to one person, the associate dean of the College of Agriculture, Russell Dickerson.

"I was going to quit school during that first semester and the first day of the second semester, I spent the entire day in his office. If it hadn't been for him, I'd have quit school and I don't know what I'd be doing today," said Zerby.

Each Friday, Zerby had to report to the dean to give a report of how he was doing.

"I didn't have a good first semester," he said.

When Zerby was graduated, he joined the Army, and later took a position as the assistant beef herdsman at Penn State. Later, he decided to go back to school to get his teaching certificate.

He began his teaching career at Lititz High School, Lancaster County, in March of 1965. In 1969 he and his wife, Carol, a medical technologist, who also attended Penn State, moved to Tioga County to accept a one-year teaching position at Mansfield High school. He then moved to Cowanesque High School.

In addition to working with hundreds of students every year, Zerby has maintained a 225-acre farm where he and his wife of 36 years now run 25 Simmental cross beef cattle and 20-25 commercial ewes.

They also raised three children. Brian and his wife, Yvonne, milk a herd of registered Jerseys in Osceola; Sue teaches chemistry at Penn Manor High School in Millersville; and Judy supervises an ice cream plant in Landover, Maryland for Safeway.

In the community, he is an active supporter of 4-H and the livestock shows at the Tioga County Fair. In fact, he initiated the sheep show and continues to chair the committee. He also is involved with the state sheep and wool grower's association and the Hampshire Sheep Association, the PA Farm Bureau, and activities with his local church and Sunday School, Zerby adds that he could not have participated in so many activities without the support of his wife and family.

Although travel is in the plans for Zerby and his wife, they know they cannot give up the animals just yet.

"My grandsons are just getting into 4-H," Zerby explained with a chuckle. Shane is nine and Jarrit is 7.

Zerby will also track the Cowanesque Valley High School ag program to help make sure it is maintained.

"One thing I want to accomplish is to try to maintain the strength of the program," he said. "We need opportunities for people in this part of the country to have a knowledge of and understand agriculture."

Lacey's 4-H Project Grows Into Family Dairy

rent style porch. Most of the work is done by the couple. Downstair renovations are completed and the family is now working on the upstairs.

Over the years, the original 400 acres was was gradually parceled out to various family members. Only 45 acres remain with the farm, but it is sufficent to sustain the small dairy operation that the Zakosteleckys have. The acreage is mostly used to raise alfalfa and for grazing, although they need to buy feed for the animals.

The Zakostelecky farm has an interesting history. It was given to Laurie's great-grandfather (Captain Elisha Bowman) five generations back as payment for serving in the Revolutionary War. The large house at one time was much larger. It had a north and a south wing, both of which were rolled up town on huge logs in the early 1900s and placed at different spots in town to be used as separate homes.

"I'm really sentimentally tied to our farm. I'd have a hard time giving it up," Laurie said.

By necessity, Laurie's life has changed recently. She said, "I live my life just to watch Lacey." She is referring to Lacey's duties in representing the dairy industry, first as the Crawford County Dairy Princess, and now as Pennsylvania First Alternate. With State Dairy Princess Jennifer Dotterer and Second Alternate Megan Myers, Lacey helps promote the dairy industry across the state.

"I wanted to give something back to the dairy industry," Lacey said of her decision to compete for the title.

What has a 16-year-old received from the dairy industry?

For starters, she considers it a priviledge to grow up on a dairy farm. Showing heifers, she said, has made her more outgoing and helped built responsibility and character.

Although Lacey promotes all breeds, she admits to having a soft spot in her heart for the Brown Swiss breed. She said, "I like their power. They can be docile or stubborn. It gives me a challenge—and I enjoy a good challenge."

"Showing helps give a lot of confidence," Lacey said. "It teaches responsibility."

In addition to being a full-time student, Lacey works on the family farm and milks for a neighboring farmer, who has 91 Holsteins. Lacey milks alone two nights a week during school months and mostly full-time during the summertime.

Her employer's farming operation is quite different from the Zakostelecky farm, and Lacey enjoys the differences.

"He has automatic takeoff and averages a milking herd of 96 Holsteins. His herd is a full-time job for him, but our family does dairying more as a hobby, and uses bucket milkers," she said.

Go Nuts With These Recipes

Nuts are an excellent source of vegetable protein.

Peanuts and nuts are heart-healthy because they lower blood cholesterol when added to the diet in small, frequent amounts.

Although nuts are a high fat food, they contain monounsaturated fat, which can be effective in reducing some risk factors for heart disease. Nuts are a good source of Vitamin E, which studies show help fight heart disease and cancer.

In one Harvard study, women who ate small amounts of nuts lowered their risk of heart disease by one-third. Another study found men who ate nuts regularly were less likely to have cardiac problems and sudden death.

Nuts are believed to satsify hunger for longer periods of time than other high carbohydrate snacks.

At Penn State, researchers discovered small changes in diet—such as substituting peanut butter for butter or cream cheese, and replacing other snack foods with peanuts—reduced cholesterol levels by 10 to 14 percent within a month.

Go nuts with these recipes.

CHESS PIE

2 cups brown sugar
3 eggs
1 cup raisins
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 cup chopped coconut
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup ground nuts

This recipe was in my mother's old hand written cookbook. As with many of these recipes, no further instructions were included.

However, similar recipes give the following instruction:

Put raisins in a small saucepan, add enough water to cover raisins. Cook, covered, until raisins are soft and plump. Drain extra water. Mix raisins with remaining ingredients.

For pastry use your favorite two-crust pie recipe. Cut circles from the pastry dough to fit either regular or mini muffin tins. Fill muffin cups about three-fourth full with the raisin mixture. Bake in 400 degree oven until the filling looks set and the crust is lightly browned.

RASPBERRY DOUBLE CREAM COFFEE CAKE

Cake:
2¼ cups all-purpose flour
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup butter, softened
1 cup sour cream
1 egg
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon almond extract

Filling:
¼ cup sugar
8-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1 egg
½ cup raspberry preserve
½ cup sliced almonds

Heat oven to 350 degrees. In large mixing bowl, stir together flour and ¾ cup sugar; cut in butter until crumbly. Reserve 1 cup crumb mixture for topping.

Add remaining cake ingredients to remaining crumb mixture. Beat at medium speed about 2 minutes. Spread batter over bottom and 2 inches up sides of greased and floured 9-inch springform pan.

In same mixing bowl, combine ¼ cup sugar, cream cheese, and egg. Beat at medium speed 2 minutes.

Spread cream cheese mixture over batter to within ½ -inch from edge. Spread preserves over cream cheese mixture. Sprinkle almonds and 1 cup reserved crumb mixture over preserves.

Bake for 45-60 minutes or until cream cheese filling is set and cake is dark golden brown. Cool 15 minutes; remove side of pan. Center will settle slightly. Serve warm or cold. Store refrigerated. Yields 16 servings.

SPICE PECANS

2 pounds whole pecans
2 egg whites

Beat egg whites with fork and add:
2 teaspoons cold water

Beat again with fork and add pecans. Stir in:
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Pour mixture into greased baking pan. Bake at 250 degrees for one hour, stirring every 15 minutes.

CARAMEL NUT CRUNCH

½ cup brown sugar, packed
½ cup King syrup
¼ cup margarine
½ teaspoon salt
6 cups Cheerios
1 cup pecans (whole)
1 cup peanuts

Heat oven to 325 degrees. Butter a jelly roll pan or cookie sheet with sides.

Heat brown sugar, syrup, margarine, and salt over medium heat, stirring constantly until sugar is dissolved. Remove from heat. Stir in Cheerios and nuts until well coated.

Spread on prepared pan. Bake 15 minutes. Remove from oven, cool slightly. While cooling, use a spatula to loosen mix. Let stand about one hour. Store in covered container. Makes about 8 cups.

Note: Raisins may be added if desired.

This is a great snack that kids like.

Millers, Md.

FAVORITE COOKIES

4-ounce package vanilla or coconut cream instant pudding
2⅔ cups coconut, flaked
⅔ cup sweetened condensed milk
½ teaspoon almond or vanilla extract
¼ cup almond meal

Combine all ingredients. Drop by teaspoonful onto well greased and floured baking sheets. Bake at 325 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes or until edges are golden brown.

Remove from sheets and cool on racks. Makes 2½ dozen. Store in airtight container.

This recipe is a family favorite. My mom found it in the 1940s, and it is the favorite of my dad. By changing the flavor of the instant pudding, you can vary and heighten the taste

PECAN HONEY BUTTER

½ cup pecans
½ cup butter
¼ cup honey

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Spread pecans on baking sheet, place in middle shelf of oven and toast pecans for 8 minutes, stirring 2 times during the baking period. Cool and chop finely. In a mixing bowl, beat together butter and honey until light. Stir in toasted pecans. Transfer to an airtight bowl or jar and store in refrigerator.

WALNUT HONEY BUTTER

½ cup butter
½ cup honey
¼ cup finely chopped walnuts

Cream butter and honey until light and fluffy. Stir in walnuts. Transfer to a tightly covered bowl or jar and store in refrigerator.

Featured Recipe

Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Lacey Zakostelecky lives on a farm in Springboro that has been in the family since 1816. Many changes have been made over the years. One of the most recent ones was turning the farm back into a dairy farm. This change is attributed to Lacey, who showed a Brown Swiss calf as a 9-year-old 4-H'er. Each year she added an additional animal and the others kept growing. The family decided to renovate the farm into a full-fledge dairy operation in 1994. They now have a herd of 40 registered Brown Swiss. Read about the transition and the Zakostelecky family on page B2 of this issue.

Lacey was crowned dairy princess for Crawford County and at the state pageant, held in the fall, she was selected as first alternate to represent Pennsylvania.

In promoting the dairy industry, Lacey finds that many people falsely believe food that tastes good can't possibly be good for them. Many who are focusing on dieting as a means of getting fit are forfeiting good nutrition.

Think again, she challenges.

"You don't need to sacrifice taste and forfeit good nutrition because you are on a low-fat diet. Fat-free milk and dairy products have all the benefits of whole milk without the fat," she said.

Substitute one of the many low-fat or fat-free dairy products on the market in your favorite recipes and enjoy the great flavor of dairy with the benefits of a low-fat diet.

Here is one of Lacey's favorite dip recipes that she converted to include low-fat dairy products. Try serving it with fresh veggies or baked tortilla chips.

TACO DIP

Blend together until smooth:
2 8-ounce packages reduced-fat cream cheese
16-ounces lite sour cream
1 jar taco sauce (mild or hot)

Stir in:
8-ounces reduced-fat cheddar cheese, shredded
1 small can chopped black olives (optional)
Enjoy!

Although Lacey needs to make sacrifices because of milking cows, it hasn't prevented her from participating in numerous activities.

She is a member of the Brown Swiss Association and serves as vice president of the Conneaut Valley FFA and as president of Conneaut Valley 4-H. In fact, Lacey has been president of 4-H for five years. As a high school junior, she is a high honor student and still finds time to be a member of the yearbook and newspaper staffs, SADD, and Spanish Club, and plays softball and basketball.

She is a member of Conneautville Baptist Church and enjoys playing all sports, swimming, fishing, cross-country skiing, hiking, crafting, and collecting teddy bears.

During the state Farm Show, Lacey helped at the booth sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services and at ADADC booth, but her favorite spot was the information booth, where people who are frustrated and disoriented by the massive complex come to ask directions. Lacey, with a good sense of direction, calmly directed them to whatever place the visitors requested. "I like anything that gives me a chance to talk. I like the public. As dairy princess, I meet so many different people," Lacey said of the experience.

Since Lacey's coronation, the family's schedule has needed to become more adaptable to changes.

"We live so far away from everything," her mother said of the many appearances Lacey makes on behalf of the dairy industry, and the need to travel long distances. But she isn't complaining. Laurie believes the experience has been educational for the whole family.

Lacey said, "It's hard to fit everything I do into my schedule. My parents are wonderful. They support everything I do. Mother runs me everywhere and dad fills in by doing the chores on the farm.

"I like milking. Originally I wanted horses, but now I'm glad we are into dairying. I wouldn't want things to be any other way now. I like to be busy. That's the way I want it," Lacey said.

Whenever she has a few spare moments, Lacey either finds something on the farm to work at, takes a walk, or plays sports with brother.

She plans to study either physical education or ag education in college. After teaching a few years, she'd like to become a guidance counselor.

Answers to recipe requests should be sent to the same address.

QUESTION — Carrie Sponseller, Gettysburg, would like a recipe for Snow Flake Cookie mix in a jar. It includes white chocolate chips and macadamia nuts that are layered in a quart jar.

QUESTION — A reader, who has a Whisper Mill Grain Grinder, would like some other readers' favorite recipes using fresh ground flour such as barley, rice, spelt, rye, etc. She would like ideas to include a variety of grains in the family's diet instead of wheat, wheat, and wheat.

QUESTION — Mary Fisher, Rebersburg, and many other readers have requested that the cake-in-the-jar recipes printed in November and the brownie-in-the jar recipe printed in January be reprinted. I hate to repeat recipes so close together, but this is an oft-repeated request so send in your favorite ones and we will print them again. Please, readers, clip out recipes that you plan to use.

QUESTION — Ruth Helman, Chambersburg, would like directions and recipes to make homemade cream filled doughnuts.

QUESTION — John Telford, Swampscott, Mass., is looking for two old Dutch recipes. One is to make a dutch cake, which was a bread-like cake with flour and crumb topping. The other is for Dutch coffee cake, which was a sweet yellow cake-heavy, buttery, with a thick layer of brown sugar and cinnamon in the middle and a topping of the same mix.

QUESTION — A reader from Topton wants a recipe for peanut butter and coconut eggs for a diabetic. No granulated or confectioners' sugar can be used.

QUESTION — Kenneth Hixon, Warfordsburg, would like a recipe for spiced sickle pears, which are spiced with the peels intact.

QUESTION — Sharon Halsey wants a recipe for pumpkin mincemeat pie.

QUESTION — Dave Akins wants recipes to make chicken wings and nuggets. Is there a special tip to make seasoning stick to the meat?

QUESTION — Debrah Giambalvo, Lancaster, grew soybeans for the first time last year. She had such a high yield that she is in need of recipes on how to use them. Currently, she steams the soybeans and adds salt and butter.

QUESTION — Elizabeth Weinhold, Boyertown, would like a recipe for cherry dumpling like her mother used to make. The cherry dumplings, which is a dough with cherries mixed in and cooked in a bag to hold them together while cooking, were made the size of an apple dumpling or larger. To eat, the dumpling was sliced and covered with milk.

QUESTION — Several years ago, J. Rouse clipped a recipe from this section for maple syrup pork chops. Her family loves the recipe, but she lost it. Anyone else clip the recipe? Send it in so we can reprint it.

QUESTION — A. Nolt, Annville, wants a recipe for Shepard's pie.

ANSWER — Jean Nestler, Halifax wanted a recipe to make Easter egg candy without milk or cream. Thanks to Pat Elligson, Millers, Md., for sending this recipe.

Cherry Nut Easter Eggs

1 egg white
1 teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 pounds confectioners' sugar
4 tablespoons soft butter
½ cup chopped nuts
1 small jar maraschino cherries plus juice

Beat egg white, cream of tartar, and vanilla until foamy. Add enough sugar to make a tin paste. Beat in butter until mixture is smooth.

Add chopped cherries and nuts. Add remaining sugar alternately with cherry juice, a little water may be added if needed.

Shape candy into eggs. Place on waxed paper and chill at least 8 hours. Dip in melted semi-sweet chocolate and refrigerate.

Note: finely grated coconut may be added if desired.

ANSWER — A Lancaster reader wanted a recipe for Black Diamond Steaks. Thanks to Shirley Schwoerer, Wysox, and an anonymous reader for sending the following recipe.

Black Diamond Steaks

Marinade:
1 cup oil
1 cup red wine
½ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon basil
1 clove garlic, crushed
4-6 venison or beef steaks

Blend all marinade ingredients in blender or food processor. Cover steaks with marinade and refrigerate. Turn twice a day for 4 to 6 days. Cook, grill, broil, or fry according to desired method.

TOFFEE-TOPPED BARS

2 cups brown sugar
2 cups flour
½ cup butter, softened
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup milk
1 egg
1 cup chocolate chips
½ cup chopped walnuts
¼ cup flaked coconut

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 13x9-inch baking pan. In a bowl, mix together brown sugar and flour with pastry blender. Mix in butter to make crumbs. Remove 1 cup and set aside. In large bowl, add baking powder and salt. With fork, lightly beat in vanilla, milk, and egg. Beat until smooth. Put in 13x9-inch baking pan. In a small bowl, combine chocolate chips and walnuts. Fold in coconut. Sprinkle reserved crumbs over top of batter in pan. Sprinkle with chocolate chips and walnuts. Spread topping evenly over the top of the batter in pan.

Bake 35 minutes or until done. Cool completely before slicing. Makes 24 bars.

½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 large eggs
½ cup granulated sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped walnuts
2 cups chopped dates

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Grease and lightly flour 8-inch square baking pan. Sift together flour, baking powder, and salt; set aside.

In a medium mixing bowl, beat eggs until foamy; beat sugar and vanilla, and stir in flour mixture.

Fold in nuts and dates. Spread into prepared baking pan.

Bake for 25 to 30 minutes or until a dull crust forms on top. Cool on wire rack. Cut into 2-inch squares. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar or dip each square into it.

Yields 16 squares.

BANANA-OATMEAL CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES

¾ cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon nutmeg, optional
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon baking soda
1 cup mashed banana
1¾ cup rolled oats
1 cup chocolate chips
½ -¾ cups nuts

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg and mix well. Mix together dry ingredients and add alternately with the mashed bananas. Add oats, chocolate chips, and nuts. Drop dough onto lightly greased cookie sheet. Bake at 350 degrees for about 12 minutes.

These cookies are a great favorite with our family as well as with others who have tasted them.

ANSWER — Linda Garber, New Ringgold, wanted recipes for Belgian waffles and for five-layer finger Jell-O with two layers of cream cheese between them. Thanks to Gloria Hummel, Schuylkill Haven, for sending the layered finger Jell-O recipe.

Finger Jell-O White Layer

1 can sweetened condensed milk
4 envelopes plain gelatine
2 cups boiling water

Mix together and use one cup of mixture for each layer.

Jell-O Layer:

4 3-ounce packages Jell-O (any flavor)
4 envelopes plain gelatine

For each layer, mix a 3-ounce package of Jell-O and one envelope plain gelatine in one cup boiling water.

Pour mixture of colored Jell-O in bottom of 9x13-inch pan. Refrigerate 10-20 minutes and cover with white layer. Refrigerate 10-20 minutes and carefully top with another mixture of the colored Jell-O. Repeat until all seven layers are completed. White mixture should be kept slightly warm until layered or it will set up before it is used.

Thanks to Mary Fisher, Rebersburg, for sending this recipe.

Belgian Waffles

4 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon vanilla
3 tablespoons butter, melted
1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk

Beat egg yolks until very light. Add vanilla and butter. Combine flour and salt; add with milk to egg mixture. Beat well. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into batter. Bake in waffle iron.

ANSWER — Linda Fletcher, Walnutport, wanted a recipe for elderberry jelly. Thanks to Lillian Hackett, Wellsboro, for sending a recipe.

Elderberry Jelly

6 quarts berries
2 lemons

Remove stems and crush. Place in saucepan. Bring to a boil slowly until juice starts to flow. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 15 minutes.

3 cups juice
¼ cup fresh or bottled lemon juice
4½ cups sugar

Follow directions that come with the Sure Jell folder or the Certo Liquid Fruit pectin.

Thanks to Catherine Goubeaux, Strasburg, for sending this recipe.

Elderberry Jelly

5½ cups elderberry juice
6 cups granulated sugar

Place in 8-quart saucepan. Boil 20-25 minutes. Hot pack.

ANSWER — Lillian Hackett, Wellsboro, sent this recipe that had been requested.

Choke Cherry Jelly

3 cups juice
6½ cups sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

Stem about 3½ pounds ripe choke cherries. Add 3 cups water. Bring to a boil and simmer covered 15 minutes. Drain out juice, add sugar, and bring to a boil. Add pectin and and boil one minute in rolling boil.

ANSWER — Linda Fletcher, Walnutport, wanted a recipe for vanilla Texas sheet cake. Thanks to a reader for sending her recipe.

White Texas Sheet Cake

1 cup butter
1 cup water
2 cups sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2¼ cups flour
2 beaten eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup sour milk
1 teaspoon baking soda

Heat together butter and water. Add sugar, salt, and flour. Mix well. Add remaining ingredients. After batter is well blended pour into a greased and floured cookie sheet with sides. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Frost with butter cream frosting.

Go Nuts

BLACK WALNUT PIE

1 cup ground black walnuts
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 cup granulated sugar
1 cup table molasses
1 cup water
1 large egg
2 tablespoons vinegar
Pinch salt
1 unbaked 9-inch pie shell

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. In a small bowl, combine ground walnuts and flour.

In large bowl, combine and beat sugar, salt, molasses, water, egg, and vinegar until smooth. Stir in the walnut and flour mixture and beat again.

Pour mixture into unbaked pie shell and bake 30 minutes.

WALDORF SALAD

4 tart red apples
1 tablespoon sugar
Juice ½ lemon
2 ribs celery, finely chopped
¾ cup chopped walnuts or pecans
¼ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup heavy cream, whipped
4 large lettuce leaves

Peel two apples and core and dice all four into a medium bowl. Toss with sugar and lemon juice. Gently stir in celery and nuts.

Fold mayonnaise into whipped cream. Gently stir into the apple mixture. Chill in refrigerator for 1½ hours. Place lettuce leaf on four plates and mound salad in center of each. Serves 4.

St. Patrick Returns To Tell His Story

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

Imagine you are a 16-year-old boy living in Britain about 431 years after Christ died, when you are suddenly sold as a slave to Ireland. Later, you are considered one of the greatest saints that every lived — St. Patrick.

Let's pretend Saint Patrick returns to tell us his story. Here's what he might say:

"I was simply going about my chores in the beautiful village in Britain (England) when pirates raided our village.

During the confusion, I was captured, put on a boat, and taken to a strange land called Ireland. There, I was sold as a slave. I worked as a shepherd for an Irish chieftain in Ulster. I missed my homeland and family, but found comfort in my Christian religion.

For six years, I worked as a slave. During that time, I dedicated myself to Christianity. Then I escaped!

I returned home to Britain, but jus couldn't stop thinking about the people of Ireland. I felt they needed Christian love. I wanted to convert the Irish to Christianity so I decided to study in a monastery on an island off the southeast coast of France. I told my teachers that I wanted to return to Ireland as a missionary, but they were reluctant to let me go. You see, my schooling as a child had not been very good. But when the first missionary to Ireland died in 431, Pope Celestine I sent me to Ireland.

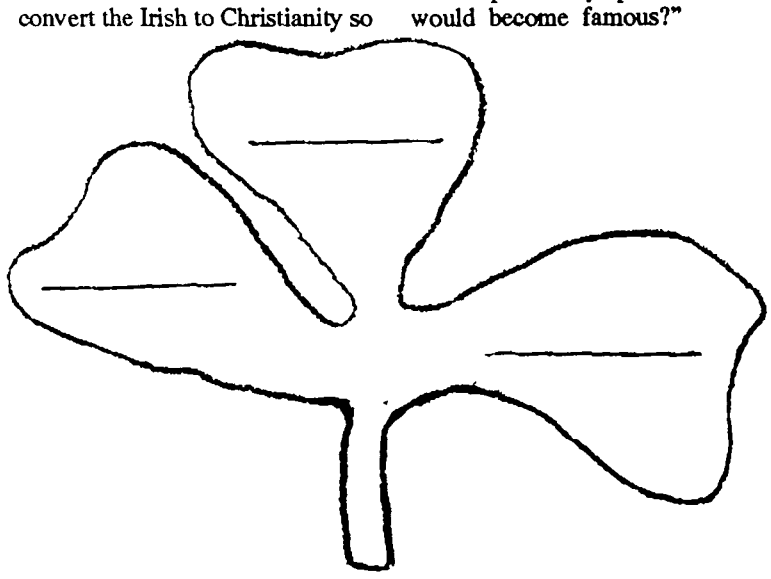
I landed in Ireland and began preaching Christianity in northern and western Ireland where Christianity had never been heard.

By the end of my ministry, I had founded more than 300 churches and baptized more than 120,000 people.

I had earned the trust of many tribal leaders by using the three leaves of the shamrock plant to explain the Holy Trinity (Father, Son, and Holy Spirit).

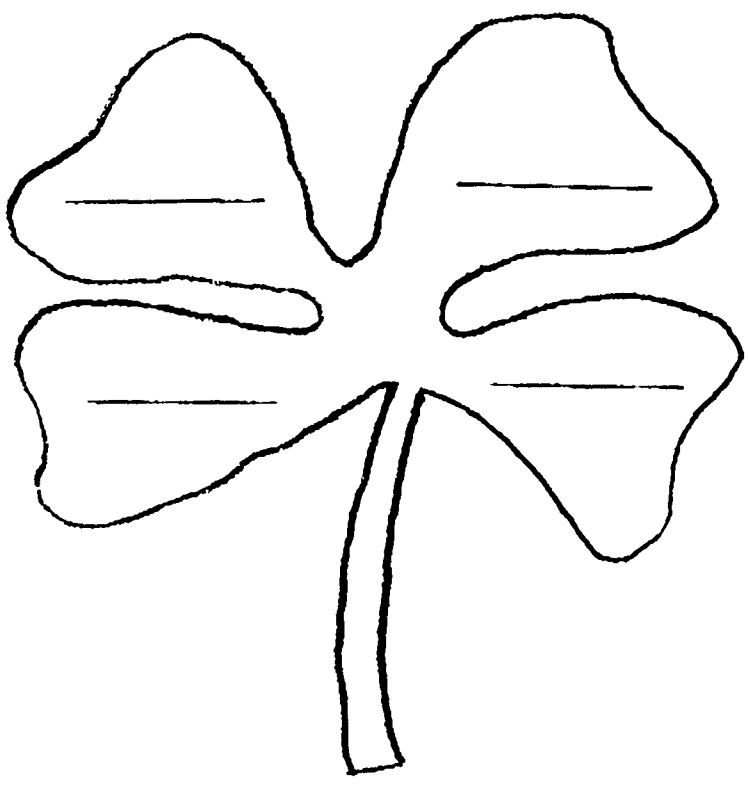
Now I understand that the shamrock has become the traditional symbol of Ireland and that a Saint Patrick's Day is celebrated all over the world!

Who would have thought when I was captured by pirates that I would become famous?"



St. Patrick used the shamrock to explain the trinity to non-Christians in Ireland in A D 431 What does the Trinity stand for?
Fill in the leaves of this shamrock

(answer) Father, Son, Holy Spirit



Four-leaf clovers stand for good luck Many youth belong to 4-H

What do the four leaves stand for in this organization?

Learn How To Tie Flies

YORK (York Co.) – Spring is never far away in the heart of a trout angler. Starting on March 13, at Nixon County Park's Nature Center, spring will be getting just a bit closer when a fly tying class shows would-be fly anglers just how to make their own fishing lures.

The two-hour course, which runs from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. each Saturday morning, features five weeks of hands-on instruction by Mark Altland, a fly tier. The course runs from March 13 to April 10.

The course covers the basic techniques of fly tying, from the first wrapping of the hook with tying silk, to dubbing body material, to tying on wings and spinning hackle. Each week, several different fly patterns will be taught, from the simple to the more complex. The idea is to build on existing skills.

So if you wanted to learn how to tie a proper Adams dry fly or a Wooly Bugger streamer, you can learn how to do it.

Most materials will be provided, but participants will need to bring their own bobbins, fly tying vise, and head cement. There is a $35 fee for the course. And pre-registration is necessary

Call Nixon County Park Nature Center at (717) 428-1961 to pre-register or for more information.

W. Va. High School Wins National Contest Sponsored By Dairy Promotion

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The term "milk money" has gained new meaning for the students of Tygarts Valley High School in Mill Creek, W. Va. The school was one of 25 first place winners in the Cartons for Computers contest As a first prize winner, Tygarts Valley was awarded $2,000 in computer equipment and $500 toward new food service equipment.

Sponsored by the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East, the Milk Processor Education Program and the National Dairy Council, the Cartons for Computers contest is helping kids get their calcium by challenging schools nationwide to increase their milk consumption A total of $70,000 in computer prizes and $16,500 in food service were awarded to schools with the largest increase in milk consumption.

"Recent reports have revealed that students are foregoing milk in favor of sugar-packed sodas. As a result, teens are facing a calcium crisis," says Kurt Graetzer, executive director of the Milk Processor Education Program. "Cartons for Computers gives schools an avenue through which they can educate their students about the benefits of including calcium in their diets."

According to the USDA, nine of 10 teen-age girls and six out of 10 teen-age boys don't get enough calcium in their diets to meet the National Academy of Sciences recommendations of 1,300 mg per day. And, half of teen-age girls don't drink milk at all Drinking at least four 8-ounce glasses of milk each day brings teens closer to meeting their calcium goal.

The teen years are a critical time to invest in bone strength because nearly half of all bone is formed during this time. Depositing calcium during adolescence helps reduce the risk of injury during the teen years and developing osteoporosis later in life. During the teen years, people gain 50 percent of their bone mass and 20 percent of their height. Making wise beverage choices, drinking at least four 8-oz glasses of milk each day brings teens closer to meeting their calcium goal

The Cartons for Computers contest will run again this fall To find out how your school can help students make smart beverage choices, call the toll-free "Cartons for Computers" hotline at 1-888-MILK-WINS

Even for compatible siblings, distribution of their parents' estate is often fraught with misunderstandings and ill feelings. Verbal promises are not enough when it comes to deciding who gets what.

Who Gets Mamma's Dishes?

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — As the eldest daughter, you may have thought you were entitled to your mother's china that has been passed down through the generations. Your mother even told you that it was to be yours when she passed away.

But when your siblings gathered to distribute the estate, your sister-in-law insisted the china should go to the oldest child — her husband.

"If there was aminosity between siblings before — watch out! Even for compatible siblings, distribution of their parents' estate is often fraught with misunderstandings and ill feelings," said Attorney William Bunt, New Bloomfield, during a session sponsored by Penn State Extension.

"Verbal promises are not enough when it comes to deciding who gets what," Bunt said.

A will is a positive document. But wills themselves are not always guarantees that the wishes of the deceased will be carried out. Depending on the wording, a request can be nullified.

"Although it is legal to write your own will in Pennsylvania — don't," Bunt warned.

That's because little details important to a will's autheticity are often overlooked by individuals.

Crossed-out and written over words, dates, and little phrases can all change the outcome of the will's intention.

Photocopies of a will are not valid. It must be the original. If the original is missing, it may be assumed that the person tore up the original because he or she changed his or her mind.

Bunt said, "Make a will so that things go the way you want them to go. You need a will even if your liabilities exceed your assets.

"Mamma must write in the will where the English china goes or the state will divide the estate equally among all children."

The estate dwindles with attorney charges and taxes.

Wording in a will is extremely important. If a person wills $10,000 to a church with the remaining to be divided among the children, it is possible that the church will get more than the children, because the full amount of $10,000 is given to the church after taxes are withheld, but the children only receive what is left after taxes.

According to Bunt, share and share alike doesn't mean all assets must be sold to distribute assets evenly among children. Reasonable accommodations can be made if all agree to divide the remains the way they want.

"If all beneficiaries agree, they need to sign a release receipt. If they don't agree, they must follow the will to the T and sell everything," Bunt said.

Having a will does not necessarily save you taxes. If you are given $100,000, you will pay a $6,000 tax.

"Although you pay the same tax, the process of writing a will helps in the planning, and the planning process can save tax," said Bunt, who said that attorneys can advise how money can be distributed ahead of time to save tax.

Pennsylvania has three different tax rates: 0 percent on anything that is given to charity and up to $625,000 given to the surviving spouse (tax above the $625,000 can be 37 percent; 6 percent tax to that given to children and grandchildren; and 15 percent tax to that given to brothers and sisters).

Federal government doesn't tax below limit but up to 55 percent above the limit.

Bunt also stressed the importance of having the power of attorney be a person living in the state where the benefactor is a resident to save a lot of legal headaches.

For more information on simple wills, call the Pennsylvania Bar Association at 1-800-932-0311.

Craft Show

RUTGERS, N.J. — The Sixth Annual Breath of Spring Craft Show will be held on Saturday, March 20, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Hunterdon County Extension Center on Route 31 North in Flemington. Admission is $1. This show is made up of excellent crafters, and much more.

Make it a family day! There will be hands-on crafts for the children to make and a visit from the Easter Bunny. Also available will be a variety of spring plants, baked goods and a delicious lunch menu. This event benefits the New Jersey State 4-H Association.

Learn About Native People Of The Susquehanna

YORK, (York Co.) – Exploring the native people of the Susquehanna River basin is the focus of the first in a series of new cultural interpretation programs coming during 1999 to Nixon County Park's Nature Center.

"History of the Susquehanna People" comes to Nixon County Park's Nature Center on March 14, from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. The program is free and open to anyone.

The program, a lecture, will focus on the native peoples who inhabited the Susquehanna River basin during the course of time. Dr. Barry Kent, former archeologist for the State Museum and author of "Susquehanna's People" will lead the lecture. Kent's book looked the archeological evidence of who has lived in the Susquehanna valley before and after European settlement of the "New World".

For more information on this program contact Nixon County Park's Nature Center at (717) 428-1961.

Agriculture For The New Millennium

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Change is a word that keeps cropping up in agricultural seminars for years.

Despite how often farmers hear the word, how necessary it is in order to continue a viable farming operation, and how many instructions are taught to incorporate change doesn't make it any easier to take that first step away from "doing things like we always did."

In fact, a survey conducted by Farm Progress Companies recently showed that only two percent of farmers who were taught how to change marketing and mangement techniques actually took steps to adapt to agricultural's changing climate.

Challenges to break out of the mold and to prepare for the new millennium were addressed during an all-day First Union agri-education seminar held Feb. 25, at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster.

Keynote speaker Sara Wyant, vice president of Farm Progress Companies in Illinois, spoke of nationwide farming trends and of the challenge to face them during the next millennium.

Dr. Bernard Erven

Wyant reported that a survey of 1,700 farmers revealed a concensus of the following seven trends:

- Farms are getting larger.
- Agribusinesses are becoming larger. Consolidation of many businesses increases fears that any control over price and resources are being removed from production farmers.
- Farm families are specializing more and hiring more advisers and consultants to help them.
- More niche farming. At the same time, farmers who attain a niche in value-added products are having a more difficult time maintaining that niche because of being undercut by another farming operation.
- Global understanding increased. While international trade offers opportunities, it is also brings puzzling events and increased concerns, such as the Asian flu.
- Risk management. Crucial concerns on how to lower risk from such events as unpredictable weather that affects crops and animals.
- Willingness to protect biotechnology but wary of how it affects export customers.

These trends affect farmers, Wyant said, because of the direct correlation needed to embrace change and profitability.

"If you continue farming as you did in the past, few of you will be left," Wyant warned.

All the great ideas in the world mean nothing if you can't execute them, Wyant said.

Another survey showed that 65 percent of the farmers said they had been given great information to incorporate change in their operation and that change was necessary. Of that 65 percent, 50 percent made no plans to change and said they would deal with it when it came. While 13 percent said they were excited about the future, only two percent made actual plans to change.

Wyant said that it is no secret that farming hasn't had many good years and that she sees tough times ahead for many. "But there is a reason some farmers can afford to send their children to college and buy a new tractor. It has nothing to do with the government," she said.

Instead farmers who are profitable make market decisions in order to capture value and profitability.

"Who are you?" she asked. "A farmer who makes things happen? A farmer who watches things happen? Or, one who wonders what happen?"

One of the most informative yet entertaining parts of the program was a debate by two prominent agricultural economists. In previous debates, H. Louis Moore of Penn State and Dr. Barry Flinchbaugh of Kansas State University argued opposing viewpoints. Surprisingly they found they agreed on much about what they forsee during the 1999 economy.

While the textbook insists that inflation and low unemployment cannot exist at the same time, the present economy shows that both can. Moore said that he believes the unlikely coexistants are made possible by the availability of cheap imports.

"The economy is prospering because we have the benefit of cheap raw materials," Flinchbaugh said. "Considering the dollar value and the price of gas, it is the cheapest it has been since 1943. In addition the percentage of income paid for food is lower than ever for consumers."

Exports to Russia, Brazil, and Indonesia have been "basket cases," and Moore said that future prospects for these countries are more of the same. He reminded the audience that last year, Flinchbaugh had predicted Russia would recover within the year.

"I was wrong," said Flinchbaugh, who no longer considers Russia a key player in trade. He said Russia's inability to recover was due to politicians who couldn't have done any worse. He reminded the audience that a few years ago, Mexico had been in the same financial straits as Russia. Mexico has not only recovered and paid back the United States' loans with interest, but is now our number two customer.

Flinchbaugh said that it will take Russia a generation to recover financially. He believes the U.S. does not have any choice but to continue dumping money into Russia.

John Blanchfield

He said, "It's costly, but not as costly if we don't and they return to communism and the U.S. needs to build a defense against them."

With European markets accusing the U.S. of producing "Frankenstein foods" (through biotechnology) and their continual erection of trade barriers, many farmers want to forget about exports. Flinchbaugh reminded them that if we isolate ourselves, one third of the farmers will go out of business because the U.S. only needs two thirds of the products farmers are supplying. Although exports are down, they are still above the average achieved during the last decade.

Both economists said that a serious question is who is going to control the gene pool since biotechnology is privatized and no longer university researched with tax dollars.

Neither economist believes that Y2K will pose significant problems.

While this era has achieved nine years of economical growth, which is the longest period of economic prosperity achieved during peace-time years, and some see a recession as imminent, Flinchbaugh doesn't see immediate danger. "We will see interest rate increase in 1999," he predicted.

Although many attribute Clinton with prosperity, both economists said that the success is more attributable to Greenspan, and it is more important who replaces Greenspan than who becomes the next president.

Although Clinton's moral behavior is in need of criticism, Flinchbaugh, who met with the president recently to discuss farm bill proposals, said that Clinton knows agriculture better than any president since Thomas Jefferson. Counter to many farmers' opinions, Flinchbaugh said that "Farmers have more political influence now than they had 20 years ago. Farmers are better organized, farmers better understand their position, and farmers are well represented in Washington."

Moore projected a reasonable market for livestock producers during the next year. During the '90s, grain did better than livestock. Excess grain inventories and low prices enable farmers to pay less feed costs, allowing more profitable livestock profits.

While milk prices will fall, dairy farmers will still make money because of cheap feed costs, Moore predicted. He also sees the pork industry recovering during the second half of the year.

Both economists agreed that the three keys to future success are exports, valued-added commodities, and technology.

John Blanchfield, manager of American Bankers Association in Washington, D.C., cautioned farmers to avoid the mentality that they are not in control of agriculture and can't do anything about it.

He outlined 10 tips to help farmers deal with tough times on the farm:

- If a new item can not create enough new cash flow to pay for itself over a reasonable period of time, defer the purchase.
- Maintain a farm budget for all income and expenses.
- Is it possible to sell any farm or non-farm assets that are not contributing to the financial health of the farm and family finances?
- Examine long-term and short-term debt. Ask your banker for financial advice.
- Have current inventories, cash flows, and balance sheets ready for review with your banker.
- Ask your banker about the USDA's guaranteed loan program. If your banker doesn't know about it, go to your local USDA Farm Service Agency to find out how it works.
- Review hazard and fire insurance coverage.
- Examine life insurance policies for provisions to borrow against it.
- Talk to your banker early and often about financial problems. You are a team.
- Maintain a clear perspective by taking time off.

Dr. H. Louis Moore

Dr. Bernard Erven, Ohio State University, taught about transferring the farm to the next generation.

With lots of anecedotes, Erven explained that planning must include legal, financial, and human relationship viewpoints.

When transferring, no formula exists to guarantee success because no two families are alike. However, guidelines to take into consideration can help ease the difficult task. Check with your county extension office for more information.

State FFA officer Travis Donough and Janine Leaman, 4-H representative, each shared how the organization is preparing them for the next millennium.

Sponsored by First Union Bank, Jan Armfield, regional president, said that the seminar demonstrates the bank's continual commitment to agriculture. It was the 18th annual ag-seminar sponsored by First Union (formerly CoreStates Bank).

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Go ahead.

Laugh if you like. But I happen to like this hat.

"Mom, how long have you had that hat?" asked our son a few weeks ago, a mix of wonderment and exasperation evident in his voice.

"Funny you would ask," I grinned. "I was just telling someone not too long ago, how you kids threatened to burn this hat 20 years ago."

Go ahead. Laugh at my old, bright red, fuzzy, shapeless, sawdust and straw-bit decorated barn hat.

I happen to like this hat.

Where it originally came from, I haven't the slightest clue. But it's comfortable. It's roomy. Not tight on your head like so many of the ski-type hats that leave you feeling like you were wearing a vise around your ears. And I do need something to cover my ears, since they are susceptible to irritation from cold drafts. About the only time I catch colds is if I've been running about in the wind with my bare ears exposed to the chill.

My mom says it's because I had a very severe ear infection as a child. The Farmer claims it's because the draft goes straight through the hole in my head connecting my ears. Whatever. But the shapeless, fuzzy, bright red hat goes back on my head for winter barn use.

If I could find a similar one in a darker color, say black or dark brown or navy blue, I'd grab it up in a minute. But I've never found another warm, wooly-type winter hat this loose and comfy. Let's face it, this hat has become my barnwork, wintertime security blanket.

It's actually the finishing touch for my stylish and colorful wintertime barn garb. Indeed, my barn-chores wardrobe selections come from the most discriminating collections of hand-me-downs from my kids (or would those be considered hand-me-ups?), clothes outgrown or unwanted by others and individual pieces selected from the most discriminating local thrift and consignment shops.

Face it. Why would anyone pay a day's salary for a pair of jeans one intended to purposely don for exposure to mud, manure, splattered milk, and chlorine? The mud, manure and milk are alone hard enough on clothes. When we began a year or so ago pre-dipping our girls' udders with a chlorinated solution prior to milking, for sanitation and anti-bacterial purposes, it really pulled the plug on any ideas about fine barnyard fashions.

Because every garment one wears to milk will, within a few days, look like something yanked right off the racks from the tie-dyed, hippie-era of the 1960s.

Bright denim blue-jeans promptly become pock marked with round, chlorine-splatter-spots of varying sizes, especially prominent on the front of the legs, from approximately the knee to the hip area. Colorful T-shirts, flannel shirts and sweatshirts boast similar splotchy, camouflage-type splatters, especially in the front waist and lower torso areas.

But the splotches can actually turn up anywhere on the garments, since occasionally one of the girls will lift a foot and bump the dipper, effectively splattering the chlorine solution over the human form from head to toe. Or the dipper holding the solution may fall to the floor, splashing its small amount of solution onto one's clothing in similar fashion.

Regardless of how the chlorine gets there, it leaves its indelible mark on garment fabrics Which ultimately will wash out into holes after several trips through the laundry

Thus, I favor cheap, thrift-shop purchases of faded stone-washed jeans, light colored T-shirts and gray-shades sweatshirts, which, while terribly boring, at least don't show the bleached spots nearly as bad as bright ones. Topped with the fuzzy, shapeless, red hat which has yet to show traces of a single chlorine-splatter residue

The hat, kids — short of burning — is indestructible.

Dairy Of Distinction Program Again Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) - Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your dairy farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, and New Jersey, will consider your farm for the program's annual recognition awards.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania to recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms. The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, and increase their sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of buildings, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from a roadside point of view. Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during your local June Dairy Month activities.

To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

For New York State applications are available from Carol Keene, RD 1, Box 31, Gilbertsville, NY 13776. Phone: (607) 783-2169.

For New Jersey applications, send to: August Knispel, 641 Sidney Road, Pittstown, NJ 08867. Phone: (908) 735-4989.

For Vermont applications, send to: Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State St., Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 1999.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by Dairy Farmers through the American Dairy Association Dairy Council and Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from Penn State Cooperative Extensi.on.

Dairy of Distinction 1999 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead.

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award. Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18" x 24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm.

Dairy of Distinction

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance and other factors which can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for awards agree that; if selected they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to NEDFBP secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

1). The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Committee.
2). The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer. It is suggested that a wood post 4' x 4' x 12' or iron pipe 2' x 12' be used. Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground. Top of the bracket shou'd be lower than six inches from the top of the post.
3). Sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside. An attractive post and bracket, or other frame, shall be used to display the sign. No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage.
4). Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign.
5). Replacement of damaged signs shall be the discretion of the committee.
6). No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expense
7). Judges' decisions will be final.
8). Judging will take place between May 1st and May 31st
9) Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1st and April 30th. If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1st and May 31st so they have the opportunity to keep the sign
10). Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee.

You ask You answer

This column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for answers.

"You Ask—You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and Answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask—You Answer, Lancaster Farming, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522. Attention: Lou Ann Good.

Do not send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply. If we receive the answer, we will publish it as soon as possible. Please include your phone number because we sometimes need to contact the person to clarify details. We will not publish your phone number unless you request it.

Dangers Of Rice

Did you know that rice can harbor a foodborne pathogen? A few months ago, several extension agents woke up in the middle of the night with vomiting and diarrhea after eating a Chineses dinner. I was surprised to find the culprit was quite possibly the bacteria Bacillus cereus.

Although uncooked rice is one of the most frequent sources, B. cereus can be found in different foods. B. cereus is particularly hearty and can survive cooking. If cooked rice is held at room temperature, surviving bacteria may multiply and produce a heat-stable toxin that can survive acidic conditions and brief reheating, such as in stir-frying.

Sometimes restaurants cool large batches of rice to room temperature because the cooks believe that refrigeration makes the rice sticky, yielding a less desirable fried rice. Unfortunately, cooling foods at room temperature creaates ideal conditions for the organism to grow and create a toxin.

Pat Kendall, a nutrition specialist from Colorado State University, tells of an outbreak involving a catered lunch served to children in two day care centers. Cooked rice was cooled to room temperature before being placed in the refrigerator. The next morning, it was pan-fried in oil with pieces of cooked chicken and delivered to the day care centers where it was held for one and one-half hours before being served. Within six hours, 14 of the 67 children and staff who ate the fried rice became ill with nausea, vomiting, abdominal cramps, and diarrhea. B. cereus was isolated as the culprit. Neither the day care staff nor the restaurant food handlers were aware that cooked rice can be a potentially hazardous food.

Luckily, B. cereus food poisoning, usually only lasts six to 24 hours and is seldom associated with long-term complications. Regardless, any form of food poisoning is best avoided.

To prevent B. cereus food poisoning, treat rice as you would a cooked meat product. Refrigerate leftovers promptly in shallow containers to encourage rapid cooling. If you are cooking rice for use later as fried rice, refrigerate the cooked rice in shallow containers within one hour of preparation. Keep cooked rice refrigerated until ready to stir-fry. Once prepared, keep fried rice hot (above 140 degrees Fahrenheit) until you are ready to serve it.

Farm Women Societies

York Society 11

YORK (York Co.) — York Society 11 of Farm Women met at the home of Dorothy Sheffer with 19 members attending. President Naomi Bupp called the meeting to order. Program chairpersons Ellie Bupp and Hester Keeney led the group in scripture and prayer. Members answered roll call by responding with a Valentine poem or verse. Some responses were from memories and others were personally written by members. Members sang "Love's Old Sweet Song."

A reading, "The Miracle Heart," was read by Ellie and a game, "The Flowers Wedding," was enjoyed by all members.

Special speakers included Annie who explained the Y2K problem and what people should do to reduce problems.

The state Spring Rally will be held at the Holiday Inn West, Harrisburg, on May 12 with Cumberland County as host. Fourteen members of Society 11 plan to attend.

Berks Society 4

The Society of Farm Women Berks County Group 4 met on Feb. 9 at the home of Charlotte Mauger, Gilbertsville, to celebrate Valentine's Day with a gift exchange and an assortment of red foods.

The business meeting was conducted by Elsie Rothenberger.

New program books were distributed to members. Elsie Rothenberger reported that Berks Heim purchased VCR's with donations and videos are now needed. Berks Heim Bingo is April 8.

Reservations for the Farm Women Spring Rally in Mechanicsburg, May 12, are needed by April 26. Tickets are $15 per person.

The Ways and Means Committee will sell Stanley products in April. The Society's annual yard sale is Sat. June 26.

The next meeting will be March 2 at the home of Mary Fizz, Boyertown. The program will be about DARE. Bring aluminum cans to support this program.

Berks Society 6

Berks County Society 6 of Farm Women met for lunch at Pizza Hut on Feb. 16. Seven members attended and then went to the home of Dorothy Wagner for a brief meeting.

Marian Gehris and Naomi Mest will attend the meeting concerning the Oley Community Pot Pie Dinner. Naomi Mest is in charge of obtaining a bus for the Spring Rally in May.

President Karen Hoffman presented information about the dinner theater "Christmas in the Country," which members plan to attend Nov. 14.

York Society 26

York Society 26 of Farm Women held its January meeting at the home of Cathy Sholly with Margie Knotts helping as hostess. Thirteen members attended.

Vice president Jan Sechler conducted the business meeting. The by-laws were read and amended. Reports were given by delegates to the state convention.

A bus trip is planned to see "Noah" on April 29.

The February meeting was held at Hillside Cafe. Mary Lantz and Martha Yost were hostesses and 13 members attended the meeting.

Plans are made to tour the Governor's mansion on May 4 to celebrate the group's 33rd anniversary.

Want To Farm?

RUTGERS, N.J. — Have you ever contemplated starting a small farming enterprise or examined the feasibility of developing a rural based business? If you have and did not know where to begin then you will certainly want to make plans to attend the Penn Jersey Extension Partnership program in March entitled, "So You Want To Farm."

Penn Jersey members have assembled a three-night educational series designed for part-time producers to assist them in assessing and designing the framework needed to make correct decisions from a business approach. The first two evenings will explore a step by step process designed to help you to assess personal, family, and business goals, how to inventory your resources, research local and regional markets; analyze production feasibility, profitability, and cash flow for an enterprise, and to make accurate final decisions. The last evening of the three-night session will feature breakout sessions based on participant interests where specific subject related enterprises will be discussed by people already farming.

Two of the three evening sessions will be held at the Hunterdon County Extension office on March 9 and 16. The final session will be held at the Holiday Inn in Stroudburg, Pennsylvania just off of I 80 west. The final evening will bring together all the participants from the Hunterdon along with the participants from the two Pennsylvania locations.

The program will require preregistration and will cost $30 per person for all three sessions and includes a notebook of handout materials and refreshments.

Each session will begin at 7 p.m. except for the first week, which will start at 6:30 p.m. for registration purposes. For the New Jersey session call (908) 788-1339 and request a program brochure and registration information. In Pennsylvania call (610) 746-1970

Fiber Up Your Diet!

Since March is National Nutrition Month, what better time to discuss fiber and its importance in a healthy diet. Let's begin by explaining what we mean by fiber and how to get it.

What is Fiber?

Fiber is the indigestible part of plant foods. If you look at the Food Guide Pyramid, you'll find fiber in the grains, fruit, and vegetable groups, all of which come from plants. But you will not find any fiber in the meat or dairy group since animal foods like meat, eggs, milk, and cheese are all animal-based foods.

Isn't all fiber the same?

No. Actually, there are two types of fiber. Insoluble fiber is what Grandma called "roughage." It's the structural parts of plants such as fruit and vegetable skins and the outer bran coating of wheat kernels. Soluble fiber dissolves and thickens in water to from gels. It includes oat bran, dried beans, oatmeal, barley, broccoli, and citrus fruits.

What does fiber do for you?

• Insoluble fiber can help to prevent constipation, relieve hemorrhoids, and prevent diverticular disease. Because fiber absorbs water, stools tend to be softer and bulkier, preventing strained bowel movements. Fiber acts like nature's broom, quickly moving wastes through the intestinal tract, creating a sort of "rapid transit" system in the body. This also means there's less time for us to be exposed to cancer-causing substances in the body. Fiber in the intestines attaches to some of the carcinogens, "escorting" them out of our body. Because fiber absorbs water, it dilutes cancer-causing agents in the intestines. Thus insoluble fiber can also help reduce your risk of cancer, especially colorectal cancer.

• Soluble fiber can be a real help to those with heart disease and diabetes. It can lower one's blood cholesterol level by reducing both the amount of cholesterol produced in the liver and the amount of fat and cholesterol absorbed into the body. At the same time, it increases the amount of cholesterol excreted. Soluble fiber can help control blood sugar in diabetics by slowing down the release of sugar from foods into the blood stream. This helps curb erratic swings in blood sugar levels. By helping to lower fasting blood sugar levels as much as 40 percent, fiber may decrease the amount of insulin or medication needed to maintain desirable blood sugar levels.

• High fiber foods can also help you keep your weight under control. Because insoluble fiber absorbs water like a sponge, it makes your stomach feel full. Soluble fiber foods stay in the stomach longer, delaying hunger. Thus you are less likely to nibble too soon after eating. Also, high fiber foods tend to be lower in fat and calories.

Finally high fiber foods take longer to chew so you may eat less. For example, it takes longer to eat an orange than to drink the juice.

How much fiber do we need?

The American Dietetic Association recommends that after age 20, we get 20 to 35 grams of fiber a day (or 10 to 13 grams dietary fiber per 1,000 calories). But most Americans get only 10-15 grams a day. (For children older than two years, the recommendation is an amount equal to or greater than their age plus 5 grams a day. There are no defined desirable fiber intakes for infants and children younger than two years, so simply introduce a variety of fruits, vegetables, and easily digested cereals as solid foods are brought into the diet.)

To get the recommended amount of fiber, each day eat a minimum of five servings of fruits and vegetables (three or more vegetables and two or more fruits). This gives you 10-15 grams of fiber. (One serving of vegetables equals one cup of salad greens, ½ cup of other vegetables. One serving of fruit equals a medium size piece of fruit or ½ cup of cut-up fruit.) You also need six or more servings of grains (rice, bread, cereals, pasta) a day. This gives you 12 grams of fiber. (One serving of grains equals one slice of bread, ½ bun or English muffin or bagel, ½ cup cooked cereal, rice or pasta, or one ounce ready-to-eat cereal.) Go for the whole grains like wheat, rye.

Always compare fiber content on the "Nutrition Facts" panel of the food label, especially on breads and cereals. Sometimes coloring is added to brown breads to make them dark. On the ingredients list, look for "whole wheat flour" as the first ingredient. If it lists "wheat flour" first, that's simply refined white flour, with little fiber.

How should you add fiber to your diet?

• Increase fiber gradually, over several months, to give your digestive tract time to adjust. Too much too fast can cause gas, cramps, and diarrhea. Begin by substituting part whole wheat flour for refined flour, fruits, and vegetables with the skins on for juice, brown or wild rice for white, popcorn (air-popped and unbuttered) or crunchy raw vegetables for chips, whole wheat and rye bread for white bread, bean soups for cream soups, baked potatoes with the skin on for mashed, mixed greens or fruit salad for jello, etc.

Try to include some fiber in every meal — not just breakfast. Eat fresh fruit for dessert and snacks. Enjoy fruits with edible seeds such as berries, kiwi, and figs. Add fresh or dried fruits to cereals, breads, cookies, etc. Add beans, barley, brown rice to soups and stews. Add pinto beans to tacos and tossed salads. Compare the fiber content of cereals by checking out the food label. Try mixing bran cereals in with regular cereals.

• Remember, fresh is best. Fiber is often removed in processing. Raw apples contain more fiber than the juice or sauce where the skin is removed. One apple with the skin contains four grams of fiber while ½ cup sauce has only 2 grams and ¾ cup juice only 0.2 grams fiber. Similarly 1 cup whole wheat flour has 15 grams fiber while one cup white flour has only 4 grams of fiber.

• Eat a variety of high-fiber foods. Because soluble and insoluble fibers have different functions in the body, a healthy diet needs to include both types of fiber. And since foods vary in amounts and types of fiber, get your dietary fiber from a variety of foods — whole grains, legumes (dried peas and beans), fresh fruits and vegetables.

• Drink plenty of water (six to eight cups per day). Since fiber absorbs large amounts of water, a high fiber diet can actually constipate if not accompanied by enough fluid. Also fluids can help reduce intestinal gas.

How do we know if we're getting enough fiber?

If your bowel movements are large, soft, and easy to pass, you're probably getting enough fiber. But if they're small, hard, and difficult to pass, more fiber plus water may help.

What happens if you get too much fiber? (over 50-60 grams a day)?

Too much fiber can move food through the digestive tract too quickly — faster than some nutrients can be absorbed, flushing them out of your system. This may decrease the amount of vitamins and minerals your body absorbs such as calcium, zinc, iron, and magnesium. Also, if you fill up with too many high fiber foods, you may not have enough room left to eat other nutrient-rich foods such as dairy products and meats. And of course, too much fiber can cause gas, diarrhea, and bloating. Always remember that the cornerstone of a healthy diet is threefold: "Balance, variety, and moderation."

Build Strong Families

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — "Building Strong Families: A Seminar for People Who Make a Difference" is the theme of a one-day seminar planned for human service providers and others who find themselves in the helping role. Participants of the seminar will receive educational information and resource materials that may be used to help improve both their own and their clients' quality of life.

Sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension of Bradford, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, and Wyoming counties, the seminar will be offered at two sites: Tuesday, April 13 at the Shadowbrook Resort and Conference Center in Tunkhannock and Wednesday, April 14 at the Best Western Grand Victorian Inn in Sayre.

Participants will have the opportunity to select to attend three workshoips from 12 offerings. The workshops will be presented by educators from Penn State Cooperative Extension, human service agencies, health organizations, and the judiciary.

Workshop topics include: children and violence, facts about Satanism, leadership development, volunteer management, exercise, healthy meals for people on the go, and a money management curriculum for use with very low income families. Other topics include hate issues, stress management, personal safety, diversity issues, sparking up newsletters and announcements, and food safety featuring a portable kitchen model.

Cost for the seminar is $35 per person which includes morning snack, hot buffet lunch, educational materials and program expenses. Each participant will receive 0.5 Continuing Education Units from Penn State University. Continuing education credit for social workers has been applied for and is pending.

Paid registration is required by Tuesday, March 23. Persons interested in attending the seminar may request an informational brochure and registration form from Cathy Guffey, family living agent at the Bradford County Extension Office, 701 South Fourth Street, Towanda, PA 18848, phone (570) 265-2896, fax (570) 265-4371, or e-mail BradfordExt@psu.edu.

Rural Communities Are Potential Victims Of Medigap Loss

CAROL ANN GREGG
Special To Lancaster Farming

GROVE CITY (Mercer Co.) — The Bipartisan Commission on the Future of Medicare, appointed by Congress, is meeting to discuss ways to sustain the Medicare system for future generations of seniors. Medicare has no doubt been one of the most successful government programs in our nation's history. It has helped provide access to quality, affordable health coverage for millions of seniors who otherwise would be unable to meet staggering health care costs. Yet, the program's long term viability is not assured.

Unfortunately, the commission is considering a plan that could harm millions of seniors. Their design could increase out-of-pocket costs and jeopardize the accessibility and choice that seniors want and expect. If adopted, their strategy would either eliminate or tax Medigap insurance.

Medigap is supplemental insurance that covers Medicare's high out-of-pocket expenses. Abolishing Medigap insurance is a bad idea because one of the best ways to ensure that seniors are protected from exposure to high out-of-pocket expenses is to preserve a vibrant Medigap market. Eliminating Medigap would leave seniors with traditional fee-for-service Medicare coverage without the option of buying supplemental coverage. Furthermore, for some groups, like seniors in rural areas, Medigap often is the only protection against out-of-pocket expenses.

Rural communities and their seniors are particularly vulnerable if Medigap insurance is no longer available. These areas many times already suffer from limited access to needed health care. If seniors in small towns and rural areas no longer have the ability to purchase Medigap insurance, they may not have the means to avail themselves to the services and prescriptions they need for a healthy life. This will have the usual ripple impact on the rural business districts, medical practices and rural hospitals.

Commission members need only look at the facts: nearly nine out of 10 Medicare beneficiaries — some 30 million Americans — have some sort of Medigap coverage. And, a July 1998 report by the US Department of Health and Human Services Inspector General found a satisfaction rate of nearly 90 percent among Medigap consumers.

Eliminating Medigap insurance policies would cause serious disruption of currently valued coverage. It would force the millions of beneficiaries with Medigap coverage to go without supplemental benefits. Also, phasing out Medigap policies would certainly be inappropriate when prospects for Medicare reform to expand private coverage options remain so uncertain. Even with enactment of such reforms, the programs must preserve reasonable coverage options for beneficiaries not willing or able to enroll in private managed care plans.

Instead of eliminating what works, the commission should first identify the problems that have led to Medicare's financial jeopardy. Firing the "mechanic" before identifying the problem will harm the majority of seniors enrolled in the traditional fee-for-service Medicare program.

Carol Ann Gregg, Grove City, Pa., is president of American Agri-Women, a coalition of individual members as well as 52 farm, ranch and agri-business organization. AAW is recognized by the Business Women's Network as one of the top 12 business women's organizations in the United States.

Pruning Ornamentals Keeps Garden On Cutting Edge

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Every year gardeners should step back, look at their plantings and formulate a pruning plan that will keep the ornamentals looking their best, says a gardening expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Pruning should start as soon as you have the plants in the ground," said Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture. "You can shorten long stems and encourage branching to increase the density and volume of new plants."

Most landscape plants should be lightly pruned every few years. "If you prune hard every year to keep a plant to a certain size in your landscape, it's better to replace that plant with one that has growth characteristics better suited to the site," Nuss said.

All gardeners, should understand the difference between pruning and shearing.

• Pruning means gardeners individually cut each branch or twig they mean to remove. Larger pieces are removed at specific locations on the plant.

• Shearing removes one to two inches of growth from the entire plant.

Before pruning, consider the properties of the plant. Look at its natural form, growth habits, growth rate, height, spread and flowering time.

Gardeners should prune if:

• There are any dead, diseased, injured or insect-damaged parts.

• There is a need to make the plant less dense, or open the center for light and air flow.

• The plant needs rejuvenation.

• A special shape is desired, such as hedges or topiaries.

• Dead flower clusters and seed pods must be removed.

Nuss says savvy gardeners should use one of three pruning methods.

• Rejuvenation. This is the most severe pruning method. Used on older plants that have grown too large or woody, this approach removes the oldest branches at or near ground level, leaving only young stems. Pruning old wood on shrubs will stimulate the growth of new wood. The newer wood will have better flowers and form.

"If there aren't many young stems, remove about one-third of the older wood each season over three years." Nuss said. "New growth will have to be pruned to encourage some branching and to retain the quality and density of the plant."

• Thinning. These pruning cuts are done by removing entire twigs or branches where they attach to the main stem. It is the least conspicuous pruning plan. By cutting the inward-growing twigs, the remaining growth will fill in the outside of the plant. This method is best used on very dense plants.

• Heading Back. This method reduces the height or size of the plant. Branches or twigs are cut back to a bud or emerging side branch. The shape of the plant is controlled by the location of the bud at the end of the cut. An inward-pointing bud will make the plant denser; an outward-pointing bud will do the opposite.

Nuss warns that heading back stimulates the development of smaller shoots and dense growth, particularly if every branch is headed back. Nuss recommends heading back just 30 percent of a plant's longest branches in a growing season.

Shrubs that flower in the spring should be pruned after they bloom. Plants that flower in mid- and late summer should be pruned in the spring before growth starts. Any fall pruning should be done after the plant is dormant. But keep pruning at this time of year to a minimum.

"If flowers aren't important to the plant, as in the case of needle evergreens, it's better to prune when the plant is just breaking dormancy in spring," he said. "Minus its foliage, the problem parts of the plant are easily seen."

Single copies of Penn State's Special Circular 235, "Pruning Ornamental Plants," are available free of charge by contacting your county Penn State Cooperative Extension office or by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

What's New at Vermeer?

DISCPRO™
MOWER CONDITIONER

It's the way disc mower conditioners should run.

With The Exclusive Vermeer® DynaGuard™ Protection System

- Exclusive, All-New Lift-Spring Suspension dramatically reduces structural fatigue caused by rocks and immovable obstacles
- Torsion Flex Drive System absorbs shock from high impacts, more protection for the cutter bar gears and hex shaft
- Segmented TRI-SHAFT Driveline cuts service time and costs
- Double wide skids eliminate stone pinch points
- Friction, over-running clutch, placed as close as possible to the element it's designed to protect the cutter bar
- Austemper, heat-treated reversible knives for greater shatter resistance Removable cutting discs for quick, easy repairs
- Thinner cutter bar cross-section cuts closer than ever
- Center-pivot lets you cut from either side of the tractor

SUPERFLOW FERTILIZER SPREADERS

Vicon SUPERFLOW SEEDER

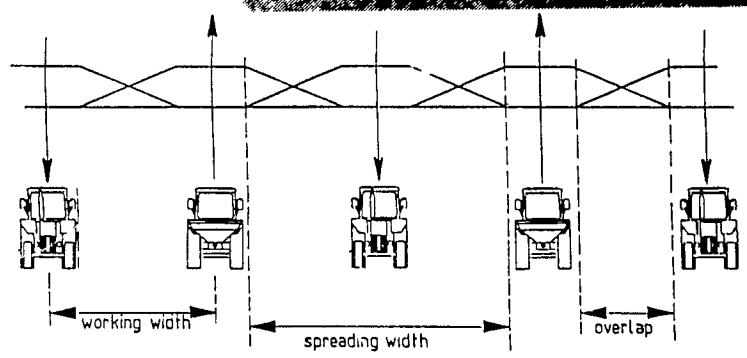
Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.



The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Vicon

Seeder spreaders are easily calibrated for extremely accurate performance.

Stop By Your Nearest Vicon Dealer and See First Hand Why They're Worth The Investment

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

John Deere 6000 TEN Series Tractors

	S525 REQUIREMENTS	JOHN DEERE PROTECTION
1 Particulate filtration efficiency	Filter must have at least 99% efficiency against a particle size of 3 0 microns (an extreme standard since most pesticide droplets are about 25 microns)	John Deere UltraGard XL HEPA high-efficiency particulate air filter provides 99 97% efficiency against a particle size of 0 3 microns – a particle 10 times smaller than that specified in the S525 requirement
2 Vapor adsorption capacity	Filter must prevent vapor breakthrough for at least 30 minutes in an accelerated test defined by the standard	In laboratory tests the UltraGard XL filters lasted an average of twice the time required in S525
3 Cab protection factor	The cab must provide at least a 50 1 reduction of 3 0 micron particles	In university tests the John Deere ComfortGard cab exceeded the S525 requirement by at least 34% in all tests
4 Cab pressure	The cab must provide at least 0 25-inch of pressure with a new filter and recommended blower speed	John Deere s factory-observed tests show that cab pressure ranges from 0 50 to 0 90 inches again significantly surpassing the S525 requirement It is important to note that pressure can drop based on filter loading and seal problems so John Deere provides a gauge for monitoring cab pressure

Note Operator must follow instructions for cab entry exit and servicing Does not protect against fumigants or anhydrous ammonia The Pesticide Protection Package is not available for 6000 Series Tractors manufactured before January 1998

Introducing the ComfortGard™ cab equipped with the John Deere Pesticide Protection Package, only on John Deere 65- to 90-hp 6000 TEN Series Tractors. It's the first integrated tractor cab to meet and exceed the EPA-endorsed ASAE standard S525 requirements for cabs. That means you can spray at full application without the need for personal protective equipment, such as a respirator.

The package includes a special UltraGard™ XL cab filter and cab pressure indicator. When the pressure indicator is in the green zone, your cab is meeting the requirements of standard S525.

With the John Deere Pesticide Protection Package, we've got you covered. Step inside the exclusive Spray-Ready ComfortGard cab today at your John Deere dealership.

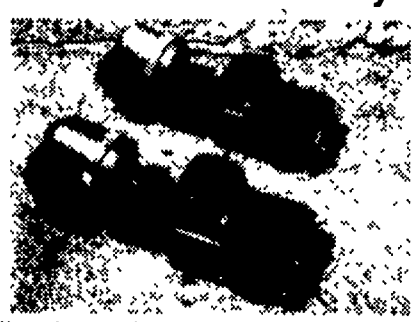
PUBLIC TOY AUCTION
PUBLIC TRAIN AUCTION
10 AM SATURDAY, MARCH 13, 1999
RIDGE FIRE COMPANY
Along Rt. 23, Between Phoenixville, PA and Rt. 100
Exhibition: Fri. Eve. 7-9 and 8-10 A.M. Sale Day



The toy auction features a private collection of 200 cement trucks from around the world. Old & new, they represent a 20 year effort to build a visually interesting display of variations. Also selling Hess trucks, First Gear, Ertl, Eastwood, and many others. Special Mention: Ertl Texaco truck banks no. 1-3-4-5-6-7-8-9-11-12-13. A neat 400 lots.

In the pavillion, we have some of the best looking Lionel trains that we have seen for some time. These trains are "real" Lionels from right before and right after the war, and many of the sets are still in their original boxes. Second half of the auction is like new trains from 1970 to 1990, strictly O.B.

A 10% Buyers Premium Will Be Applied.

PHOTOPERIOD REGIMENS AND BROILER PERFORMANCE

Magdi M. Mashaly
Associate Professor of Poultry Science

The manipulation of photoperiods in raising broiler chickens has largely consisted of maximizing body weight and improving feed efficiency Long photoperiods or constant lighting are believed to increase feed consumption because of continuous access to feed Consumption of feed is almost entirely restricted to the period of light, with a peak in feed consumption at the beginning or at the end of a photoperiod and little or no feeding occurring in during the dark period The amount of feed consumed during the dark period is less than one percent of that during the light period. Therefore, feed consumption varies due to the lighting schedule and chickens grown under intermittent lighting tend to have a reduced feed intake.

In addition to a change in feed consumption, decreases in metabolism have been observed at night A reduction in metabolism, a further reduction in body heat, and low physical activity during periods of darkness can lower energy expenditure and can increase body weight.

Lower metabolic rates not only improve production performance, but may also improve resistance to ascites An increase in metabolic rate predisposes birds to develop ascites Intermittent lighting has been shown to decrease mortality because of a decrease in ascites or heart problems when compared to birds reared under constant lighting Furthermore, both intermittent lighting and short photoperiods have been reported to decrease the incidence of leg abnormalities and spiking mortality syndrome. The health benefits of lighting schedules with long dark periods are believed to be partly due to melatonin levels Melatonin is a neural hormone that is increased during dark periods and accounts for a reduction in metabolism and energy expenditure

Interest in photoperiod alterations can be attributed to industrial efforts to reduce health problems, reduce costs, and increase profits. Recent experiments have shown that intermittent lighting regimens or decreasing periods of light can reduce feed intake and improve feed efficiency. Intermittent lighting, therefore, in addition to improving health status, has potential savings in feed usage and in the energy (electrical or gas) necessary to raise chickens A reduction in production costs, in addition to the production of healthier birds and possible increases in body weight, can make physiological manipulation very practical. We conducted experiments in our laboratory to examine production parameters such as body weight, feed efficiency, feed conversion, and percent mortality from birds grown in different photoperiod regimens and to establish that increasing the dark period does not adversely affect production performance

One-day-old commercial broiler chicks (Ross x Avian strain) were used in all studies The chicks were housed in floor pens and were divided into different photoperiod treatments. The photoperiod treatment were 23L:1D (constant lighting), 16L:8D, 12L:12D, 8L:16D, and 1L:3D (intermittent lighting). Body weight for each pen, feed consumption per pen, and percent mortality were measured weekly until six weeks of age Weekly and cumulative feed conversions were calculated. We found that photoperiod did not significantly affect body weight, feed consumption, and weekly and cumulative feed conversion. The body weights at the end of the six weeks for constant and intermittent lighting were 5.32 pounds (2.414 kilograms) and 5.12 pounds (2.323 kilograms) per bird respectively. Cumulative feed conversions for constant intermittent lighting were 1.887 and 1.885, respectively Intermittent lighting showed a three point decrease in feed conversion.

The effect of photoperiod on percent mortality indicated that constant lighting had the highest percent mortality (11.6 percent) and intermittent lighting had the lowest percent mortality at (8.72 percent). These results indicate that 16L:8D, 12L:12D, and 1L:3D photoperiod regimens have no adverse effect on body weight, feed consumption, feed conversion, and percent mortality when compared to constant lighting.

It can be concluded that by raising broiler chicks in increasing dark periods, production costs from energy usage can be reduced without altering production performance and possibly producing healthier birds.

Drop Spreader Made Of Steel

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Earth & Turf's SuprSeed™ is designed to spread a variety of materials such as granular herbicide, fertilizer, salt, seed, and pelletized lime The rugged all steel hopper is supported by a ¾ -inch axle agitator shaft. An optional lime bottom for spreading pulverized lime is available. Its on/off controls, operated from the seat of the tractor, can be calibrated to fine-tune spread depth and assure uniform distribution. The SuprSeed™ features a heavy-duty 12-guage steel construction with a powder-coated finish that resists corrosion. Units are available in 5- or 6-foot widths.

New Chemistry In Corn Herbicide

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Distinct® herbicide has received registration from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), offering corn growers a unique package of weed-control benefits as a result of new chemistry.

Distinct, a postemergence broadleaf herbicide for corn, will offer growers the following full-service package of benefits never before available in one product:

- Fast acting, begins to work in less than four hours
- Residual control through canopy closure with no carryover concerns
- Improved weed control ratings over conventional herbicides on a broad spectrum of both annual and perennial weeds, including lambsquarters, giant ragweed, velvetleaf and ALS- and triazine-resistant weeds. Distinct also has activity on grasses such as foxtail. These improved ratings are based on both university and BASF field-trial data.
- Stand-alone weed control. No tank mix is required with Distinct, so growers save time and money.

Distinct contains the new active ingredient, diflufenzopyr (dye-floo-fen-zo-peer), and is the first herbicide to be developed and marketed with the new semicarbazone class of chemistry.

This new chemistry is critical to corn producers' success, as they battle emerging weed patterns and weeds increasingly resistant to ALS and triazine herbicides. Distinct starts to work in as little as four hours and provides residual control for up to six weeks. Yield-robbing weeds are stopped quickly and completely, allowing corn plants to grow, canopy and minimize weed competition for nutrients, sunlight, and moisture.

Bernardi Heads Haytools Line

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland N.V. (NYSE:NH) announced that Robert A. Bernardi has been appointed vice president haytools and skid steer loader global product lines.

"With his knowledge of the hay tools business, and his good relationship with our dealer body, Bob Bernardi is the ideal person to maintain our position as market leader in hay tools across North America and expand our presence in Europe and Latin America," New Holland's Chief Technical Officer, Alberto Pianta, commented.

Bernardi replaces Allen R. Rider, who assumed the position of vice president, North American commercial operations on January 1, 1999. Rider maintains his position as president, New Holland North America. "When we launched the global product line structure, Bob Bernardi became the product manager for hay tools and was instrumental in the integration of our product development and marketing operations into a single global organization," Rider said. "I am very pleased to see him succeed me in the top job."

A graduate of the University of Michigan, Bob Bernardi joined predecessor company Ford Tractor Operations in 1972 as a sales and marketing trainee. During this career, Bernardi held a variety of management positions in both marketing and field sales. In 1989, Bernardi became branch manager of the company's Dallas Branch, and in 1993 he was appointed general manager, marketing, for New Holland North America. Recently he was product manager for hay tools worldwide.

Companies Award Corn Days Prizes

YORK (York Co.) — AgChoice Farm Credit and Messicks Farm Equipment announce the winners of the York and Adams County Corn Days prizes.

Leroy Hess and Kevin Clark were the grand prize winners of one week's free use of a New Holland tractor sponsored by AgChoice Farm Credit and Messick Equipment.

Hess works the family farm with his father in Dillsburg. Kevin Clark has a grain and beef farm in Airville.

More than 390 commercial farmers and trade people attended the meetings at the York County 4-H Center and York Springs Fire Hall.

Penn State extension personnel updated participants about the newest methods and inputs for increasing corn production in Pennsylvania. Hess and Clark will work with Curt Haldeman of Messick Equipment in Abbottstown to deliver the tractor to their farm for their use.

Second prize was a "Leatherman" tool. Wilbur Martin of Gettysburg and Frank Blessing of Red Lion won the ownership of these versatile tools.

DVM Joins Agway Agricultural Products

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — David Durr, president of Agway Agricultural Productsw Keystone Enterprise, has announced that Charles E. Gardner, DVM, has been appointed director of animal health and herd economics. Gardner's appointment is effective immediately.

"Agway is pleased to welcome Dr. Gardner to this position. With more than 25 years of dairy management expertise, he brings a wealth of practical experience to Agway. He will be an invaluable resource to our feed sales force and their customers," Durr said.

Gardner's responsibilities will focus on educating and training the Agway feed sales team in proper herd management and health care techniques. Gardner will also work in conjunction with the sales force to solve herd health management issues on farm. In addition, he will offer a consulting service to dairy farmers, keyed to dairy farm financial and labor management. He will also provide expertise in dairy farm expansion.

A popular and prolific writer, Gardner has published more than 500 columns on dairy herd management in numerous dairy and veterinary magazines. He is currently a contributing writer for Hoard's Dairyman, Farmshine, and DVM Magazine. He has also published five articles in The Compendium, a peer-reviewed veterinary journal.

A native of southern New Jersey, Gardner received his doctor of veterinary medicine degree from the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine at Cornell University in 1973. He has experience in large animal general practice, with emphasis on dairy and dairy herd management. For the past 10 years, he has owned and operated Dairy Management Consultants in Orefield. Gardner is also a staff veterinarian at Willow Creek Animal Hospital. His responsibilities there include a combination of traditional and herd management practice.

Gardner is a member of the American Association of Bovine practitioners, the Pennsylvania and American veterinary medical associations, the American Dairy Science Association, and the National Mastitis Council. He is also a member of the American Board of Veterinary Practitioners, and is one of only 20 veterinarians in the U.S. and Canada to be certified by that group as a diplomate in dairy practice.

The 1999 Master Farmers Presented

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The 65th Class of Master Farmers has been announced this week as the Cooperative Extensions of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and West Virginia along with Pennsylvania Farmer honor four outstanding farmers, two in Pennsylvania and two in Maryland. These awards have been given since 1927.

This year's Masters have a diverse mix of successful enterprises. Yet all share a numerous key personal traits: strong commitment to progressive business management, responsible land use and exemplary civic leadership. This year's winners are:

• Guy Donaldson from Orrtanna, expanded production and built a farm market to bring his three children into the business. Now, the Adams County fruitgrower leads Pennsylvania Farm Bureau.

• Charles and Paula Fry, Tuscarora, Md. built a combination dairy and turkey production business to better use land and labor resources. This younger couple are both in leadership roles in their church, Frederick County and Maryland.

• James and Louise Stup from Walkersville, Md., started from scratch and are completing the transition their business to their family. Both have been extensively involved in Frederick County ag organizations.

• Robert Trax, Finleyville, heads a large, multi-family farm market just outside Pittsburgh in Washington County. He's served numerous leadership roles in the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers industry.

James and Louise Stup

Guy Donaldson

Guy Donaldson grew up raising row crops, cattle, pigs and a few apples in western Adams County, Pa. The family converted to all fruit in the late 1950s, with Guy buying the Orrtanna farm from his aunt in the late '60s.

"My wife (Betty) and I worked like a son of a gun and paid it off in 10 years," he notes, recalling how they picked apples together. They weathered several consecutive years of short crops, depending on equity to see them through.

Donaldson calls himself an "eternal optimist." "If you can't be optimistic, you better not be in this business."

Owned acres now total 495, with 350 in crops and 145 in forest. Another 60 acres are rented. Donaldsons grow 300 acres of apples, including York, Red Delicious, Golden Delicious, Stayman, Rome, Empire and Fuji. They also produce seven acres of peaches and 50 acres of sour cherries.

Most goes to nearby Knouse Foods, Inc. for processing. Some produce is retailed through a seasonal farm market along a busy route a couple miles from the farm. It draws many customers from a campground across the road.

Today, his three children run Donaldson Fruit Farm as a partnership. Beverly Benner is busines and retail sales manager, plus coordinating partner; Steven oversees production; and David serves as personnel manager and handles maintenance and distribution. They also employ two full-time workers, some part-timers and up to 30 migrant laborers at harvest.

Guy acts as "consultant." "If they want some advice, they come and ask me."

Growth was slow and steady. "If we didn't have the money, we didn't buy it. My wife was a stickler on that," Donaldson grins. "I didn't grab the first new technology coming down the road." He lets somebody else experiment.

Still, he watched trends and adapted where he felt change would improve profitability. Bulk bins and forklifts brought big savings. Integrated Pest Management meant using fewer chemicals more effectively. They've also converted to semi-dwarf trees, chemical thinners, growth regulators and renting bees for pollination.

Donaldson points to his head. "Today, it's more this that gets things done than this," he reasons, next holding out his hands. Today's farmers must manage, not just work hard, he says. It may be more profitable to harvest with a machine or hire someone else to do the work.

He cites a used cherry picker they bought two years ago for $60,000. It used to take 50 to 75 workers three weeks to harvest 50 acres of sour cherries. With the Donaldsons' shaker, five men do the job in two weeks. Someday, he thinks, apples will be harvested that way too.

Donaldsons use a computer to record how much fruit comes out of each block, and how much spray and labor they use to produce it. That way they can track cost of production, helping them decide, for instance, when it's time to put in a new planting. "If you don't know your cost of production, it's kind of difficult to know when that time is."

Donaldsons also have a conservation plan. Deer fence is being installed to protect mountainside orchards. Leaf analysis and soil tests determine fertilizer needs.

"The Donaldsons started out 'up hill,' developed a very good farm operation and brought three children into the business," says fellow fruit grower and Master Farmer Eveett Weiser, York Springs, Pa. "Guy's way of doing business, his honesty and his straightforward, common sense answers on issues are highly respected."

He thrives on involvement. Donaldson became president of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau in 1996, after eight years as vice president. He has also chaired the state Apple Marketing Board and presided over his local school board. And he serves on the boards of American Farm Bureau Federation, Adams County National Bank, Gettysburg Hospital Foundation and Mountain Orchard Cooperative.

"You've got to find time to be part of the organization that's going to help you," he stresses. "This is where the rubber hits the road as far as your business is concerned.

Charles and Paula Fry

Charles (Chuck) Fry was raised to be the fourth-generation farmer on his family farm in southern Frederick County, Md. While attending community college and University of Maryland, he traveled home on weekends and summers to do the milking, chores and field work.

"At that point, I didn't want to be a farmer," he recalls. "I wanted weekends off. But a combination of teaching vocational agriculture in Baltimore and noticing that my father wasn't able to do all he could before made me realize I really wanted to return home and work the family farm."

In 1982 he started farming in partnership with his parents. "I discovered that if you want to be successful, you still needed to put the hours in. Most importantly, you've got to enjoy what you do."

Over the next decade, he put in the hours clearing out fence rows, clearing land for pastures, expanding the dairy and picking up rental acres for Rocky Point Farm, near Tuscarora, Md. After dating for five years, Chuck and Paula (Killen) were married in 1991. Fry became a husband, father and grandfather "almost all at once," he grins. "Our marriage and adopting her three children was the most fulfilling experience of my life."

Turkeys brought this business together. In 1996, the Frys put up three turkey buildings and signed a five-year grower contract with Wampler Foods to finish about 130,000 turkeys a year.

(Turn to Page C5)

After the first poult flock arrived, Paula took early retirement from her 28-year federal government career to help manage the small birds and do the farm's bookkeeping. Before that, "our 'quality time' was passing each other on the road," she smiles.

The new venture helped the Frys better use existing labor and bring on extra part-time help. Using standard operating standards learned on her federal job, Paula developed weekly operating procedures for flock management, "so part-time and weekend employees know exactly what to do and how to do it," Church adds.

Turkeys brought several unexpected benefits. Being more nutrient-dense, "it was easier to haul farther distances," he explains. "It also opened a secondary manure market."

The enterprise's stable income complements the 130-cow dairy that averages more than 19,500 pounds annual milk production. Close to 2.5 million pounds of milk a year are shipped to Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative.

The Frys monitor all phases of their operation with computerized records.

Conservation proved profitable. Fry has long been sold on the benefits of soil conservation and wise nutrient management. In 1987, he began installing nutrient management practices, including 7,000 feet of drainage lines to channel spring water to cattle drinking troughs and streambank fencing.

Using lime byproducts, dairy and turkey manure plus no-till farming practices, corn production costs still average close to $1.30 per bushel. "Installing a six-month manure pit helped us save about $13,000 a year in fertilizer bills," he estimates.

"Using GPS (global positioning system) grid sample soil testing, we found out what a bad job we had been doing in spreading manure," Chuch adds. "While we don't use variable-rate applications, we still manage accordingly."

Fry no-tills corn, soybeans, wheat, barley and alfalfa. "It allows me to crop extra land and increase crop sales from those lands." Despite three droughts and two Potomac River floods in the last 10 years, the farming operation has grown to 175 acres owned and 1,000 acres rented.

Serving others is important. Chuck is the fourth generation of his family to serve as council president of St. Luke Lutheran Church. Paula edits the parish newsletter and is a Sunday School teacher.

Fry is currently a director of Maryland Farm Bureau, chairman of the Brunswick Co-op, a Farm Service Agency committeeman, and ag task force member of the county's Economic and Community Development Commission.

Their farm is a frequent learning tool for school children and community tours. "God has allowed us to be caretakers of his land, and we are grateful," concludes Chuck.

Frederick County Master Farmer Mehrle Ramsburg confirms that "they do an excellent job in farming and being involved in the community, They are 'A number one' people."

James and Louise Stup

Jim and Louise Stup met through the Grange where they were active as young adults. Both were farm-raised and had cows of their own. Jim was already renting a small farm and had started dairying. Louise, from Middletown, had finished college at Towson State and was teaching.

Four years later, they "merged herds" in holy wedlock in 1956. And today's Teabow Incorporated, a three-generation dairy farm near Walkersville, Md, was born.

Louise continued teaching and helped with the farming until their first child, Esther, was born. Children, James J. (Jimmy), Melissa and a stillborn son, followed as she continued to help at the farm and raise the children. Jim is quick to credit his wife: "We both spent many years milking."

With the help of Jimmy and Melissa (Jarvis) and their spouses, the farm operation now encompasses 750 acres of owned land. More than 8 million pounds of milk are shipped annually to Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers form a 400-cow herd averaging more than 23,850 pounds production. Cows are milked in a double-nine herringbone parlor and kept in three free stall barns, including one with six rows and 280 stalls.

The transition is near complete. Jim "retired" from Teabow about five years ago. "I planned to retire at 65, and did it. You can't keep marking decisions until you're 70 years old, then expect your next generation to pick up the responsibilities. Now, I'm the 'go-for'," he laughs. Louise retired as the corporation's secretary and bookkeeper early this year.

Stock transfer in the incorporated dairy farm is near complete with shares going to their children and grandchildren. Most of the land is owned by the family outside the corporation.

The Stups are quick to credit their children for being good managers. "We're using a lot of feed ingredients and corn hybrids that make better silage. Now, I leave all those details to the next generation," muses the Walkersville farmer.

Jim learned fiscal management from masters of austerity — his parents. "My father started farming in the height of the Depression," he recalls. Many lessons obviously stuck.

"I've always been more interested in buying real estate than equipment," he notes. Long-term debt and interests payments were minimized by paying down principal well ahead of schedule.

Most of the farm's structures were built with family labor," and a lot of $15-a-yard concrete," Jim says with a hint of pride. For close to 25 years, concrete truck drivers have had a place to dump left-over concrete.

That explains the large concrete unloading pads above and below the bunker silos, many concrete walls, pens, walkways, drainage curbing and more. "We always have a form set up, and have to stop to spread it," he adds.

Over the years, the Stups made many innovations in farm practices because "it was the right thing to do, once you can turn a profit," notes Jim. Cover crops were standard in this operation long before they became conservation best management practices.

The Stups began double-cropping barley into corn nearly 30 years ago. Jim started artificial breeding his dairy herd in 1952.

Forethought is one of the Stups' biggest strengths, affirms Stanley Fultz, Frederick County Extension dairy specialist. "They attend meetings, gather research and thoroughly study ideas before making final decisions. A kernel processor was one of their latest decisions. They also had the foresight to do the estate planning that allowed them to smoothly transfer their business."

Community service always was important. The couple has been active in many Frederick County ag groups including the Grange where he served as Master Overseer and she served as Lecturer.

Louise currently chairs the Frederick County Farm Bureau Women's Committee and is a committee member of the Lewistown Homemakers.

Jim has been chairman of the local Southern States Petroleum and Woodsboro co-ops, is a former president of Frederick County Farm Bureau and state director. He's currently a member of the County Extension Advisory Committee and vice president of the Lewistown Ruritan club.

Robert C. Trax

From trucking produce to Pittsburgh area farmers' markets in the '40s to entertainment farming in the '90s. Bob Trax has witnessed the entire spectrum of produce marketing.

Today, he serves as president of Trax Farms Inc., a diverse farming and marketing operation. He is also president of Pennsylvania Vegetables Growers Association.

R.L. Trax and Sons began in the hills south of Pittsburgh during the first half of this century. "R.L." was Bob's grandfather and the sons were Bob's father and uncles. As business in Pittsburgh markets waned during the '50s, the family opened a retail and wholesale market in the bottom of a barn.

When the farm incorporated as Trax Farms in 1964. Bob became a full member. He took the helm as president and farm manager in 1980, overseeing a business that now includes 630 acres of owned and rented land planted to fruit and vegetable crops. Today's sprawling 17,000-square-foot farm market complex comprises a deli, bakery, gift and flower shop, greenhouse, nursery and garden center. A cider operation bottles pasteurized cider for supermarket chains and other retailers.

Fifteen family members work there full time, with nearly everyone in a managerial or office position. The crew includes Bob's cousin John, vice president, and his wife and two sons; cousin Tim, secretary, and Tiim's wife and two sons; and three of Bob's four children, Judy, Peggy and Robert. Thirteen grandchildren plus various sons-in-law also "punch the time clock" for special occasions and festivals. Bob's wife, Doris, recently retired.

Innovation and hard work yield success. Generating a comfortable living for so many families, plus making room for the next generation, spurs growth. "Standing still is a sure strategy for disaster. Certainly our competition is not standing still."

No one could accuse Traxes of standing still. "They're always using new technology. They fumigate, they grow strawberries and other vegetables on raised beds and trickle irrigation," says regional extension agent Eric Oesterling, who regularly works with Traxes. "They're always looking at better ways to grow quality crops." In Traxes' growning suburban area of Pittsburgh, they get top dollar for their product — but it must be top quality.

Traxes were among the first in western Pennsylvania to grow strawberries on plastic — in the late '50s. They began frost-protecting with irrigation at the same time. This Master Farmer notes that the farm currently has enough pipe to put 35 to 40 acres under irrigation at once. They grow all peppers, tomatoes and strawberries under trickle irrigation.

They grow about 15 varieties of apples, with about half planted to Red and Golden Delicious, Golden Delicious and Jonagold are gaining popularity in their market. Integrated Pest Management dictates pesticide use in orchards and sweet corn. About 30 of their 90-some acres of sweet corn are grown under plastic for early harvest.

Their hillside fields are protected by contour plowing, strip cropping and grass waterways. Storm water flows to irrigation ponds.

Computerized accounting helps them track what enterprises earn profit and which don't. "With the computers, you know what you're doing well."

Trax Farms innovates in marketing too. Festivals attract customers spring through fall. A row of five cash registers incorporate bar coding for quick check-out, with more added for special events. Their spacious year-round market allows bountiful displays.

Customer may pick their own strawberries and blueberries. Children — Traxes' future customers — are encouraged to join their parents in the fields. Other crops grown are potatoes, pumpkins, green beans, peaches and red raspberries.

When he's not farming. Besides presiding over the Vegetable Growers Association, Trax belongs to the State Horticulture Association, state Vegetable Marketing and Research Board and Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. In his community, he has served as a trustee of Peters Creek Baptist Church. He also belongs to the Masonic Lodge.

Still, it's growing that Trax finds most rewarding. "I get a lot of satisfaction out of seeing a good crop, whether it's fruit or vegetables . . . to know that you had a good hand in getting it that way."

Martin Honors Drivers

BLUE BALL (Lancaster Co.) — Martin Limestone Inc. honored 77 truck drivers at the company's 24th annual driver safety award banquet Feb. 25, for operating one or more consecutive years without a chargeable accident.

Drivers from New Holland Concrete in New Holland, Cocalico Concrete in Denver, Burkholder Paving in Ephrata, and Martin Limestone in Blue Ball, all divisions of Martin Limestone, Inc. drove more than three million miles during the year delivering crushed limestone, agricultural limestone, Diamond-tex, asphalt, concrete block products, and ready-mix concrete thought eastern Pennsylvania and surrounding states.

Thirty-three drivers received recognition for compiling five or more consecutive years without a chargeable accident. One driver, Lloyd W. Fox from New Holland Concrete, was recognized for 25 consecutive years of safe driving.

Allan A. Sheaffer from Martin Limestone earned an award for 23 years.

Rick L. Buch from Martin Limestone earned an award for 22 years. Henry W. Horst from New Holland Concrete and James E. Smoker from Martin Limestone received recognition for 21 years. Receiving a 17-year award was Donald L. Landis from Burkholder Paving.

Drivers receiving 16-year awards are Robert A. Riehl and John J. Haas from New Holland Concrete, and Ray M. Brubaker from Martin Limestone.

Marvin Z. Martin and Floyd L. Stoltzfus from New Holland Concrete, Robert R. Snader, E. Clair Bowman, and Martin L. Zimmerman from Martin Limestone earned 14-year awards.

Twelve-year awards were earned by George Galbraith from New Holland Concrete and Timothy Sprecher from Martin Limestone.

Mike Hess and M. Rick Lied from New Holland Concrete received 11-year awards. Randy Weaver from Martin Limestone earned a 10-year award. Ned Martin and Rob Rissler from Burkholder Paving and William A. Martin of New Holland Concrete earned nine-year awards. Eight-year awards were presented to Richard Weber from Martin Limestone and Ray Daub of New Holland Concrete. Eric Copenhaver from Burkholder Paving earned a seven-year award. Pete Razzano and Nevin Zimmerman from New Holland Concrete, and Delmas Martin from Martin Limestone received six-year awards. Five-year awards were earned by Aaron Nolt, Kevin Smith, and Allen Stoltzfus from Burkholder Paving and V. Steven Kauffman from New Holland Concrete.

Penn State Releases Pasture Growth Study

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.) — In New Zealand and Ireland, farmers look at grass growth charts in the newspapers. These charts show how fast the grass is growing compared to last year and the past history. Then the farmers compare this information with what is happening on their farm. How fast is the grass growing? Should I change my paddocks sooner? Should I slow down my rotation? Is my pasture budget projections similar to what is happening in the fields?

These types of questions can be answered with knowing how fast the grass is growing and how much your cattle are consuming. Every year may be different, but can we plan for these differences and see them coming?

The study measured the grass growth of seven farms across Pennsylvania during a two-year period from 1997 - 1998. In each county:

- Seven agents would collect pasture growth rates once every week (each has one farm in their county). The agents are NE Region: Craig Williams, coordinator, Dave Hartman, Mark Madden; SE region, Glenn Shirk and Jerry Martin, Mena Hautau, and Clyde Myers; and west region, Bob Brown.
- On each farm, each agent would measure five paddocks with the Alistair Electronic pasture gauge.
- The paddocks were mostly mixed grasses, a typical Pennsylvania pasture, but notes collected if a measurement seemed out of the normal by plant type or other factor.
- A growth rate curve would be started that could then be compared to other studies and counties. The growth rates would be the start of a Pennsylvania database and baseline of how fast pasture grows in Pennsylvania. In the 1997 study, the pasture grew an average of 44 pounds per day and in 1998 it averaged 47 pounds per day. Many farms had drier conditions in 1998. They also had excellent conditions earlier in the year, thus making it hard to manage grass growth.
- Measuring pasture growth and pasture cover are the two items that most of the New Zealand and Irish papers talk about.

Pasture growth is the speed at which the pasture is growing per day. If your pasture is growing at 50 pounds of growth per day and thus 350 pounds in a week (about 2-3 inches). Then in three weeks there would be about 1,050 more pounds of grass in that paddock. Fifty cows eating 20 pounds of pasture would eat 1,000 pounds every day. So these cows should not be allowed back into this paddock for three weeks if you want to keep the pasture grazed off at the same level. This is the beginning of pasture budgeting.

Pasture cover is just the average of the amount of grass in all of your paddock, including tall and short paddocks. Just take all the paddocks, record your estimate of the pounds of grass in each one, and divide by the total acres in all the paddocks. If your pasture cover average gets too high, then your grass may get too mature before you can graze it. If your pasture cover average gets too low, then you may not be letting the grass have a long enough rest. In the beginning of a dry period or summer, the average cover will start to lower and the paddocks that have been grazed will show slow regrowth speed.

More information about this study will be available at the Pennsylvania Grazing Conference in Grantville March 3 - 4.

J. Craig Williams, Tioga County agent, measures grass with the Alistair Pasture gauge during the 1998 summer.

Business Planning Assistance Available For Dairy Producers

MIDDLETOWN - (Dauphin Co.) – Pennsylvania dairy producers have a new incentive to utilize professionals in the development of their farm business plan. The Business Planning Assistance Program (BPAP) is a pilot project of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders and is available to eligible Pennsylvania producers on a limited basis.

The goal of the Business Planning Assistance Program is to encourage and stimulate the development of business and strategic plans for dairy producers in Pennsylvania.

"As dairymen, we must utilize all of the available modern business tools to help us succeed. Planning the future for our families and businesses is too important and too complex for many producers to accomplish without the help of a trained professional," said Lewis Gardner, dairy producer and president of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

Grants of up to $1,5000 will be made available to eligible producers. Participants in BPAP must be existing or start-up dairy farms within the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and must be accepted into the program.

Proceeds from the program may be used only to cover the cost of having an independent third party provide the professional services necessary to assist the applicant in evaluating a Pennsylvania dairy farm business. Examples of eligible professional services include the preparation of a feasibility study or business plan, managerial services, or other services associated with planning and business management. Ineligible services include: routine accounting and tax preparation, feed ration development, crop services, or other production related areas.

Although BPAP can provide 75% of eligible project costs up to a maximum of $1,500, the actual amount of funds awarded to any applicant is based upon factors such as viability of the project, economic impact, and fund availability. Applicants will be required to contribute at least 25% of the total project costs from their farm business.

The BPAP application process involves three steps:

1. Interested applicants must first discuss their proposal with the BPAP coordinator by calling 717-948-6328. After initial eligibility is determined, a copy of the application and related materials will be forwarded to the applicant.

2. The applicant must complete the application and submit it to the review committee.

3. The project will be reviewed and a funding recommendation will be made by the review committee.

Producers interested in applying for the Business Planning Assistance Program (BPAP) should contact Alan Bair at 777 West Harrisburg Pike, Middletown, PA 17057, or by calling 717-948-6328.

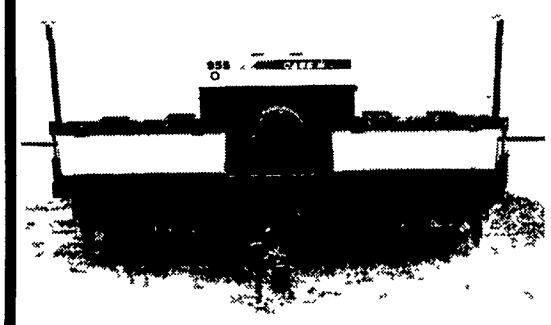
CASE IH 955 Cyclo Planters



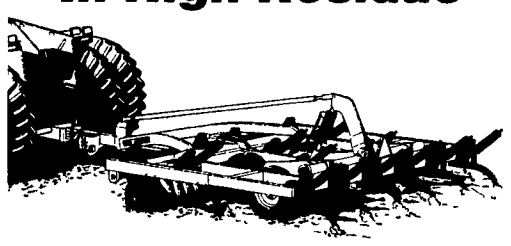
A seed needs six things from a planter to grow and thrive...six factors which produce a precision-controlled environment.

And only a Case International 950 Early Riser Planter, with its exclusive Cyclo® Air System, pays close attention to all six:

(1) Planted to the moisture level;
(2) Uniform depth;
(3) Evenly spaced;
(4) Good seed-to-soil contact;
(5) Uniform soil pressure; and
(6) Accurate population.

You'll get this performance whether you're planting in no-till, mulch-till or clean-till situations.

High Performance In High Residue



Case IH 6650 Conser-Till® Plow

A premium performer built tough for fast, smooth operation in heavy residue.

- Six-by-four inch heavy-duty mainframe strong enough to handle high operating speeds of high horsepower tractors increases your productivity.
- Massive rock shaft provides the muscle to take on an extra heavy workload.
- High-efficiency, four-rank frame to ensure free-flowing crop residue.
- Standard hydraulic disk coulters for on-the-go adjustment to varying field conditions
- Standard auto reset shanks for more confident operation in unfavorable soil conditions.
- Four sizes available from seven to thirteen shanks.

Give your cows everything they need – every last leaf!

With the NDE Vertical Mixer, you won't watch your feed nutrients blow away. Cut your baled hay or baled silage fresh each day right in the mixer! The NDE Vertical mixer will cut large or small, round or square bales Then add the other ingredients your ration calls for. The NDE Vertical Mixer will give your cattle a TRUE TMR that is light and fluffy, and truly palatable, no matter what you add to it: by-products, commodities, long-stemmed hay, silage, grain.

SE8

In Stock

The Rhino® SE8 is an economical rotary mower designed to help maintain larger acreages of grass, weeds, stalks, or material up to 1" in diameter.

The streamlined, close-coupled design allows economical operation on tractors as small as 30 horsepower on the SE8 and 45 horsepower on the SE10 The 85 HP center gearbox and 60 HP outboard gearboxes are protected from sudden shockloads by a slip clutch on the main driveline and torque dampeners on the side driveshafts Pan blade carriers help the unit glide over field obstacles and updraft blades with a 4" blade overlap provide a clean cut

(2WD, 125 PTO HP Tractors Max.)

End Plates are Optional Equipment

The 900 blade is available in widths of 7', 8', and 9' and features a heavy-duty CAT I-II three-point hitch and CAT 11 quick-hitch. The 9' model is rated for up to 95 PTO HP wheel-type tractors. Mainframe swing, moldboard angle, and moldboard tilt adjustments are easily made by relocating the index pins manually. Maximum offset from the center line of the tractor is 30" for working outside dual wheels. The 900 blade features a 3" diameter solid steel kingpin and a reinforced 3/8" x 17" moldboard to with stand the horsepower of larger tractors. The circular moldboard carrier plate allows adjustments throughout the full 360 degrees of moldboard angle to help accomplish numerous jobs easily The quick-tach end plates are a helpful feature when trying to move or level bulk material, including loose soil or gravel. Skid shoes, quick-tach end plates, CAT II quick coupler bushings, and a gauge wheel are optional equipment

Herbert Hoover Farney says, "I didn't think they could mix it."

Steve Dale, and Herbert Hoover Farney
Silvery Falls Farms Lowville NY

Mr Farney is talking about mixing 11 5% long stem dry hay by ration weight in the Knight Reel Auggie 3450, which he and his sons decided to purchase in September of 1994

Herbert was born the day Herbert Hoover was elected president

The Farneys previously owned a three-auger Oswalt stationary unit They state that the "old mixer tended to ball material up, especially in wetter forages, while the Reel Auggie 3450 'fluffs' the ration '

The Farney s herd average is up about 1,000 lbs , and they have a higher protein test as well They milk 160 Holsteins, and feed a total of 260 head They like the low power requirement — the 390 cubic foot machine is powered by a John Deere 2030 tractor

3000 Reel Auggie TMR Mixers
Now available in seven sizes with capacities from 147 to 600 cubic feet

However, Massey Ferguson assumes no responsibility for authenticity of data. Massey Ferguson, MF, Case IH, Deere, NH and Cat are registered trademarks of their respective companies.

When designing the MF® 8780 Rotary combine, our engineers started with a very basic premise: The best way to keep things from failing is to eliminate them. The fewer moving parts, the fewer problems. As you can see from the numbers above, they were extremely successful.

As you might expect, a simple combine also means an efficient and gentle combine for great sample quality. And for great productivity, there's a deluxe centered cab, seat-mounted console, Cummins "Power Bulge" engine and the optional, state-of-the-art Fieldstar® Precision Farming System.

Massey Ferguson brought you the industry's first self-propelled combine in 1938. Sixty years later the best combine technology is still at your nearby Massey Ferguson Dealer. Check it out.

GEHL®

The #1 Name In Feedmaking

Gehl Mix-All® portable grinder-mixers have been leading the industry for over 35 years. Now available with Gehl's famous hammermill or a commercial-grade roller mill to produce the best possible feed for your livestock.

- Total hydraulic control - Self-contained hydraulic system allows infinite speeds to power the discharge conveyor, unloading auger and in-feed attachments
- Remote controls - Operate the unloading conveyor from the tractor seat or from the rear of the machine.
- Electronic scales - For precise ration weighing.
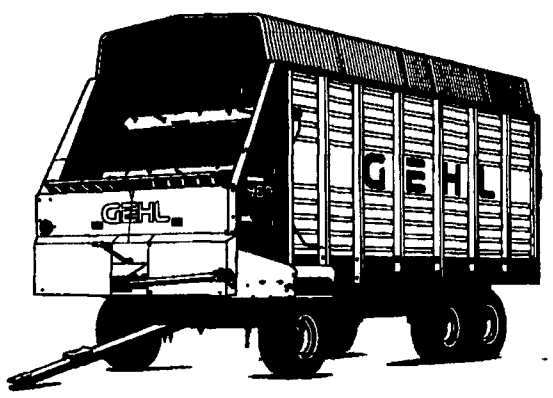
- Customize your machine - With a wide variety of options and attachments.

YOUR BEST FORAGE BOX VALUE



Gehl's new BU980 Self-unloading forage box has been redesigned for improved performance and durability. Features include:

- True variable-speed drive for infinite unloading speeds.
- Single lever control.
- Improved beater design.
- Stronger drive chain and reinforced roof.
- Standard highway light package.
- Optional folding 18-inch conveyor extension.

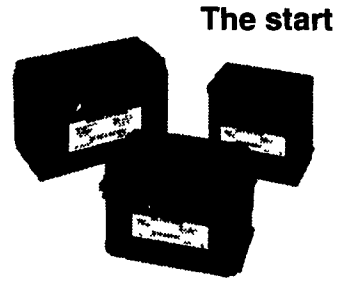
AGCO® TorQmaster Clutch

A full 60 degrees of free movement allows for easy hook up. One clutch can be used in many different situations using interchangeable yoke series with common mounting holes. Cast gray iron cooling fins isolate and dissipate heat for longer life.

AGCO® Batteries
The start of something big!



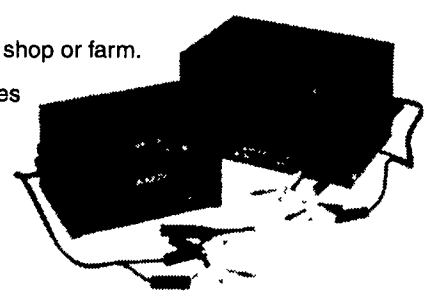
Specifically designed for heavy-duty ag use. Improved longer reserve capacities deliver plenty of cold cranking amps when you need them.
- High performance
- Maximum reliability
- Competitive price

AGCO® Reman Electrical

Quality and reliability at value pricing. Choose from generators, alternators, and starters. Each is completely remanufactured. Components are tested and reassembled to provide original equipment performance. Certified to meet or exceed our original specifications.

AGCO® Battery Chargers

- Perfect for home shop or farm.
- Testers and cables also available



AGCO® Lighting

- All types and sizes available
- Heavy duty design for off road applications
- 3 x 5, 4 x 6 floods and spots
- Magnetic base lamps

Scientists Build On Bt Success With Promising Research

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — Plant biotech research at Novartis Seeds, Inc. is yielding a host of new products designed to stop yield-limiting pests and deliver more value to specific end-use markets.

While these new innovations are a few years away, genetically enhanced plants and other technologies look promising and are functioning in company research labs, greenhouses, and field trials around the world.

More than three years ago, Novartis Seeds ushered in the plant biotech era with the introduction of its Bt corn hybrids — plants with built-in protection to the European corn borer. In 1998, roughly six million acres were planted to the company's 30 NK® Brand Bt hybrids.

Building on this success, Novartis Seeds researchers are closing in on solutions to a number of other insect pests. The company already is field testing new plant varieties with built-in resistance to most lepidopteran insects, including black cutworm and fall armyworm. Corn lines with the new insect control traits may be on the market as soon as 2001.

Novartis Seeds researchers are working with a new class of insect control proteins to develop the improved corn hybrids. The protein compounds are derived from a familiar source: the Bacillus species. Naturally occurring in soil, these bacteria are closely related to Bacillus thuringiensis which Novartis scientists used to develop Bt corn. However, the new technology uses a mode of action distinctive from the Insecticidal Crystalline Protein (ICP) that stops European corn borers in today's Bt hybrids.

"By broadening our biological arsenal, we reduce the threat of pests becoming resistant to a single compound," said Greg Warren, head of insect control research at Novartis Agribusiness Biotech Research, Inc. (NABRI).

Researchers also are developing multiple control options for corn rootworm control. Already, in Novartis Seeds labs and greenhouses, company researchers are evaluating new innovations including seed treatments and transgenic plants designed to stop rootworms.

"Each year, rootworms steal an estimated $1 billion from U.S. farmers in terms of lost yields and treatment costs," said Warren. "Because rootworms feed underground on corn roots and wreak hidden damage, they are an ideal target for new transgenic plant technologies."

Given the success of these research projects, Novatis Seeds expects to offer hybrids with yield "insurance" against every major economic insect pest by 2002. For U.S. farmers, the resulting hybrids should deliver yield savings significantly higher than the six to 10 bushel yield benefit already delivered with Bt technology.

Hybrids with resistance to a broad spectrum of profit-eating diseases are another target at NABRI, the company's biotech research unit at Research Triangle Park, N.C. Two research projects appear particularly promising, with field trials currently under way with the company's first anti-fungal transgenic plants.

The first incorporates new genes that produce proteins with anti-fungal activity into the corn plant's existing DNA. Novartis scientists discovered the proteins using high-throughput screening, a technique that allows researchers to evaluate hundreds of thousands of biological compounds for activity against a broad range of pests and pathogens annually.

"We're actually manipulating the biochemistry of the corn plant," said Dr. John Salmeron, head of disease control research at NABRI. "As a result, we're looking to produce some very potent anti-fungal compounds right in the plant."

Another novel approach targets tha plant's natural disease defense system. When plants become infected with a disease, response from the plant's natural immune system is often triggered. Novartis researchers uncovered a way to close key genes that control these disease resistance pathways, allowing them to enhance the plant's natural response.

While much of the company's research emphasis remains focused on developing new "input" traits that boost plant performance in the field, other top scientists are searching for so-called "output" traits that add value to end users such as livestock feeders, food processors and industrial manufacturers.

Novartis Seeds already markets high oil hybrids for the livestock market along with white and yellow food-grade corn for food processors. The company is also investigating silage-specific hybrids.

The experimental hybrids feature enhanced digestibility over traditional corn plants, a trait especially valuable to dairy producers. Research shows that plant digestibility is directly linked to livestock feed intake and ultimately milk production. By boosting feed intake and raising milk production levels, Novartis Seeds new silage-specific hybrid should improve dairy profitability. Similar work is under way to develop corn hybrids with specific benefits for other types of livestock.

"We're using a combination of traditional plant breeding and biotechnology to develop new lines of nutritionally superior livestock feeds," said Jim Beck, market development manager for silage. "Products in our pipeline include plants with modified oil, contents, higher lysine levels, lower phytake levels and modified starches."

Novartis Seeds researchers are also optimistic about a third wave of biotech products where plants produce new pharmaceutical, nutritional or industrial compounds.

"In the not so distant future, we're going to manufacture compounds that plants can't produce on their own," predicted Dr. Jeff Rosichan, head of applied biotechnology research. "Maybe we'll use plants as a renewable resource to create bioplastics that would naturally degrade over time. Or we'll deliver 'vaccinations' against disease via plants.

"It's here that Novartis holds an unparalleled position," he continues. "With our strength in nutrition, pharmaceuticals, crop protection and seeds, we're going to bring all these different fields together to create truly innovative products that deliver real benefits to the world."

Festival To Feature Talk On Rare Sheep

WEST FRIENDSHIP, Md — Two hundred year-old sheep and their wonderful wool will be featured at the 26th annual Maryland Sheep and Wool Festival in a special presentation on Colonial Williamsburg's rare Leicester Longwools

Tens of thousands of visitors are expected the weekend of May 1-2 at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship, Md for this free event

Colonial Williamsburg recreates 18th century living, including livestock representatives of George Washington's time Elaine Shirley, livestock husbander for Colonial Williamsburg and board of directors member for the American Livestock Breeds Conservancy, will discuss how the Leicester Longwool sheep was selected for the restoration

"After teetering on extinction in North America in the 1980s, the breed currently numbers over 100 animals, established in 12 flocks across the region Handspinners love its long, lustrous wool," noted Shirley

Leicester Longwools from Colonial Williamsburg's flock will be on hand in the Festival's breed display barn and participate in the "Parade of Breeds" Shirley's talk will also touch on her experience with other heritage livestock breeds, including Milking Devon Cattle and American Cream horses

More than 1,000 entries are expected for the centerpiece sheep show Morris Culver will judge the long wool sheep, while Dave Clouser chooses the best in the medium and fine wool classes Cotswold breeders will hold their national show at Maryland this year

On Thursday and Friday, April 29-30, the Festival offers two in-depth fibercraft workshops led by experienced artisans Botanist and spinner Rita Buchanan, author of "The Dyer's Garden," will lead an advanced spinning class Brenda Grey will present a rug braiding class in which participants will make chair pads

These popular workshops carry a fee and registration is limited. A variety of 1-2 hour weekend sessions will also be offered, including free form creative knitting, use of variegated yarns and challenges with variegated yarns

For more information on seminar topics, fees and registration, check the Festival catalog, available from the Festival Office at (410) 531-3647 or visit the Festival web site at www sheepandwoolfestival org

More than 200 vendors will offer wares from woolen apparel to spinning and knitting supplies to jewelry and paintings. Other activities include sheep and fleece shows, a "Sheep to Shawl" event, skein and garment competition, shearing contest, Shepherd's Lead, and sheep dog demonstrations.

For more information, contact Leslie Bauer at the Festival Office, P.O Box 99, Glenwood, MD 21738, (410) 531-3647 or visit the Festival web site at www sheepandwoolfestival org

Get Calcium To Cows

JENNIFER KIKO
Ohio State University
Media Relations

WOOSTER, Ohio — She has a rapid heart rate.

Her body temperature has dropped to below normal.

She's too sick to stand.

Her calcium level has fallen and unless she gets more, she's going to die. You could call the veterinarian who would give her calcium intravenously, or you could try to help her yourself. But you have to know how to correctly diagnose her.

If you know she has milk fever then you'll know she needs calcium. And oral calcium gel tubes have made it easier to treat her.

Hypocalcemia, or milk fever, affects 5 percent to 10 percent of all adult dairy cows.

When a cow freshens, her calcium drains into colostrum needed to feed the newborn calf. A cow milking 22 pounds per day puts about 23 grams of calcium into colostrum. There are about 3 grams of available calcium in the blood, and the rest comes from absorption from the gut or mobilization from bones.

If for some reason the cow can't absorb enough calcium from the gut or bones, the calcium in the bloodstream is depleted, causing milk fever.

Margaret Masterson, associate professor in the Department of Veterinary Preventive Medicine at Ohio State, said older cows are more likely to get milk fever because it's harder for their bodies to absorb enough calcium — especially since they're milking more and putting more calcium into colostrum.

When a cow has milk fever, she's much more likely to develop other calving-related problems like uterine prolapse, retained placenta, ketosis or delayed return to estrus.

"Some studies have estimated that milk fever can take as much as three years off a cow's life," Masterson said. "And once a cow has milk fever, she usually will have problems with future calves."

Masterson said that administering calcium chloride orally can rapidly raise calcium blood levels. "Giving a cow two, 300-milliliter oral calcium gel tubes within one hour of parturition can significantly raise serum calcium concentrations."

Oral calcium products were first investigated in the 1960s as a means of preventing milk fever. Oral gels are easy to use and are rapidly absorbed — making them a top choice for producers with sick cows.

Masterson said oral calcium gels can be used for treatment and as a preventive against milk fever. "Intravenous calcium treatments can be risky," she said. "They can stop the heart if not properly administered. The oral gels offer a safeguard, but they also require careful administration."

If you plan to give a recumbent cow an oral gel, Masterson offers this advice:

- Be sure the cow is able to swallow.
- Keep the cow's head level with the ground.
- Administer slowly.
- Don't be afraid if she spits a little back out.
- Give a tube as soon after calving as possible.
- Give another tube 12 hours later for prevention.
- Do not give more than three tubes in a 24-hour period.

"The best advice I can offer," Masterson said, "is to manage the dry-cow diet and the pre-fresh diet. Make sure to keep calcium levels at 45-60 (<80) grams per cow per day and the phosphorous levels around 25 grams (<35) per cow per day. Dietary management is certainly more favorable than medicating every cow."

Masterson said anionic salts can be used if it's impossible to control calcium and phosphorous. Anionic salts can be expensive, however, and farmers must be able to make a prefresh dry cow group to use them. "If the herd is smaller, producers can't justify feeding different groups of cattle — they may have only two or three cows in each group. In this case, using calciuim gels as a prevention may be an economic means for them."

Calcium gel tubes average $8-12 per tube, depending upon brand. If a veterinarian treats the cow, possible charges may include a trip charge averaging $12-15; administration fee averaging $20; and possibly, an exam fee.

Calcium gels should only be used if a diagnosis can be made.

"If a producer knows the signs of milk fever — and most dairy farmers do — then the oral gels are an economical choice offering fast results," Masterson said.

There are concerns associated with oral calcium gels use. Severe matabolic acidosis may result if cows are given more than three tubes in a 24-hour period. Fatal pneumonia could result if the cow is unable to swallow and the gel enters the lungs.

"You must first insure that the cow's gag reflex is intact and that she is coherent enough to swallow," Masterson said. "If the cow's head is held too high, the trachea will not be able to close and the gel can go into the lungs. Don't shoot it into the back of the throat — slowly releasing the gel allows the cow time to swallow."

Masterson also cautioned that if a cow doesn't respond to initial treatment, she should be reevaluated by a veterinarian for other problems. If she's still hypocalcemic, other forms of treatment may be necessary. Masterson recommends working with a veterinarian to determine guidelines for when and how to use oral calcium.

"Despite the risks involved, oral calcium gels are easy for most producers and lay personnel to use," Masterson said. "They'll decrease the number of emergency veterinarian visits, and most importantly, they can save farmers valuable time and money."

States, National Organizations Register Concern On FQPA

WASHINGTON, D.C — Fearing a negative impact on agricultural production, food prices and availability, three states and several prominent national organizations are voicing concerns about the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA), a 1996 law that substantially changes the way pesticides are evaluated and registered by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Idaho, Michigan and Pennsylvania, along with the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture and the National Governors Association, have either adopted resolutions or registered concerns with EPA's implementation of the law

Governors Concerned

The National Governors Association has adopted a position urging EPA to implement FQPA by relying on sound scientific methodologies "with the interests of farmers and consumers in mind."

Noting that smaller-acreage crops, such as fruits, vegetables, nursery stock and horticultural products, contribute more than $30 billion to the farm-level agricultural economy, the governors are especially concerned that implementation, based on unscientific policies, might jeopardize pesticides used on these crops.

Assess Pesticides Using Real-World Data

The Pennsylvania House and Senate have adopted separate but fairly similar resolutions on FQPA.

The Pennsylvania House urges Congress to monitor EPA implementation of the law so that it does not "disrupt agricultural production nor negatively impact the availability. diversity and affordability of food."

Because FQPA requires "reliable" information about the volume and types of pesticides applied to individual crops, and anticipated residues, the Pennsylvania House resolution asks that EPA "use sound science and real-world data" to evaluate pesticides for potential risks under the law.

Food, agriculture and public health representatives fear that EPA, in a rush to meet deadlines specified under FQPA, will begin to unnecessarily restrict or remove valuable pesticides using preliminary, incomplete information

"The absence of reliable information will result in fewer pest control options for United States and Pennsylvania farmers, especially for minor crops, and significant disruption of successful integrated pest management programs in the State and will jeopardize the availability and affordability of fresh fruits and vegetables to consumers at all economic levels," asserts the Pennsylvania House resolution

Idaho Resolution Urges Ongoing Review

The Idaho Legislature passed a similar resolution urging Congress to maintain oversight of EPA and the procedures it uses to determine product cancellations.

The Idaho Legislature says that EPA should establish tolerances (legally permissible levels of pesticide residue) using sound scientific methodologies and "reliable" pesticide use, residue and other data, rather than base decisions on theoretical, worst case assumptions.

Organophosphate and carbamate pesticides are the first pesticide groups to be reviewed under FQPA. Calling these pesticides essential to integrated pest management, the Idaho proclamation says that a possible loss of these chemicals "will jeopardize the very foundation of the safest/abundant food supply for all Americans." Pesticide loss would devastate the state economy and the "very livelihood of many Idaho agricultural producers."

Michigan Legislature

The Michigan Legislature approved a resolution directing EPA to provide industry representatives the opportunity to produce additional data required under the new law. The resolution asks EPA to follow key provisions under the law to generate data.

State agriculture and food industry representatives charge that EPA is needlessly jeopardizing important crop protection products, which could be proved safe if necessary data were generated.

"...the implementation of FQPA by the EPA could have a profound negative impact on domestic agricultural production and on consumer food prices and availability," states the Michigan resolution. "With Michigan's diverse agriculture this impact could be especially severe on our numerous specialty crops."

Wyoming Considering

Responding to calls from state livestock and sheep producers, Wyoming Gov. Jim Geringer will soon register his administration's concerns about FQPA implementation, probably through a letter to the state's congressional delegation and to EPA. The Wyoming Legislature also is expected to take similar action.

Scientist Studies Use of Vegetable Oils For Removing Nitrates From Groundwater

BALTIMORE, Md. — Light applications of vegetable oil deep in the soil may serve as effective natural "filters" to help purify ground water that is contaminated by nitrates

Laboratory tests by William Hunter, a microbiologist with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service in Fort Collins, Colo., show that the vegetable oil fosters the population of natural microorganisms that "eat" the nitrate and convert it into harmless nitrogen gas.

Nitrate contamination results from excessive applications of fertilizers to cropland, over irrigation and mishandling cattle manure in farm operations The nitrate moves downward through the soil and contaminates groundwater supplies

Excessive nitrate is a health hazard to humans and farm animals It has been linked to infant diseases and cancer. The health standard is 10 parts per million.

Hunter reported his findings to the annual meeting of the American Society of Agronomy (ASA), Crop Science Society of America (CSSA) and the Soil Science Society of America (SSSA) in October in Baltimore

He used a large tank with about one-third ton of sand to serve as a model aquifer area near the center of the tank contained sand coated with slightly more than three and one-third pounds of oil Over a 30-week period, the researcher pumped 8,350 gallons of water containing 20 parts per million of nitrate through the tank.

At the onset of the test, Hunter found that the oil/sand "filter" removed nearly 100 percent of the nitrate, although, as expected, the efficiency declined with time During the entire 30-week study, he found that 39 percent of the nitrate was removed.

The oil trapped in the sand provided a zone that was rich in carbon, according to Hunter. That simulated the denitrification process. While methyl and ethyl alcohol also stimulate the microbial "denitrifiers," the alcohols tend to mix with water and move with it. Hunter tested vegetable oil because it does not mix with water, tending to stay in the location where it is injected

The microbiologist theorizes that the vegetable oil can be injected deep into soil to provide this filtration process with ground water that eventually will flow into aquifers.

Reports of Hunter's studies estimate that a quart-and-a-half of soybean oil could remove 10 parts per million of nitrate-nitrogen from about 10,000 gallons of contaminated water. Water for consumption would need to be treated to remove any odors or unusual taste.

Hunter thinks the oil could be used in above-ground "reactors" that contain vegetable oil mixed with sand and gravel. These reactors could serve as filters for removing nitrate from pumped water. Similar filters could be used at the bottom of wells

Hunter has found similar results in other experiments with water flowing through columns In those tests he used soil from a shallow aquifer in southern Colorado. He hopes to field-test his idea, but needs to be sure the procedure meets environmental regulations

SPECIALIZING IN PRE-ENGINEERED STEEL BUILDINGS SINCE 1990

Founded in 1990 and incorporated in 1992, A S HOOVER, INC has grown rapidly for good reasons The corporation has been recognized in two recent issues of a national industry news magazine

WHY A.S. HOOVER, INC. FOR STEEL BUILDINGS?

A. SAFETY! With emphasis on strength, NO BUILDING FROM A.S. HOOVER HAS NEVER COLLAPSED!

B. QUALITY AND DESIGN. In addition to commercial, agricultural, and industrial applications including cranes, buildings from HOOVER have met the strict criteria of the National, State, and Township Governments, the School District, and the Philadelphia Airport

C. PRICE! With the most of buildings coming from the lower cost South, and hauled on backhaul, plus a high volume combined with low handling overhead, HOOVER is a leader in cost per ton of steel on the jobsite

D. RELIABILITY! CECO Building Systems, originally Mitchell Buildings is one of the oldest and largest metal building firms The record of Pennsylvania German builders speaks for itself

In short, A S Hoover Inc brings to the customer via the smaller Plain people contractors, the benefits of a larger organization while maintaining the frugality for which they are noted With concentration on efficiency and workmanship, alcohol, profanity, and blaring radios are not permitted on the job

In addition to the volume with CECO, Dealerships are also held with KIRBY (spans to 40' on 12' purlins) and CORLE (galvanized girt and purlin systems) giving unsurpassed coverage of all applications

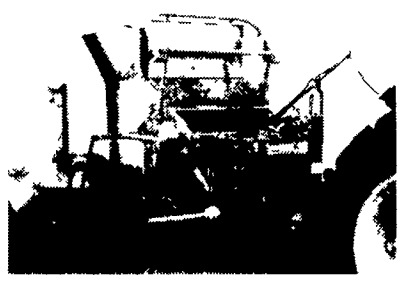
Apply dairy bedding with 75% less time and labor

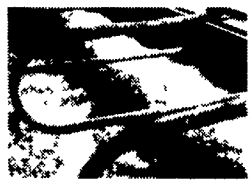


"It used to take two of us two days to install fresh bedding. Now, with the Millcreek Bedding Spreader, it only takes one man one day."

Scott Coblentz,
Deer Spring Farm, Middletown, MD

Introducing The Remarkable Millcreek Bedding Spreader

Now you can save about 75% of the time and labor for applying wood shavings, sawdust, or sand for free stall bedding. One operator can put in new bedding by himself with no hand-spreading necessary. The Millcreek Bedding Spreader is adjustable, and puts material exactly where you want it in the thickness you want. There's nothing like it for fast, efficient, and cost-effective application of bedding material in free stall dairy barns.



One man can put bedding material exactly where you want it without hand work

Millcreek Bedding Spreaders come in 7 different sizes from 3.8 to 22 cu. yd. capacity, and start under $5000. Call today for your free information.

Cut stall clean-out time by 50% with a Millcreek Compact Spreader.

"The spreading efficiency sure outweighs the price. This is a wonderful machine. I couldn't be more pleased."
EARL SINKS - Brock, Texas

Say "Good-Bye" to back-breaking manure handling and cut stall clean-out time in half Hook an affordable Millcreek Compact Spreader to your 10 hp garden tractor, take it right to the stall for easy loading No more wheelbarrow.

Millcreek Spreaders last and last

Since spreaders are our specialty, we put more into each one For example our 20-year guaranteed floor will never rust or rot Positive chain drive provides excellent spreading action And tough steel construction holds up to rugged farm use Seven sizes, for 1-horse barns to 50-horse stables PTO and ground drive models available

CUSTOM MIX PROGRAM
OPTIONS IN FEEDING
Your Dairy Herd
Call us today for a feeding program built to fit your Dairy Herd and your Production Goals.

For maximum performance and income over feed cost, rations should be balanced to provide the optimum levels of degradable and undegradable protein, nonstructural and structural (fiber) carbohydrate as well as minerals and vitamins This allows for maximum utilization of the rumen microbes and total ration efficiency Because you needs may be different from your neighbor's, we adjust the following nutrients and ingredients to fit your needs and goals

- Protein
- By-Pass Protein
- Energy
- Fiber
- Calcium
- Phosphorus
- Salt
- Vitamins & Trace Minerals
- Organic Trace Minerals
- Multi-Protein Sources
- Added Animal Fat
- Rumen Inert Fats
- Buffers
- Yeast
- Zinpro

16 FERTILIZER

FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO SUCCESS

Step 1
Farm For Profit Step 1
ACHIEVE
- Contains nutrients and feeders which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

REMEDY
- Contains nutrients and micronutrients which aid in sustaining microorganisms in the soil

TANK MIXING
STEP 2 PLANT NUTRITION & STEP 1
We have found be adding 12 8 oz of Remedy and a small amount of Achieve per acre to the recommended amount of Farm For Profit Step 2 True Solution Starter Fertilizer and applying directly on the seed or in the seed cradle we got outstanding results

Step 2
Farm For Profit Step 2
PLANT NUTRITION
FARM FOR PROFIT TRUE SOLUTION STARTER FERTILIZER
- Near neutral pH
- 100% available
- Root zone placement
- Low salt index
- Foliar Feeding

Farm For Profit has established their own standard for quality Unlike many liquid fertilizers Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer is a solution It is not just particles suspended in liquid Each drop contains the exact N-P-K ratio of the standard formulation Farm For Profit liquid fertilizer is consistent and stable and won't settle out It handles easily It can be stored indefinitely When it is applied, it flows evenly and cleanly Farm For Profit True Solution Starter Fertilizer meets our standard for quality

Step 3
Farm For Profit Step 3
VEGETABLE OIL
1 Encapsulates the chemical
2 Helps generate uniform droplet size
3 Greatly reduces chemical evaporation
4 Reduces chemical drift
5 Increases the coverage because of its spreading and sticking ability
6 Reduces chemical wash off
7 Gives you better control of the chemicals

One of Farm For Profit s main concerns is the level of soil and water pollution found today Our goal is to remove as much petroleum base material and farm chemical from the soil as possible Farm For Profit Step 3 Vegetable Oil gives us a means to reduce the level of both petroleum base materials and farm chemicals

Step 4
Farm For Profit Step 4
TRAINED FIELD PERSONNEL
The Farm For Profit Authorized Distributor or Dealer in Your Area Will
- Explain the total Farm For Profit program to you
- Explain the best fertilizer program for your operation
- Suggest ways to improve the efficiency of your chemical program
- Explain to you what other farmers have been doing to cut their operating expenses while maintaining or increasing their production output

Farmers Helping Farmers
That's what Farm For Profit is all about!

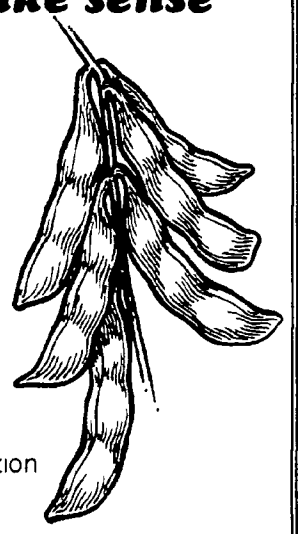
Sell your beans?
"It just doesn't make sense"

1 Why loose the 18% high energy oil in your own beans?
2. Why let the soybean processor take the valuable lechicin?
3 Why forfeit 50% of the metabolizable energy over SBM?
4 Why pay storage, trucking and shrink?



Be sensible!

Incredible buy and a spring settlement is in order. This farm can be your ASAP. This dairy is under priced and has been reduced from the original price by $200K and nothing has been reserved. The assessment is more than the present sale price and it is in "Clean & Green" so taxes are reasonable. I could say a lot more but you must see this great location and all the fine facilities.

NEEDED NOW!!! 100 acres central PA for camp site no camp or house needed. A tract of mountain land w/some farmland and also some timberland or woodland up to 400+ acres.

Many other varied requests so call Sandy Leaman for anything you have for sale.

Corn Winners' Joy Overshadowed By Pollution Problems

DAVID HIEBERT
Westmoreland Co. Correspondent

McCONNELLSBURG, (Fulton Co.) – The Glazier family should be happy. And they are. Sort of. But their joy in winning the statewide ear corn class, hand-harvest division first place is overshadowed by a great fear.

Will present measures be enough to restore health to the dairy herd?

Kenneth Glazier, a member of the Five Acre Corn Club sponsored by Penn State, has a ribbon for raising 113.7 bushels (100-124 bushel class) in 1995.

New Use Market Should Be Where Producers Set Sights

ANDY ANDREWS

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Corn and soybean producers have to realize one thing, according to a commodity broker: the feed business grows only at an annual rate of one to two percent.

"To me, that's a problem," said Pat Boova, Smith Barney marketing specialist. "That's a huge problem."

Boova, who spoke to more than 100 corn and soybean growers and agri-industry representatives in January at the crops conference at the Days Inn Conference Center near Allentown, said, "None of us can run a business growing at one or two percent a year," he said. "It can't be done. It's not going to work."

Boova noted that 97 percent of the soy protein goes to feed business. Trouble is, humans don't eat a great deal of soy protein. If they did, soybean growers would be experiencing a boom time.

Same goes for corn producers. Take away the high fruc-

Corn Club Announces Contest Winners

ALLENTOWN (Lehigh Co.) — Recently available is the 1998 Report of the Pennsylvania 5-Acre Corn Club, supported by the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association and participating seed companies.

The winners were announced in January at the annual Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference at the Days Inn Conference Center, Allentown.

According to Greg Roth, Penn State associate professor of agronomy, there were about six "fundamentals" that were followed among most of the winners. They included paying attention to the planter, getting

President's Message

Chris Kimmel
President, PMCGA

Now that you have attended winter meetings or are still attending some, do you know what you are going to do with the information?

With corn prices where they are, we certainly need to make our planting dollar go as far as possible.

With seed corn prices ranging from more than $50 to $100, make sure you know what you are getting and how it will work for your situation.

When it comes to spraying, there are lots of options. In our situation, we finally gave up on trying to do it with a one-pass system and have committed ourselves to a pre- and post-application. This allows us to evaluate our weed spectrum and better match weeds and chemicals. It saves us more than $5 per acre, even with the extra trip, and does a better job.

As poor as corn prices are, tose corn syrup market for soft drinks, and the "alternative uses" are slim.

And producers need to straighten out the situation before they go out of business.

"I've been involved in the Soybean Association for 15 years," said Boova. He told them: "Your checkoff is too low and it's gotta go up."

Before the checkoff, "we were being outspent by Malaysian palm producers by a huge margin. With our checkoff, we're still being outspent by the Malaysian palm producers."

But technology is changing the chemistry, through private industry and research, to use soybeans — and corn — in different ways.

"If you don't support (the research), it's going to either die," he said, "or it's not going to come up on the curve fast enough to keep us all going." He told them they must provide more money for investment in new uses.

"Fund that research and get new uses going, because they're out there," he said. "I feel very strongly about funding research for corn use."

Boova, a 1978 graduate of the University of Kentucky with a degree in ag economics, has learned about growing markets in the past 20 years. He spoke about how producers will be farming in the year 2005.

"There's a lot of hysteria after the last couple of years," he said. "Myths and rumors about where we're going to be in 20 years and five years."

Marketers and futurists make use of common-sense, rational forecasting methods. They rely on "yield trends" and project, based upon world supply and demand, where the prices should be and where an industry, such as corn growing and marketing, will go.

In 1968, the trend yield for corn, on average, stood about 70 bushels per acre. In 1999, the trend yield for corn stood at 130 bushels per acre, on average.

"I don't know where we'll be in 2005, as far as the trend yield is concerned," said Boova. "We're going to be higher than 130. That's a safe statement. I'm not sure how much higher we're going to be."

For wheat and soybeans, the same holds true. The yield average for corn could stand at 134-148 bushels per acre. This will provide the world with a lot more corn.

In 1978, the Food, Seed, and Industrial (FSI) Use For Corn postings from the federal government stood at 50 million bushels.

That was essentially seed. Now, the FSI is close to two billion bushels.

New use for corn includes sweeteners, plastics, and all sorts of industrial items.

"If I can find a use for an extra 200 million bushels of corn, I'm going to have an impact on that stocks-to-use ratio," he said.

"Are we really going to change the price structure?" he asked those at the conference.

New Use Market Should Be Where Producers Set Sights

"These are questions. I have my answers."

Using simple arithmetic combined with stocks-to-use ratios, Boova comes up with a corn price in the year 2005 of $2.25 per bushel.

"The issue is, that puts us in a no-growth business," he said. "Obviously something has to be done about that."

Other countries such as Brazil and Argentina will continue to increase their production and exports of soybeans and soybean oil. Supply dictates prices, so what can domestic producers do? Marketing is key.

"The new paradigm for marketing is going to become 'linking you to the end-user,'" Boova said. "You're going to get linked to the end-user. You're not going to get linked to the feed mill, you're not going to get linked to the flour mill, you're going to get linked to whoever is buying the Twinkie."

If you don't, he said, "you're going to be left trying to make a living selling Number 2 yellow corn with 14 percent moisture while somebody down the road is selling a trait-specific corn or a trait-specific wheat.

"I feel very strongly that everyone has to be sensitized to watch for where these linkages and hookups are going to come from. I really don't know where they're all going to come from. I don't know what sort of hare-brained ideas are going to come down the road. But you can bet there's going to be a household full of hair-brained ideas to wake you up with a Twinkie Bar.

"But in the meantime, some of them are going to work. And it's incumbent upon you to start thinking about this and figure out which is the right linkup for your business. They have to be embraced, and you have to influence the direction of these trends."

For corn producers, Boova's message was clear: "You've gotta pay more checkoff, because you've got to get the demand up.

"You've got to grow the product the end-user wants. The objective is to raise the value of the product to the end-user."

Some producers did well in a booming export market. But Boova noted that recent history tells us how tempting it is to run a business dependent on the export market. Pork producers are one example. They relied on it for so long that it drove up production — to the point of overproduction and horrific prices.

"The export market is terrific so long as it's working," said Boova. "But there's a lot to be done here domestically."

An interesting note, according to Boova: in 1997, one-third of all crops and livestock were sold under contract, up a little bit from the last couple of years. In 1997, eight percent of corn and 9 percent of soybeans were sold under contract. "That seems like a lot to me," he said.

In 1997, 50 percent of poultry, 40 percent of cattle and hogs, and 60 percent of dairy were under some sort of marketing contract.

But producers can still look to developing new-use contracts for their product.

In the years to come, some "wild stuff," he said, will come from new use research for corn. He gave one example of trait-specific wheat, where wheat genes can be modified to produce a product that is naturally sweet. This can reduce sweetening cost for bakers.

"If I can sell a baker wheat that's naturally sweet, he's going to pay me for that," Boova said. "Trust me, he's going to pay."

With trait-specific technology within reach, corn growers will be linked to their product. The elevator business could dry up, simply because the product will have to be identified as it moves through the system.

And the government programs in place to protect growers in the past are diminishing. They continue to be market-driven.

Business planning is essential.

"Business planning is something I've always felt very strongly about," said Boova. "As capital requirements become higher, margins become lower. Business planning does not become less important."

That means a focus on the "linkups."

"Linkups are going to be profitable," Boova said. "I don't think it's going to be profitable to try and sell corn and soybeans and wheat as fall commodities. I don't think that's going to be a profitable business. If it's profitable, it's marginally profitable; if it is growth, it's marginal growth."

Boova suggests that growers running their business surround themselves with the right people to provide the right advice.

"Surround yourself with the right people, because you're not going to be able to do it yourself."

NCGA Honors Stabler

GAITHERSBURG, Md. – W. Drew Stabler, a grower from Gaithersburg was honored at the Commodity Classic, Feb. 18-20 in Albuquerque, N.M. with 1999 Meritorious Service Award.

A founding member of the Maryland Grain Producers Association, Stabler has expanded membership in the state association and constantly encouraged MGPA's involvement in NCGA. He was also one of the key players in Maryland to organize the referendum to authorize the state checkoff.

Stabler was also active in the development of NCGA. During the last 20 years, he has missed only two NCGA annual meetings. When NCGA was forming, Stabler not only gave this time to building the association, but also, because of his commitment, paid for his many trips to St. Louis.

"I have always enjoyed working with the National Corn Growers Association leadership and have found many lifelong friends," Stabler said.

Ethanol Extension Efforts Take Gargantuan Leap Forward

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Efforts to extend the ethanol tax incentive took a major step forward when house Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-GA) announced the members of the House Ways and Means Committee who will serve on the conference committee that is working to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions of the Highway Bill.

The Senate version of the bill includes an extension through 2007 of the partial excise tax emption for ethanol-blended gasoline. However, in the House, Ways and means Chairman Bill Archer (R-TX) succeeded in pushing through a provision that would make it extremely difficult for Congress to extend the blenders' credit beyond 2000.

Following several weeks of discussion, Speaker Gingrich today stood firmly in favor of ethanol's benefits to the economy, the environment and U.S. energy security by naming steadfast ethanol supporters Jim Nussle (F-AI) and Kenny Hulsh of (R-MO) as Ways and Means conferees. Democrats will be represented by the committee's ranking Democrat, Charles Rangel (D-NY), who has also supported ethanol in the past.

National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) President Ryland Utlaut reacted to the announcement by saying: "We're thankful, pleased and appreciative of the Speaker's decision. As growers, we always appreciate a good rain, but it's what you put in the bin at the end of harvest that counts — and we recognize that fight for ethanol is far from over,"

"As Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman, Senator Minority leader Tom Daschle (D-SD), and other congressional leaders emphasized at a news conference this morning, we've got a strong, bipartisan coalition in place working to assure that ethanol is part of our national policy for the next decade," Utlaut said. "But the war is not yet won."

Utlaut emphasized that the corn growers remain committed to their grassroots efforts to bolster congressional ethanol supporters and ensure that the Senate's extension language is included in the final highway bill. "We are continuing to urge our members and other ethanol supporters to weigh in with our elected leaders, either by calling them at 1-888-WHY CORN or by sending 'Save Ethanol' messages on seed tags to their Capitol Hill offices."

Penn State Agronomy Guide On The Web

GREG ROTH
Penn State Agronomy Associate Professor

The Penn State Agronomy Guide, our summary of agronomic recommendations for all major crops, should be on the internet by early March.

The new Agronomy Guide was published this fall and contains all the update insect and weed control recommendations for agronomic crops. The address for the guide is www.agguide.agronomy.psu.edu.

The electronic version of the web will allow users to access this information free of charge from their computer. The electronic version will also allow us to update the web as needed. The print version is still a good resource—you out to have one of those as well. These are available at all of the Penn State county extension offices for $9.

The Guide is not the only corn resource on the PSU worldwide web sites. We also have the Penn State Hybrid Corn Test Reports and other variety test reports on the web at http://www.agronomy.psu.edu/Extension/Extension.html. You should also stop by and visit the Penn State Corn and Soybean Management page at the same address. There we have listed some of our current research reports and some of our favorite Internet sites.

If you are not on the Web, consider getting on. Its relatively simple and computers are way down in price. As I travel around the state I find more and more farmers are using the Internet to access corn information and to communicate with each other. With all of us as busy as we are today, email and the Internet are excellent ways to communicate with each other.

Designed for top performance

The New Holland Model 900 puts you in complete control. Designed to meet the needs of big-crop producers with capacity, reliability and efficiency.

Greenpeace Lawsuit Against Bt Plants Lacks Scientific Merit

WASHINGTON, D.C. – A lawsuit filed by Greenpeace and other activist organizations against genetically engineered Bt plants lacks scientific merit, said Jay J. Vroom, president, American Crop Protection Association (ACPA).

The lawsuit, charging that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency violated the law and agency regulations in approving Bt plants, was filed by Greenpeace, the International Federation of Organic Agricultural Movements, the Center for Food Safety and organic farmers. It follows a December 1997 petition to the EPA by the groups.

"Both the petition and the lawsuit are totally without merit," said Vroom. "EPA thoroughly assessed the safety of these products or they would not have registered them for use by farmers."

Since no evidence exists that Bt plant pesticides are toxic to humans or other target organisms, Vroom said there is no basis for altering the regulatory status of existing products or denying registration of new products. In its response to the December 1997 Greenpeace petition, ACPA joined with major commodity groups in saying that concerns about resistance development, gene transfer, and effects on beneficial organisms are "hypothetical" and that Greenpeace's data "apply principally to conventional foliar applications of Bt, not to transgenic Bt plant pesticides."

Vroom noted that EPA concluded Bt plant pesticides would not increase resistance when used in conjunction with a sound resistance management plan. As a result, the ACPA Biotechnology Committee, which represents the majority of the companies registering and selling Bt-improved hybrids, has endorsed an agreement-in-principal with the National Corn Growers Association on a plan for the year 2000 to manage insect resistance to the new Bt-corn technology.

"Bt plants offer numerous and substantial economic, environmental, and social benefits," said Vroom. "We want to ensure proper use so that this new important technology remains available to growers who are embracing it with enthusiasm."

a good stand, setting a good plant population (25,000-30,000 plants per acre), growing corn in rotation with another crop, paying attention to hybrid selection, and having good soils and weather.

Following are the three-year average awards:

• Shelled grain class winners, first place, regular harvest size, went to Joseph F. Matejik, Mechanicsville. Matejik, in 1996, had a yield of 187.7 bushels per acre using Hytest 4682, a yield in 1997 of 211.9 bushels per acre with Hytest HT 4612, and a 1998 yield of 202.6 bushels per acre using Hytest HT 4612 for an average of 200.7 bushels per acre.

• Shelled grain, second place, regular harvest size, to Larry E. Moyer, Mertztown. In 1996, Moyer reported a yield of 210.4 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335; in 1997, a yield of 189.8 bushels per acre using the same variety, and in 1998, the same variety produced a yield of 195.4 bushels per acre, for an average yield of 198.5 bushels per acre.

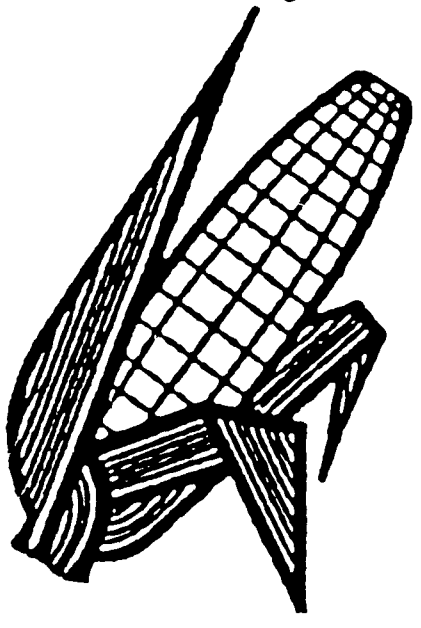
• Shelled grain, third place, to Kyle Henninger, Kutztown.

Henninger reported a yield of 183.7 bushels per acre in 1996 using Dekalb 527, in 1997 a yield of 201 bushels per acre using Dekalb 618, and in 1998 a yield of 185.3 bushels per acre of Dekalb 595. Average yield was 190 bushels per acre.

• 3 acre+ harvest size, first place went to Richard Kreider, Lebanon, for a 1996 yield of 224.4 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335, with the same variety in 1997 of 189.3 bushels per acre, and in 1998, 223.9 bushels per acres using Pioneer 33A14. Average was 212.5 bushels per acre.

• 3 acre+ harvest size, second place, to Steve Wenger, Lebanon, for a 1996 yield of 214.9 bushels per acre using NK Max454, in 1997 a yield of 188.4 bushels per acre using NK Max 554, and in 1998, a yield of 218 bushels per acre using NK 7639Bt. Average yield was 207.1 bushels per acre.

• 3 acre+ harvest size, third place, went to Glenn Krall, Lebanon, for a 1996 yield of 211.2 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335, in 1997 a yield of 174.9 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3394, and in 1998, a yield of 208.5 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3394. Average yield was 198.2 bushels per acre.



• In the ear corn class, regular harvest size, first place went to Lester Poust, Muncy, for a 1996 yield of 189.8 bushels per acre with Pioneer 3217; in 1997, a yield of 180 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3260; and in 1998, a yield of 180.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3260. Average yield was 183.5 bushels per acre.

• Ear corn class, second place, went to Kenneth L. Schlegel, Fleetwood, for a yield in 1996 of 185.1 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335; in 1997, a yield of 192.3 bushels per acre using Pioneer 32K61; and in 1998, a yield of 144.5 bushels per acre using Pioneer 32K61. Average yield was 174 bushels per acre.

• Ear corn class, third place, went to David Bivens, Big Cove Tannery, for a 1996 yield of 201 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3163; a 1997 yield of 144.7 bushels per acre using the same variety; and in 1998, a yield of 171.1 bushels per acre using Fielder's Choice 9114. Average yield was 172.3 bushels per acre.

For the shelled grain class, regular harvest size:

• First place went to Joseph Matejik, Mechanicsville, for a yield of 202.6 bushels per acre with Hytest HT 4612.

• Second place went to Larry E. Moyer, Mertztown, with Pioneer 3335 for a yield of 195.4 bushels per acre.

• Third place went to Herman Manbeck, Womelsdorf, for a yield of 193.8 bushels per acre using Pioneer 33Y18.

In the shelled grain class, 3-acre+ harvest size:

• First place went to Charles Zimmerman, Myerstown, for a yield of 249.7 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3335.

• Second place went to Jack Coleman, Ronks, for a yield of 224.9 bushels per acre using Pioneer 33A14.

• Third place went to Richard Kreider, Elizabethtown, for a yield of 224 bushels per acre using Pioneer 33A14.

In the ear corn class, hand harvest division:

• First place went to Lee Glazier, Fulton County, for a yield of 222 bushels per acre using Hubner 3505.

• Second place went to David Schantz, Alburtis, for a yield of 212.1 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3194.

• Third place went to Michael Glenn, Big Cove Tannery, for a yield of 198 bushels per acre using Pioneer 3217.

In the ear corn class, machine harvest division:

• First place went to John Tabaj, Dunbar, for a yield of 154.5 bushels per acre using Agway 767.

• Second place went to John Tumpey, Bath, for a yield of 140.5 bushels per acre using Cargill 6303.

• Third place went to Sugar Ridge Farm, Masontown, for a yield of 139.4 bushels per acre using NK 6800Bt.

Because of various reasons, he was not able to compete for a few years.

But this year everything fell in place for a small corn field between the home place and the McConnellsburg public school. The results of 222 bushels from the hand-picked class put him first in Fulton County and the results were automatically entered in the state contest. When the state results announcing him a first place winner were published in Lancaster Farming, he had to go look it up, because he had missed his name the first time through the paper.

The winning combination, according this third-generation owner of the farm just south of McConnellsburg, included:

•Getting an excellent stand of plants through good seed (Hubner 3505), an application of Lorsban insecticide at planting, and a preemergence application of Prowl and Bicep herbicide.

•A slurry application from his dairy nutrient management program (the slurry helps hold the moisture better in dry years, he said).

The Glazier family uses the corn from about 225 acres to feed their dairy herd. When their 8,700-bushel Silo is full of high moisture shelled corn, they start using the bags. At this point they feed high mositure corn, corn silage, and haylage from the bags.

The bags aren't quite as convenient as the silo, but if you catch the punctures from dogs or cats that dig around them and dislodge the occasional groundhog that wants to live in the shelter of the roughage, "the feed quality so much better than a bunker" according to Kenneth. With a touch of humor, he said that he's looking for a Santa Claus who will pave the hill tops where he fills and feeds from the white bags.

Feed quality is very important on this-well-managed farm in one of the beautiful Appalachian valleys just east of Breezewood. Neither the Glaziers nor their nutritionist could understand why the rations that got good results on other farms began failing here.

And the health of the herd was suffering. Kenneth notes that his goal of a 20,000-pound herd slipped when production began to fall from the 19,000-pound level in 1996. He saw that the cows feet began to get soft and bruise easily.

Curtis, the son in the operation, began to see the calves that he managed develop scours and stagnate or die. They began to notice an oder and discoloration in the dairy water supply in 1997. That year they lost 12 calves. In previous years it was unusual to loose more than one or two.

According to Kenneth's wife Sharon, the problem began to effect the large cows also and they have lost 13 head in 1998. "A cow's eye," she said, "would begin to bulge and the vet would say it has a brain tumor and we'd have to dispose of them." Tumors in the mammary system has been another unusual health problem for the herd. Production fell to a low of 16,000 pounds.

"It's been a bear of a problem," according to Greg Strait, Penn State extension agent in Fulton County. The water quality issue first came to his attention in October 1997. He sent in the first water test on Oct. 7. The results showed industrial pollutants in the Glazier's dairy water supply, a spring that had been used by the farm since it had been purchased by Ken's grandfather in 1915.

"Since 1996 it has been a nightmare," said the older Glazier. "It makes you feel like giving up."

Since the water tests pointed out the pollution, the family has drilled a new 500-foot deep well. But it did not provide the 20 gallons per day demand for the dairy. So a second well has been drilled down to about 400 feet, which has enough flow. And it is hoped that a charcoal filtering system may clean out the traces of pollution that have showed up in this well.

With the cleaner water supply, milk production has begun to go back up-now at about 18,000 pounds. Calves are showing good health. But the problems are not over. The household water, from a relatively shallow 130-foot deep well drilled in 1976, has been tested by a private lab and shown traces of the same pollutant.

The shadow still hangs over the farm, as the pollutants are also showing up in the water from the new well. "Just today, I've sent off more water samples for testing," the country agent Strait reported on Feb. 9

What is the future for this farm? For a firsthand report, all who are interested were invited to a public meeting scheduled for Feb. 25 at the American Legion in McConnellsburg.

For information about the meeting, call the county Fulton County Extension office at (717) 485-4111

Kenneth L. Glazier shows a sample of the water from the spring he used for the dairy. In 1996 the family first noticed and order and discoloration in the water. A report o the problem by the DEP has produced a report book about and inch and a half thick, but he pollution seems to be spreading to other water in addition to the farm. Grandson Conrad, 6, wife and grandmother sharon, and granddaughter Caitlin almost 4, share Ken's concern for the herd. Photo by David Hiebert

The winning Glazier family includes granddaughter Caitlin, almost 4 years old, who gets to visit her grandmother every Tuesday; son Curtis, who was active in the FFA Master Farmer program; and grandson Conrad, 6 who attends the school in the background.

Before and after, In the field that earned him a first place award for a 222-bushel per acre yield, Kenneth L. Glazier, McConnellsburg, shows the difference between the full ear of corn stored on the farm and the shelled cob that remained in the field over the winter. Photo by David Hiebert

A REVIEW OF RESEARCH

We spend lots of time doing research on corn production in our department and work hard to get the word out on what we've been up to. We hope many of you are somewhat aware of some of our findings. If you're not, let me share with you in this column a sampling of the projects we have been working on.

Last year in our project we spent considerable effort looking at response to plant populations and hope to do more of that in the future. In the Five Acre Corn Club, there has been a trend for producers to increase plant populations by about 250 plants per year during the last 25 years. This year the final stands of the entrants average nearly 26,000 plants per acre.

Population studies are difficult to conduct because the response often varies from year to year. You need to conduct them over time to get a handle on the response. We are basically finding that newer hybrids are responding to higher populations and that plant populations from 25,000 to 30,000 plants per acre (PPA) appear to be appropriate for many situations. In a population trial we conducted this year in Lebanon and Lancaster counties, our best yields came at 28,000 plants per acre in Lebanon and 32,000 plants per acre in Lancaster. Not all of the hybrids stood well at 32,000, PPA, indicating that before you try higher plant populations, check with your seed dealer to see if you have a hybrid that will take the increased population.

We have been running a similar trial in Schuylkill County under high yield (200 bushes per acre) conditions. In 1996 we didn't see a benefit from increasing plant populations above 27,000 PPA. That year the hybrid had stalk rot and was falling down in our 32,000 PPA treatment. We switched hybrids in 1997 to one with a better stalk and 1998 to a Bt hybrid and both have stood much better. In the last two years, we found an eight bushel per acre advantage to the 32,000.

I'm not recommending that everyone switch to 30,000 plants per acre. The optimum plant population is dependent on row width, soil productivity, and hybrid. Wider rows, drought soils, and some hybrids may dictate lower plant populations. But our data does seem to support he national trend of increasing plant populations.

Another research project has been evaluating crop rotations for dairy farms. some of you may have seen our video on this subject. As part of this research we have found that many fields following corn that have been scouted for corn rootworm will be above the threshold for corn rootworm. Third and fourth-year fields we checked averaged about 80 percent above threshold. Also, about 39 percent of the third-year alfalfa fields scouted in our project had less than four plants per square foot. Both of these factors indicate that on some farms, long corn and alfalfa rotations can cost money. As a result of this project, we showed that on some farms, shortening the alfalfa rotation when dictated by scouting to three years can be profitable. Substituting soybeans for the third year of corn for grain in a four-year rotation was another was to reduce costs, improve yields, and reduce the need for insecticides.

We are also starting a project to evaluate alternative starter fertilizers in corn on high phosphorous and potassium soils. Several other states have begun recommending starters with 1-1-0 or 2-1-0- rations rather than the typical 1-3-1 analyses used in Pennsylvania. We conducted one study last year to look at these but the field we chose had low potassium areas that most of our fields don't have. As a result the, 1-3-1 fertilizer performed well. The advantage of the 2-1-0 fertilizers would be lower cost and less phosphorus added to already high-testing soils. Also, some of the Nitrogen requirement would be placed near the seed at planting and not subject to volatilization. We plan on repeating our study again this year.

These are just a few of the trials we have on-going. Our objectives are to try find way to produce corn at a lower cost in our region. Space doesn't permit a complete discussion of everything we have going on. If you have ideas on good research topics, are willing to listen. We will be putting most of our research on our Internet site, so check there from time to time.

Corn Growers Call For 'Freedom To Trade'

WASHINGTON, D.C. – While the "Freedom to Farm" provisions of the 1996 Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform (FAIR) Act are working well for U.S. agriculture, the federal government must take steps to address the price pressures facing farmers, a National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) representative told the House Agriculture Committee.

"NCGA was the first national commodity organization to embrace the Freedom to Farm concept during the 1995 and 1996 Farm Bill debate," said NCGA Past President Bill Northey, who farms near Spirit lake, Iowa, "We firmly support increased planting flexibility and less government intervention in basic production decisions as key to enabling farmers to respond to the marketplace. Farmers will always make better production decisions than Washington bureaucrats - but we need the federal government's help to address the real problems facing agriculture that are beyond farmers' control."

Many factors have come together to create the current crisis in farm country. But for corn farmers, the major contributor is declining export markets. "The Asian financial crisis has had a significant impact on our ability to sell corn," Northey noted. "While prices have been moving lower and this reducing farm income, corn buyers in Asia are facing higher prices because of their currency devaluation and the strength of the U.S. dollar. Korean customers are paying 33 percent more for corn than they did a year ago, Japanese customers are paying 13 percent more and Taiwanese customers 12 percent more.

"The crisis in Asia underscores the need for the federal government to be involved in establishing and maintaining financial stability in that region and elsewhere," he said. "Among the steps that must be taken by Congress and the Clinton administration are full funding of the International Monetary Fund, fast tract trade negotiating authority, and meaningful sanctions reform to expand corn export markets throughout the world and ensure the future health of our agricultural economy.

In addition to trade reform, Northey outlined a number of other issues that Congress and the administration should address to help boost markets for corn and other U.S. agricultural products. "We need a commitment to research to keep us competitive in the future by unlocking new uses, maximizing production levels and preventing major disease problems. We need affordable, effective crop insurance tools to help us manage the risk inherent in an industry dependent on weather. We need a tax system that allows us to keep a reasonable portion of what we own. And we need viable, efficient transportation systems to serve our customers at home and abroad.

NCGA, Cargill Talk Continental Acquisition

Meetings between NCGA leaders and representatives of Cargill over the company's acquisition of Continental Grain culminated recently in a direct presentation by Cargill representatives to NCGA national and state leaders during NCGA's Policy and Priority Conference in St. Louis.

According to Cargill officials, the real story in today's grain markets is the relentless pressure for change that is reshaping the global food system. Some of the changes are being driven by population growth, rising incomes, and urbanization. Other changes are being driven by trade and policy reforms.

Importing countries have privatized their markets and opened their borders to agricultural trade, while investments in livestock production and grain processing at home have steadily expanded the domestic market for U.S. grain and oilseeds. At the same time, new technologies - biotechnology in particular - are offering farmers and feed and food customers a wider range of options.

"Cargill's planned purchase of Continental's grain operations is an expression of those changes - not a cause of them," Frank Sims, the head of Cargill's North American grain division, said. "Our clear objective is to stay at the forefront of these changes so that we are better able to meet the grain marketing and handling needs of our farm, feed and food customers."

NCGA President Roger Pine said the association will take a "wait-and-see" attitude on the acquisition.

"Cargill did indicate their commitment to preserving agriculture's competitive edge, value-added corn and U.S. agriculture as a whole," he said. "NCGA will continue to have dialogue with Cargill and make sure that there is grower input into what is taking place.

USDA Estimates Corn Production Of 9.76 Billion Bushels For 1998

According to USDA statistics released recently, 1998 corn for grain production was estimated at 9.76 billion bushes, up 6 percent from the 1997 crop, but down 1 percent from the Nov. 1 forecast. The 1998 production ranks second behind the 10.1 billion bushel produced in 1994. The U.S. yield of 134.4 bushels per acre was up 7.7 bushels from a year earlier.

USDA Lowers Crop Insurance Premiums

Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman recently announced an estimated 30 percent premium reduction for farmers on their crop insurance policies.

To ensure that all farmers have the opportunity to benefit from this one-time premium reduction this year, crop insurance companies will accept insurance applications on crops having sales closing dates that have already passed.

"Given low crop prices, we want to ensure that as many family farmers as possible take advantage this year of the opportunity to increase their crop insurance coverage or benefit from reduced cost," said Glickman. "These plans will help provide farmers greater security."

EXAMPLE: A corn producer with 200 acres, 150 bushel average yield and a $2.10 price election.

	65% Coverage	70 Coverage
Protection	$40,950 ($204 75/acre)
$44,100 ($220 50/acre)	$764 ($3 82/acre
Expected Producer Cost	$764 ($3 82/acre)	$1,171 ($5 86/acre)
30% Premium Discount	-$229	-$351
Actual Producer Cost	$535 ($2 68/acre)	$820 ($4.10/acre)

In this example, the actual producer cost for 70 percent coverage ($820) is only $56 more than the expected producer cost of 65 percent coverage ($764). This means that the producer can obtain a $15.75 per acre increase in protection for only 28 cents more per are.

This example is for illustration only. Actual costs and protection will vary.

See a crop insurance agent for information specific to your operation.

NCGA had requested in the fall 1998 economics relieve package that some of the economic aid be dedicated to reducing crop insurance for 1999 crops.

NCGA Corn Board Meets/Acts

The NCGA Corn Board met Jan. 12-14 in St. Louis to conduct the work of the association.

A summary of board action will be sent to growers and states. Donna Reifschneider, president of the National Pork Producers Council, addressed the group on the current hog market situation. The board supported the actions of the NPPC to address these current market dynamics.

In addition to action taken on current matters, the board accepted the report of the recent Corn Forum for further consideration. the form discussion included:

- Industry integration and consolidation.
- Biotechnology.
- Marketing system, including farm policy and risk management
- Infrastructure and delivering corn to customers at a value.
- Demand, including trade/ environmental stewardship.

Pine Pow-Wows With Sugarbeet Growers

NCGA President Roger Pine spoke recently at the annual meeting of the American Sugarbeet Growers Association in Orlando, Fla.

He participated on a panel with other commodity group presidents, discussing how corn growers are faring under Freedom to the Farm and outlining some of the policy challenges facing NCGA in 1999.

"Some naysayers are ready to throw the baby out with the bath water and abandon the 1996 farm bill. But I submit to you that Freedom to Farm did not cause the current economic crisis in agriculture," Pine emphasized. "But that's not to say that we don't have problems and that we don't need policies to help address those problems."

Pine cited value-added opportunities, free trade, risk management, and water quality as some of the top issues facing corn growers this year.

NCGA Announces Bt. Relief For Southern Corn Growers

Efforts led by several organizations to establish acceptable refuges for Bt corn in cotton-producing regions of the South recently paid off when the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) granted approval for growers to increase the amount of insect-protected corn that can be grown in those regions.

Corn growers, who had been severely restricted in the amount of Bt. corn they could plant up to 50 percent of their acres with these improved hybrids that protect the corn plant from European corn borer, Southwestern corn borer, and other insects.

NCGA Corn Board member Randy Jennings of Bernie, Mo., who grows corn in the Missouri Bootheel, welcomed the EPA approval with the hopes that the agency will further lift restrictions in the northern cotton growing regions so that growers can benefit more fully from Bt corn protection.

"Economically, this is good news for my operation, since before this year I could only plant 5 percent of my corn acres to Bt," said Jennings.

"This expanded approval resulted from the leadership of Monsanto, the Missouri Corn Growers Association, the Missouri Farm Bureau, Senator John Ashcroft, and the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA)" said Scott McFarland, director of industry relations for NCGA. "All of us will continue to advocate for increased Bt corn acreage in the northern cotton growing regions which includes North Carolina, Tennessee, Missouri, and the Texas Panhandle."

Earlier this year, NCGA spearheaded an insect resistance management (IRM) coalition of Bt corn registrants working to introduce an industry-wide refuge plan. Those registrants and NCGA subsequently reached an agreement-in-principle on corn IRM for 2000. The goal is to present a consistent, unified program to preserve the technology that is practical for growers.

Roundup Ready CORN

Achieve Maximum Yield Potential.

Always read and follow label directions Regulatory approval of grain harvested from seed of Roundup Ready corn is pending in certain export markets and may not be received before the end of 1999 As a result, growers may be restricted from introducing the grain into channels of trade where the potential for export to those markets exists In such cases, growers must be prepared to feed the grain domestically, or sell it for use in domestic feed markets only. Corn In A Credit Card

MARK ANTLE
Department Of Agronomy
Penn State

Ever wonder why some people call corn the miracle crop? It's because corn can be made into many new products, even credit cards as shown in the photo.

That's right this is a "plastic" card made entirely from corn. It's 100 percent biodegradable, has the same properties as petroleum-based plastic, and it's good for the environment. Best of all, it's good for corn producers.

Efforts are under way to introduce these corn-based cards into the credit card market. They are also well suited for library, club and other membership cards. So if you are a member of an organization which uses membership cards, you might want to spearhead an effort to have your group switch to the new corn-based cards.

This card was originally developed by a Nebraska company, with research assistance from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Industrial Agricultural Products Center, funded in part by the Nebraska Corn Board.

If you would like more information on the corn-based card, contact, Mr. Gerald Biby, University of Nebraska-Lincoln Industrial Agricultural Products Center, 208 L.W. Chase Hall, Lincoln, NE 68583-0730.

If you have a computer and access to the worldwide web, you can obtain more information on corn-based products and research at the Nebraska Corn Development, Utilization and Marketing Board web site at; http;// dbdec.nre.state.ne.us/cornstalk/.

New Ag Census Data Has Corn Data And More

GREG ROTH
Penn State Agronomy
Associate Professor

The 1997 Census of Agriculture Data has recently been released on the Web and contains all kinds of data about corn and other aspects of agriculture. Data from national state, and county summaries can be found at the Wed address, www.usda.gov/nass/.

I spent a half an hour pulling off some representative data to five me some background for my program here at Penn State. Here are a few examples of what I found in that half hour.

I had a meeting coming up in Fulton County, so first I got some specifics on corn production and farming there. There are 201 full-time farms in Fulton County, down from 212 in 1992. There are 74 dairy farms, down from 97 in 1992. There are 69 farms with sales of $100,000 or more.

Farms that grew corn for grain in the county totaled 160 in 1997 and there were 141 that grew corn for silage. There were 6,000 acres harvested for silage in 1997, producing 59,028 tons of silage (less than 10 tons per acre), This gave me a quick snapshot of the country's agriculture and trends.

Then I searched some of the state data for Pennsylvania. There are 159 pages of tables on Pennsylvania ag data available. I was interested in corn production, of course. In 1997, there were 18,732 farms that grew corn for grain compared to 21,610 in 1992 – nearly 3,000 less in a five-year period. I assume some of this was because of the drought in 1997 that caused more folks to chop all of their corn. The number of farms growing corn for silage dropped as well, though: 12,598 in 1997 compared to 13,267 in 1992.

The census also points out that we have relatively few large corn growers. Of the 18,732 corn farms, 41 grow more than 1,000 acres and 160 grow from 500 to 1000 acres. There are also 433 that grow 250 to 500 acres of corn for grain. For silage, the census indicates we have 18 farms that grow more than 500 acres of silage.

There are lots of other facts and figures available on this site as well. I even found a tally of the number of used pickup trucks more than four years old in one table. This showed most farmers are driving older pickups. That was no surprise.

If you're interested figures, for a program or presentation, or if you're just curious, check out this site. The census will also be available in print from the USDA this summer.

Five-Acre Contest Announces 1998 Award Winners

1997 PENNSYLVANIA CORN CLUB SUMMARY

Each year brings a new season with new technologies and conditions And so it is with our 1998 Corn Club This year we made a few small changes in the report and data we collected We surveyed members on corn borer pressure this year and overwhelmingly the response was corn borer pressure was light Only 6 of over 100 members reported moderate or severe corn borer pressure This year we also broke out the starter fertilizer programs of individual participants Many club members are using 1-2-1, 1-3-0, or similar blends at rates near 150-200 pounds per acre

This year we recorded our highest yield check ever in the large harvest class - 249 7 bushels per acre We also had 13 yields over 200 bushels per acre

Take a few minutes and review the crop management of the champions I think you ll find that they are doing a great job of managing their crops and this is part of the reason for their success Also, review the cultural practice summary and you will see the trends in inputs and cultural practices that corn club members are using

Thanks to everyone who contributed to this effort - producers, extension agents, crop consultants, and seedsmen

DUPONT

Corn Growers are Impressed with DuPont Basis Gold® Used on Over 4.5 Million Acres of Corn.

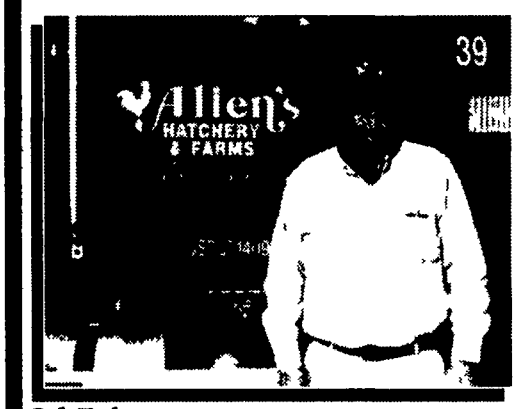
If you were to ask local corn growers about Basis Gold® this is what they would say:

"We've been struggling with shattercane in our corn for years. This year we used Basis Gold® and we didn't have any at harvest. We're dairy farmers and silage is important. The shattercane problem in our corn was lowering the nutritional value of our silage. Basis Gold® controlled the shattercane and improved our silage quality. We harvest 6700 tons of silage per week and we want to harvest our corn when silage quality is optimum. Shattercane does not reach optimum silage quality at the same time as our corn. When harvested with corn, the silage quality is lowered."

William Moore
Walmoore Holsteins Inc.
Chatham, PA

"I have been farming most of my 56 years and one pass with Basis Gold® is the best weed control I have ever experienced – no Velvetleaf, Lambsquarters, Quackgrass or Fall Panicum. The one trip Basis Gold® cut my $45.00 / acre hard to control weed bill in half; we did not need to spray one acre out of the 1,400 acres of Basis Gold® a second time. Unlike what I have experienced several years in the past, Basis Gold® did not hold my corn back which resulted in higher yields, earlier maturity and lower drying costs. I have already purchased Basis Gold® for my next 1,400 acre corn crop."

Henry Everman
Henry G. Everman Farms
Dansville, NY



Bob Taylor
Allen's Hatchery & Farms
Seaford, DE

"We switched all 2,300 acres of corn from pretreatments to one trip total post and we are glad we did. We actually used 3 different post programs but were mostly .66 oz. Accent + Exceed and 14 oz. Basis Gold® + 4 oz. Banvel. We will increase our 900 acres of Basis Gold® + Banvel to most of our corn acres because of the lowered cost and our Basis Gold® fields were the cleanest corn we have ever had. You could tell on the Lambsquarters & the Fall Panicum the next day where we sprayed & in about a week the only thing left green was corn. In previous years we were accustomed to spraying about 50% of our pretreated corn twice; it was all one trip with Basis Gold® – a savings we needed this year."

Steve Cullin
Cullin Farms
Crisfield, MD

"What we like about Basis Gold® on our 135 acres over other total post corn programs is that it has residual Basis Gold® worked on our problem weeds – foxtails, "water grass", Cocklebur and Jimsonweed. I'll definitely use more acres of Basis Gold® again. My plan is to target my Basis Gold® to those fields where we have had a history of grass escapes in the past."

"I started off using Basis Gold® 3 years ago on 4 acres before DuPont had given it a name. We are now almost exclusively on all 600 acres of corn either Basis Gold® or Basis®. I keep trying all the new total post corn programs on limited acres but they don't have the residual I need or come up 20+ bushels short on yield. On all our no-till we plan to continue to use a burndown ahead of planting and follow with 14 oz. Basis Gold® + 4 oz. Banvel on 6-12 inch corn; we don't have Fall Panicum problems anymore.

Denis Bitters
Bitter Brothers
Bridgeton, NJ

"We have a problem with late season weeds in our corn. Weeds like Bur Cucumber, Lambsquarters, Velvetleaf, and Foxtail. Shattercane and Johnsongrass are an occasional problem. This year we used Basis Gold® on 350 acres of corn and our corn was the cleanest we have ever had. Basis Gold® gave us late season control of grasses and broadleaves."

Dennis Byrne
Herr Angus Farms
Nottingham, PA

My experience is that it is cheaper to keep clean no-till corn with Basis Gold® post emerge when you figure in the total costs of a pre- followed by the acres that need a clean-up"

Marty Ross
Ross Farms
Delmar, DE

"My dad said Basis Gold® is the best corn weed control we have had at harvest time in several years. We plan to repeat the one pass Basis Gold® on all 180 acres next season. One thing that impressed me is that all our fields stood a good 7-10 days ahead of other pretreated corn in the area planted at the same time. With the cool wet spring all the pre-herbicide corn seemed to be set back; our Basis Gold® corn took off and stayed ahead all season and seemed to dry down sooner too. I was pleased that we fertilized for 200 bushel corn and our results were 185-205 bushel."

David French
John H. French & Son
Milford, DE

"I decided to use one pass Basis Gold® after the corn came up because my dealer said this was better than a pre then following up post on corn. It worked on the Canada thistle, Jimsonweed, Morningglory and Fall Panicum problems we have. We were spending too much money going over the corn twice. I used Basis Gold® on 75 acres of neglected ground where I knew my standard pre product followed by a strong post broadleaf tank mix would be needed to have clean corn at harvest. This 14 oz Basis Gold® + 4 oz. Banvel farm saved me money – it cost as much as my pre treatment but we only had to spray once for clean corn at harvest.

Here Are Ten Fundamentals O

GREG W. ROTH
Associate Professor

Corn production is much like many other enterprise: the secret to success and profitability is paying attention to the details of the fundamental issues. I have outlined 10 fundamental issues that corn producers need to pay attention to.

Corn Production Fundamentals

1. Plant adapted hybrids with known performance potential. Commercial corn hybrids can vary considerably in maturity and yield potential. Often the range in yield performance in hybrid trials is 30-40 bushels per acre. Consequently, it is critical to become a student of commercially available corn hybrids to ensure that hybrids that are being grown are top performers. Corn performance can be estimated from university hybrid trials, third party local test plots, and seed company trials. The objective is to grow hybrids that consistently perform in the top 25percent of hybrid evaluations. It is also important to make sure that hybrids are grown in situations where they are best adapted. Before making your final hybrid selections, check with the seed company representatives to make sure that the hybrids you have chosen are well adapted to your production situations. Consider also selecting hybrids that vary in maturity – this helps to reduce weather risks and spread out harvest. Follow-up on hybrid selection decisions by monitoring corn yields and evaluating hybrids for lodging and diseases.

2. Monitor seed depth. Planting dept is an important detail that is often overlooked during the busy planting season. The optimum planting depth is approximately 1 1/2 inches deep for most conditions. Planting shallower than 1 1 /2 inches can increase the risk of herbicide injury and poor seed-to-soil contact. Planting deeper can lead to reduced emergence under cool, wet conditions and in fields where soil crusting is a problem. Planting depth shoud be meaured preferably in each new field, but at least whenever soil conditions change. Initially the seed depth should be checked for each unit. Anther aspect of seed depth that should be evaluated is seed depth variability. Variability is seeding depth can be caused by driving too fast, broken seed tubes, or worn opener or other planter parts. Evaluate your seed depth decision by determining emergence rates (they should be near 90 percent or more), the uniformity of emergence dates and plant size, and the seed depth of plants that have successfully emerged.

3. Establish an adequate plant population. One of the most common causes of yield reduction in Pennsylvania corn fields is a less than adequate plant population. For most soils a plant population of 25,000 plants per acre is near ideal. On very productive soils or where corn is being grown for silage, plant populations of 30,000 per acre may be warranted. Seed drop should be 10-15 percent higher than the desired plant population to account for less than complete emergence. Plant populations and emergence can be less than desired for various reasons – planter problems, insects, wildlife damage, deep planting, and soil crusting are a few of the most common causes. Planting populations that are too high can lead to lodging in some hybrids. In general, hybrids have been improving in their tolerance to higher populations, and for most hybrids, the penalty of planting too low a population is more than planting too high, Every corn grower should make a habit of evaluating plant populations and emergence rates each year. Also, causes of reduced populations should be noted. This information will help in making more informed management decisions in the future.

4. Manage your soil resource. some of the most important soil factors that relate to yield are its water-holding capacity and soil physical properties such as compaction. Soil organic matter is a major source of a soil's water-holding capacity. Tillage, erosion, and removal of crop residue lead to a slow decline in organic matter, while no till or reduced till, cover crops, crop residue, and manure can help to build organic matter levels. Producers who have learned how to incorporate some of these tactics in their operation are building drought tolerance into their systems.

5. Soil test and fertilize accordingly. Soil tests are an essential tool to manage soil nutrient expenses. Your goal should be to get soils into the optimum range and then develop an annual fertility program to keep soils in that range. This generally means high fertilizer rates initially followed by an annual program that supplies amounts removed by the crop annually. With this program, soil testing ever three years or so is often adequate. Also with this agenda, the objective of our annual fertility program will be to replace nutrients rather than to get a crop response–this makes the timing and method of application less critical and allows you to take advantage of off-season fertilizer discounts. Soil testing also helps you to monitor soil pH and correct it as needed. If variation is noted in fields, then soil sample those areas separately to identify the problem. By keeping soils in the optimum range, the need for grid sampling should be less, since most of the crop is not going to respond to the annual fertility program anyway.

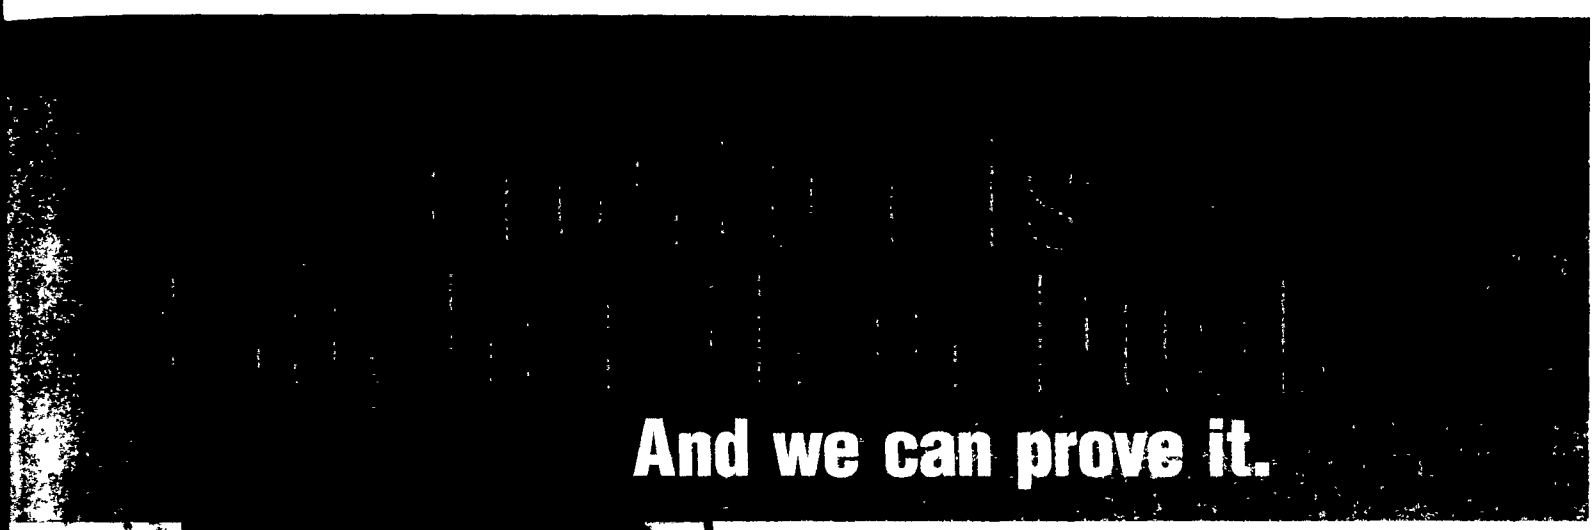
6. Manage Nitrogen (N) fertilizer to provide season-long N supply. Maintaining an adequate N supply to the crop during the entire season should be the objective of every corn grower. Relying totally on preplant N applications can lead to N deficiency late in the season, especially if the season has been wet and the crop yield is high. Relying totally on sidedress applications can lead to early season N deficiencies that might stunt the crop. A split N application approach with some N applied early in th form of manure, starter, banded or broadcast N followed by a sidedress will be the most consistent program year in and year out. If you are relying on a single application, monitor you crop and look for N deficiency symptoms that may signal item for a change. For preplant applications, watch for N deficiency symptoms on lower leaves after silking. For those relying on all sidedressings, watch for yellow leaves and pale corn in early June, just prior to sidedressing. Fields following a legume crop such as alfalfa or soybeans may be less sensitive to the timing of N applications.

7. Scout fields early in the season. One of the most critical investments in corn production is that scouting trip 2-3 weeks after planting. This is a low-cost investment that can pay big dividends. The corn should be coming up by then and you can assess the stand and need for replanting if a problem is evident. Also you can assess weed control and decide if the preemergence herbicide program is working. A second evaluation about 4-6 weeks after planting can focus on population, weed control, insect problems, and nutrient deficiencies.

8. Plant early. Planting early has several key advantages. It often leads to higher yields, earlier harvest, lower grain moisture in the fall, and less pest problems. Starting early also help you to finish early and this helps to avoid late-planting yield penalties on the last fields planted. The challenges to early planting are getting a good stand and getting good weed and insect control, but these can be accomplished in most cases. One question that often comes up is - when is the optimum date for planting. In most of our zone 3 and 4 areas in the state, the optimum date is sometime in late April. Earlier planting may be justified for those with larger acreages who may have trouble finishing by early May otherwise.

9. Develop a cost-effective weed control plans. The first step of addressing this issue is to evaluate the performance of your existing program. Are there problem weeds that come through your program? What are they costing you? Would a post-emergent or more expensive program be justified? Can a weed problem be address with a low-cost crop rotation, herbicide-resistance variety, or tillage solution? There are a few easy things you can do to help minimize weed problems. First, learn the common weeds that are a problem on your operation and then do some research into possible alternative herbicide statagies. Identify problem areas during heaviest and address those areas separately. Also don't overlook the importance of non-chemical methods of weed control - keeping weeds from spreading through the combine, manure or seed, planting cover crops to smoother winter annuals, or cultivating.

10. Develop a plan for marketing your crop. Having a marketing plan is important in all phases of our corn production program. If you know where your corn will be marketed and the demands of the market, then you can make management decisions that position you best for that market. Developing a reputation of meeting your customer's needs with a quality product is a key to gaining access to markets and getting the highest prices. Learning the fundamentals of forward pricing and marketing are essential to manage the risks associated with price changes that can dramatically affect the value of your crop.



And we can prove it.
Frontier®
Here are the facts. Over the past six years, Frontier® herbicide has outperformed Dual® brand herbicides, no matter what the weather. Through wet years, dry years and in-between years.
Here's why. The unique chemistry of Frontier helps it stay in the weed zone when it's wet. And it activates with less moisture when it's dry.
What's in it for you? Consistent grass control in corn or beans. In any weather. When you need real muscle to control grasses you can do better than Dual. With Frontier.

Corn, Soybeans Team Up

NCGA and the American Soybean Association have received a two-year grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to convene a series of forums to better enable grower leaders to guide implementation of water quality programs affecting agriculture.

The forums will establish an enduring communications structure for growers and state government agencies engaged in the process of developing and implementing total maximum daily load (TMDL) requirements for agricultural practices in impaired watersheds.

Forums will be held in Iowa, Minnesota, and South Dakota this spring and two additional states will be selected for next year.

NCGA and ASA have named Margie Williams, former senior vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, as project director for this effort. She will meet with state staff and grower participants at the Commodity Classic to initiate planning for the first round of forums.

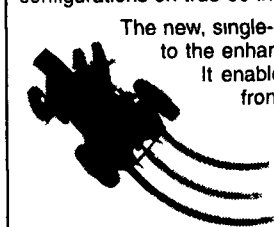
Industry Leading Turning Radius

The revolutionary chassis of the MX Series Magnum improves your overall performance and productivity In fact, the innovative Surround frame allows for the tightest turning radius in the industry, even with front duals!

Thanks to axle improvements, engine placement and a sleek hood design, the MX Series Magnum can easily turn into 12 30-inch rows with all row crop tire configurations on true 60-inch tread settings.



The new, single-piece, sculpted, cast iron Surround frame is the key to the enhanced capabilities and performance of these tractors It enables the MX Series Magnum to offer the first factory front duals, dramatically improving both traction and flotation. By balancing the chassis, we've significantly reduced the amount of front ballast required. And the frame easily accomodates mounted chemical tanks or loaders, allowing you to perform multiple applications.

Gasoline Retailer Testing Ethanol As MTBE Replacement

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. – While Congress wrangled over wording in the Federal Highway Bill extending the ethanol tax exemption through 2007, California, one of the largest gasoline markets in the country, is moving ahead with testing of ethanol as an alternative to the additive MTBE.

Tosco Corp., California's third largest gasoline retailer, announced it has started using ethanol in a test program at 50 service stations.

The company said its ethanol-blended gasoline will be sold in three counties in the San Francisco Bay area and that the product will meet all of California's stringent requirements. "We've heard customers' concerns about potential effects on the water supply, and we want to demonstrate that solutions to the problem of reducing or eliminating MTBE from the gasoline are possible," said Tosco spokesman David Kory. "Ethanol quickly biodegrades in ground water, and trace amounts would have a negligible environmental impact."

he noted that there has been an "uproar" in California as water agencies, environmentalists and grassroots groups continue to criticize MTBE, citing water contamination and possible health problems.

According to Tosco, station managers have reported increased gasoline sales, with motorists assured that the ethanol gasoline would be priced the same or less than the MTBE gasoline it is replacing. Tosco is also assuring motorists that ethanol achieves equally good mileage and performance.

Tosco's test program was lauded by National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) President Ryland Utlaut of Grand Pass, Mo. "I know Californians have been concerned about clear water and water quality and about problems of MTBE in the water systems," Utlaut said. "We believe that we have the product in ethanol to alleviate some of those fears."

He said he is encouraged that Californians, known for their concerns about air quality, are moving in the right direction by using ethanol.

LUCK//NOW MIXER FEEDERS
"P" SERIES

Since 1979 LUCK//NOW Mixer Feeders have been recognized as one of the most dependable and strongest built mixers in the field.

To enhance its existing line of Mixer Feeders LUCK//NOW introduces the "P" Series of Mixer Feeders with six models ranging in size from the Model 300 with a mixing capacity of 310 cubic ft., to the Model 900 with a mixing capacity of 900 cubic ft.

The Large diameter augers in all the "P" Series Mixer feeders are capable of giving the mix required, from rations with well cured, long stemmed legume-type hay, to mixes with green grass, and mixes with silage and commodities. Better milk production, better weight gains and greatly improved animal health are just some of the results of a finely-tuned feed ration.

Growers Use Site-Specific Technology With Landlords

NORCROSS, Ga. – Many farmers are finding that one of the most valuable uses of site-specific technology, and especially the data bases developed, is in communicating with their landlords.

With a large–and growing–percentage of farmland owned by absentee landlords, it is important to maintain such communication. many of these landlords do not have experience with farming and may not understand the information they get.

If they are involved in making decisions on the farm, representation of data in graphs and maps that we get from site-specific tools can greatly enhance their understanding.

Putting together a book of information on each farm–or each field–is an important step for the farmer and can be a valuable resource for the landlord. Many farmers are finding such records valuable when renting land from new landowners to expand their operation, and help them keep the rented land they already farm. Landowners learn about the technology and its value as a management tool and will likely appreciate–and even expect–seeing their tenants make use of it.

Yield maps, soil test maps, soil survey maps, and drainage maps are examples of information that can be useful in working with landlords. It is easier to convince a landlord to invest in improvements such as buildup fertilizer and tile drainage if you can present a good set of maps and economic calculations to justify the request.

Landlords are often concerned about whether their land is being managed in an environmentally friendly manner. Again, site-specific records can be used to justify inputs of fertilizer and pesticides by showing they are based on real needs. They also help demonstrate the response to inputs, which helps prove the need.

Landowners will vary in their interest and in their ability to understand data from their farms, but most will appreciate maps that help them visualize the variability in their fields. Many will appreciate it more if you take the additional steps to provide economic considerations.

So, when assessing the costs and benefits of site-specific technology, don't forget to include the value of having a better informed landlord when it comes to important decisions which the landlord helps determine.

NCGA Reps Talk Private Land Conservation

Production and Stewardship Action Team member Bob Sweany of Missouri and NCGA staffer Courtenay McCormick recently attended a conference entitled "The State of North America's Private Land," sponsored by the Soil and Water Conservation Society.

The goal of the conference was to assess the health of private lands and to begin the process of setting goals for improving the health of the land. The conference program focused on four resource areas; soil, air, water, and biodiversity.

Speakers included government officials, university scientists, non-government organization representatives, and farmers. As corn growers and others build upon their stewardship efforts, it is key that the approaches and techniques used for gathering, synthesizing, and evaluating data and information on the status of natural resources be accurate and scientifically valid. NCGA is exploring ways to measure conservation progress relative to corn production, particularly in the area of water quality.

The InLine Drive

Unique in design, high in efficiency.

The gearbox is located InLine with the actual auger flighting The outer tube is expanded to allow unobstructed and efficient flow of grain past the gear drive section This design proves to be both economical and low maintenance in operation

The unique "InLine Drive" design features an internally mounted gearbox inside of an expanded, bell shaped tube housing Auger flighting is positioned to allow a high volume of unrestricted grain flow around the internal gearbox. A new intake design, utilizes double flighting and a cupped intake guard to offer a high capacity, complete cleanout operation. A specially engineered hopper bolts directly to top of the intake guard, further enhancing the augers capacity.

Growers Announce Agreement On Key Elements Of Corn Insect Resistance Management Program

ST LOUIS, Mo. – The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) has announced that it and companies registering and selling the vast majority of Bt-improved corn hybrids have reached an agreement-in-principle on corn insect resistance management (IRM) for the year 2000. The goal is to present a consistent, unified program to preserve the technology that is practical for growers.

The agreement-in-principle includes five key elements with an accompanying document providing further details. This represents recommendations for the 2000 growing season and does not impact the 1999 production season.

"The message from NCGA members is clear - growers want a uniform plan they can easily adopt," said Tim Hume, NCGA Board member form Walsh, Colo. "They want it to be protective against insect resistance, but practical for their operations."

The agreement-in-principle, according to Hume, simply means that the companies producing the majority of Bt corn have agreed on key points necessary to move forward with a unified IRM plan.

The key elements are:

•One single protective and practical corn refuge requirement for the primary corn-growing region (20 percent and one corn refuge requirement for the primary cotton-growing region (50 percent).

• A clear and consistent IRM grower agreement.

The companies involved are Monsanto, Dekalb, Dow AgroSciences, Mycogen Seeds, Novartis Seeds and Pioneer Hi-Bred International. These companies represent the following Bt corn events; Bt11, MON810, DBT-418 and Event 176. Details of the plan have yet to be finalized through discussion with customers, U.S. EPA and other stakeholders.

All companies involved have been firmly committed to IRM and to refuges, but different companies have been recommending different plans. This marks a movement forward with one plan supported by these parties which will be implemented in the year 2000.

This agreement-in-principle was shared with U.S EPA four months after the NCGA called the individual companies together on Sept 8 in Omaha, Neb. At that meeting, NCGA informed the companies that the mixed messages about refuge size were confusing and urged the technology providers to agree on a plan that was clear, concise and practical for growers. Industry representatives recognized that need and have been working since that time to produce a unified plan.

"We believe that the plan meets the interest of the U.S. EPA and NCGA in having a practical program, consistent across the industry, formed by listening to the views of others," said Hume "These actions will ensure environmental stewardship and product integrity for years to come."

NCGA recently shared the plan with NC 205, the group of academics who have been studying insect resistance management and its relationship to Bt. During the NC 205 meeting, an NDGA grower panel illustrated the practical aspects of managing an insect refuge.

"Insect resistance management is nothing more than an academic concept without grower adoption," said Ron McCarney of Elgin, Iowa, an NCGA grower panelist.

The following key elements have also been developed

I. Refuge Level

•Growers, regardless of their geographic location and individual management practices, will be required to plant a minimum of 20 percent non-BT corn refuge on their farm.

•A farm is defined as the entire land under cultivation to corn by a grower in that growing season within a county. While the grower has flexibility in planting the non-Bt corn refuge, the companies will continue to recommend that growers plant the refuge nearby plantings of Bt corn.

•On farms where corn borer-active non-Bt conventional insecticides will likely be used, growers will be required to plant the non-Bt corn refuge at a distance no greater than 0.25 miles from the Bt corn planting. Growers will be encouraged to follow appropriate Integrated Pest Management practices and treat only when corn borer densities reach economic threshold levels.

•In cotton growing areas where plantings of MON810 and BT11 are currently restricted, growers will be required to plant a 20 percent refuge in the Northern cotton growing region and a 50 percent refuge in the Southern cotton growing region. Regional boundaries will be reviewed based upon the most current information such as Bt cotton market penetra-

PMCGA, NCGA Want Your Membership

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) – Consider joining NCGA and PMCGA today to be part of a national effort to promote corn and corn producer-related issues.

With our Membership Incentive Program, corn producers who grow five or more acres of corn can now join both organizations with little real cost.

THE MIP program works like this: if you sign up for a three-year joint membership for $75, you can receive a free bag of seed from one of your participating industry partners listed on the form. To get signed up, complete our membership form and send it in to our office at the address listed on the form along with a check for $75 made payable to PMCGA to cover the three-year membership.

Our office will then send your name to the seed company you have selected and a coupon to you indicating you have qualified for the program. You will then be contacted by one of the seed company reps and your seed will be delivered before the planting season.

This ia a win-win-win-proposition - you get a bag of seed and membership in a large national organization for $75, NCGA and PMCGA get your support, and the seed industry gets to showcase new genetics to key producers.

As a member of NCGA, you can be part of a 30,000-member national organization that is addressing many of the issues we face in the corn industry. Issues include corn pieces, industry consolidation, environmental issues, and development of new markets for corn.

NCGA also sponsors the national Corn Yield Contest and Commodity Classic. They also send a quarterly newsletter to all members entitled the National Corn Grower.

PMCGA sponsors one or two conferences a year, the Five-Acre Corn Club and Corn Talk, and helps to promote corn issues to the public at many local events.

If you are a corn producer who grows at least five acres of corn, consider joining for three years today and taking advantage of the MIP program. Use the MIP program to look at some new hybrids that some of our seed company partners have available this year.

Remember that membership in the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA) automatically makes you a member in the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA).

Brillion Commander System

The Brillion Soil Commander, best in the field for soil conservation efficiency.

The Soil Commander is a versatile tillage tool designed to meet the needs of the mid-size farmer who uses a 135-200 H P. tractor One of the keys to the machine's versatility is that it uses interchangeable shank legs and individually mounted disk assemblies instead of a disk gang.

This makes possible a machine with disk assemblies on the front and rear of the frame with chisel plow or deep-ripper shanks on 15", 24", 27" or 30" spacings

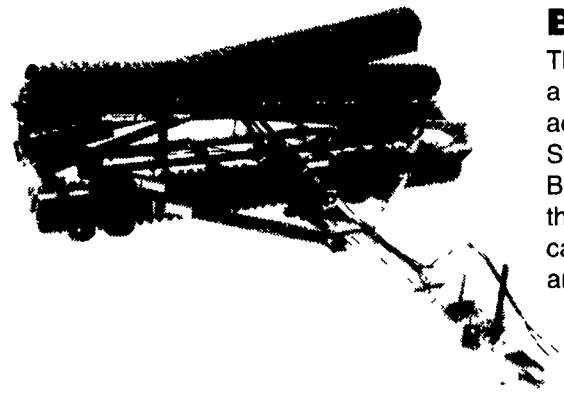
COMMANDER SYSTEM



BRILLION PULVERIZERS

The pulverizer has long been one of the farmer's most valuable tools When pulled behind a disc or field cultivator the pulverizer will help create an ideal seedbed with fewer trips across the field.

Some of the most valuable soil nutrients are locked in the clods left in your field The Brillion Pulverizer crushes clods to release those nutrients for use by growing plants. At the same time air pockets are eliminated and moisture is drawn up the root zone by capillary action. Good soil to seed contact creates more uniform germination, pollination and maturity... and that means increased crop yield and greater profits.

DAVID WAGNER
Penn State
Bio Engineering

Since this is an article about Precision Farming or Site Specific Agriculture, the subject of GPS will come up as it is an important part of the total picture.

GPS stands for Global Positioning System, and it can be complicated or very simple, depending on how we talk about it. Now for you men (and women, too) that like to gather in the coffee shop in the morning for sinkers and coffee, you too can be a space age whiz!

What you need is some new technical jargon about GPS and everyone will think you are the most advanced farmer in the country. You will be nominated for "Farmer of the Year." This information you can use to wow your friends about GPS.

The U.S. Air Force and Navy started space - based radio navigation systems back in 1960 and in 1973 the u S. Secretary of Defense signed the official memorandum which conceived th NAVSTAR Global Positioning System. The GPS system consists of 24 satellites, a series of monitoring stations and ground antennas and a master control station.

The first satellites were launched in march 1978. These satellites are in constant communication with the master control station so they can be kept in the proper orbit and also for maintaining the electronics on each of the 24 satellites. The satellite orbits are about 12,400 miles above the earth's surface. They orbit the earth once each 12 hours at a speed of 9000 miles per hour. Each of these satellites contains a very accurate atomic clock (not radioactive).

Very simply, each satellite sends out a timing signal that is received by the GPS receivers on the ground. The signal is very faint, and it takes some fancy frequency generation and transmission of these frequencies so that our little battery operated BPS receivers can receive these signals. Because of the wy the satellite orbits ar maintained, at any single location on the surface of the earth, our receives can get a signal from about 5-6 satellites.

Now, why the orbits and why do we need all these satellites? With the length of this column, I can't go into a lot of detail, but the reason gets back to the geometry that you took in high school. Very simply, the satellites send out a very accurate timing signal. Since the velocity of light is 186,000 miles per second, it takes about 0.06 seconds for the signal to get from the satellite to your receiver if the satellite is directly overhead. If it is lower on the horizon, the distance is greater and it takes longer. So, if your GPS receiver knew when the signal was transmitted and when it was received, it could compute how far you are from the satellite. now enters the geometry. Also transmitted with the timing signal is an "ephemeris" of data that tells the GPS receiver th location of each satellite in its orbit. So your GPS receiver knows not only the distance to each satellite, it also knows the relative position of each satellite in relation to our GPS receiver the location of each satellite in its orbit. So your GPS receiver knows not only the distance to each satellite, it also knows the relative position of each satellite in relation to our GPS receiver. It now has all the information to calculate some angles and position! Your GPS is actually a radio receiver, a small computer and memory chip, and trigonometry equations.

Since the GPS actually computes a three dimensional position, and theoretically, the GPs could work with three satellites for both elevation and latitude/longitude. In reality, there is a way for the calculated position to be more accurately computed if an additional satellite position were known. The GPS receiver is programmed to require four satellite signals if elevation and latitude/longitude is to be computed.

The GPS receiver really does a very simple thing. it tells you where you are. The GPS electronics takes care of giving you the position and the accuracy estimate. So, what is the accuracy? The basic GPS receiver is dependent on the Department of Defense controlling the satellites. Normally, the DOD degrades the accuracy of the timing signal. This degraded signal is called "Selective availability (SA)," and only in wartime is the SA turned off so that you get a more accurate signal. Working normally, your GPS is accurate to about 15 to 30 feet if there were perfect reception and all he satellites were in perfect position. Due to a lot of other interferences, and with the DOD degrading the signal, you can count on about 300 to 350 feet accuracy.

So what does this 300-350 feet accuracy term mean? If you draw a circle on the ground, 350 feet in diameter, and stand in the middle of the circle, about 2/3 of the location readings from your GPS receiver would fall in the circle. Not too accurate, huh? If you are a hunter or a boater, that accuracy would be good enough to get you out of the woods or back to your dock. But for agricultural application or yield monitoring and mapping fields, that accuracy is not good enough. We have other tricks up our sleeve. Read on.

Consider if you had a precisely surveyed location or a known location on your farm, like the property corner out in front of the house, and you put a GPS (let's call that GPS1) receiver on that point. Because of the inaccuracy of the GPS technology, you would know the error in distance and direction between the GPS1 receiver location and the property corner location. This is the differential GPS error correction at any single instant of time. Now, if you have another GPS receiver which is roving about the farm, (call this one GPS2) and you are moving about the fields and talking readings, the error in distance and direction for GPS2 is the same error introduced in GPS1. If you transmit the error correction from GPS1 with a radio signal to GPS2 and let GPS2 add or subtract the correction to its own location, then you have a differentially corrected BPS for the GPS2 location. With this differentially corrected location, the error in GPS2 is reduced to less than three feet. That's the basis of DIFFERENTIAL GPS: using the known error at one location to correct other GPS receivers. We can

Tenative Agreement Set On Insect Resistance Managment Plan For BT-Improved Corn Hybrids

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The Biotechnolgy Committee of the American Crop Protection Association (ACPA), representing the majority of the companies registering and selling Bt-improved corn hybrids, has endorsed a tentative agreement with the National Corn Growers Association on a planfor theyear 2000 to manage insect resistance to the new Bt-corn technology.

"This is a good agreement for the growers, the companies, the Environmental Protection Agency and, most important, for the environment." siad Joe Panetta, Mycogen/Dow AgroSciences, chairman of the ACPA committee. "It focuses awareness on stewardship and the need to promote and educate agriculture about the importance of this important new, environmentally friendly technology."

The agreement, which has been submitted to the Enviornmental Protection Agency (EPA) for approval, calls for most corn growers to testablish a minimum 20-percent non-Bt corn refuge on their farms. However, in some southerly cotton regions, growers will be required to plant 50-percent refuges. Regional boundaries will be reviewed and adjsuted periodically according to Bt-cottom market penetration and corn earworm over-witnering survival.

In addition to the refuges, the agreement requires participating growers to strictly follow a set of uniform Insect Resistance Management (IRM) guidelines supplied by the Bt registrants.

tion and corn earworm overwintering survival, and adjusted accordingly.

II IRM Agreement

• Growers will sign an agreement stipulating that they will follow the IRM requirements detailed in BT corn product grower guides supplied by companies.

• Grower guides supplied by companies will include a uniform set of IRM requirements of all corn growers purchasing BT corn products (BT11, MON810, DBT-418, and Event 176 Bt Corn).

III Grower Education

•It is clear that growers must understand the importance of Bt corn insect resistance management. Therefore, a uniform set of IRM requirements will be developed and communicated through individual seed companies working with organization such as USEPA, USDA, NCGA, state and county corn associations and land grant university extension services.

•The companies recognize as well the critical importance of continuing education to ensure IRM program implementation and are committed to education programs.

IV Grower Adoption of IRM Plan

• Grower surveys will be conducted annually to determine grower adoption of the Bt corn IRM requirements.

• If grower implementation of the required IRM plan falls below acceptable levels in an area, then grower education will be increased and strengthen to improve IRM plan adoption •Individual growers who repeatedly do not follow the IRM requirements described in the Bt corn product growers guides will have limited access to the technology in the future.

V. Insect Susceptibility Monitoring:

•Registrants will continue to monitor target insect susceptibility as required by USEPA.

Renewables Vision 2020 Continues To Find Plant Uses,

The Renewables Vision 2020 effort, led by the national Corn Growers Association (NCGA), continues to find ways to use plants as an alternative to petroleum as fossil fuel supplies dwindle.

The Technology Roadmap, which will guide research and development efforts into plant-based, renewable resources, was released in late January. The Roadmap identifies performance goals and establishes an R&D agenda for the Vision. Top research priorities are identified in the Roadmap in the key areas of plant science, production, processing and utilization. the Roadmap can be found at http://www.oit.doe.gov/agriculture. NCGA participated in scientific workshops last September to develop the Roadmap.

The Department of Energy announced a solicitation for $2 million in matching grant funds for research that supports the Roadmap. This is the first research solicitation in support of the Renewables Vision 2020 effort. Major focus will be placed on proposals that address specific barriers in the processing and utilization categories identified in the Roadmap, All proposals must be multi-institutional and a 50 percent cost share is required. It is anticipated that the DOE will award three to six cooperative agreements with total funding per project ranging between $200,000 and $600,000 over a two- to three-year period. To access the solicitation (number DE-SC02-99CH10965), visit http://www.ch.doe.gov.business/ACO.htm.

The President's Fiscal year 2000 budge includes a request for $4 million for continued research under the DOE solicitation program. The Renewables Vision 2020 Executive Steering Committee met while attending a Department of Energy-sponsored conference this week in Washington D.C. While meeting, the steering committee tentatively agreed to try to achieve by 2002 a minimum of $100 million annually for research to support the Technology Roadmap. The conference was attended by NCGA members and/or action team members Al Cotter, Hutchinson, Minn.; Bob Sweany, St. Charles, Mo.; Rob Meyer, St. Peter, Minn.; and David Miller, Millersport, Ohio.

USFGC Releases Value-Enhanced Corn Report

CORN TALK NEWS
PENNSYLVANIA MASTER CORN GROWERS ASSOC., INC.

WASHINGTON, D.C. – "Our commitment to educate endusers about the quality and reliability of U.S. feed grains is crucial," said Ken Hobbie, president and CEO of the U.S. Feed Grains Council. "We have once again taken the initiative with the 1997/98 Value-Enhanced Corn Quality Report"

This year's report shows that traditional "specialty" corns such as white, waxy, hard endosperm/food grade and high amylose represent a small but growing market for VEC. High oil corn, which has had a production increase from virtually no acres in 1993 to an estimated 1,500,000 acres in 1998, remains the fastest growing VEC product in the marketplace.

The market potential for both high oil and nutritionally dense corn is very high, and along with markets for specified handling characteristics (such as low stress cracks), represent the most significant growth potential for the VEC market

Hobbie notes that the third annual report will be translated into Japanese and Spanish "Around the work, we see more and more feed grain customers making very sophisticated choices in their purchase. Building export markets for America's grains depends on providing customers what they want–that means we need to supply the right information in the right language for key markets.

The Council retained Ag Education and Consulting, Savoy, Ill., to conduct the third broad-based compilation of test results and analysis of the VEC market in the United States, which included a comprehensive survey of producers, elevators and companies who produce and merchandise value-enhanced corn varieties such as white, high-oil, high amylose and others.

New information was gathered from 1,700 producers regarding VEC yields, premiums, acreage and contact production and the factors that cause producers to grow or not grow VEC. Current developments in rapid testing technologies for grain quality are included, along with a discussion of current industry developments.

Corn Action Teams Define NCGA Priorities, Programs

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — More than 50 corn growers from 19 different states converged on St. Louis to offer their expertise to the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) on issues ranging from world trade and fast track authority to water quality and plant biotechnology.

This inaugural meeting of the newly formed Corn action Teams marked a historic milestone for the NCGA and its 30,000 members and 44 state-affiliated associations. Corn Action Teams are part of a unique network of growers designed to tackle a very large goal — making the corn industry worth $40 billion at the farmgate by 2002.

"While it's our goal to significantly increase the value of the U.S. corn crop to the farmer during the next five years," explained Ryland Utlaut, NCGA president and a corn and soybean grower from New Florence, Mo. "We're also focusing our efforts on ways to make the nation's number one crop more useful and valuable to consumers and the feed industry both here and abroad."

To reach these goals, the NCGA created four Corn Action Teams — Production and Stewardship, Customer and Business Development, Public and Policy and Grower Services. Team member are charged with advising the organization on these issues.

- Production and Stewardship — U S. rail and river transportation, water quality, conservation and other production issues that impact U.S. corn growers and the environment.
- Customer and Business Development — business development and research, ethanol (the corn-based renewable fuel that cleans the air and reduces U.S. dependence on foreign oil), the Plant Genome Initiative, and high-oil corn and other quality traits through biotechnology.
- Public Policy — international trade, Fast Track negotiating authority, European Union acceptance of biotech corn hybrids, taxes and the Food Quality Protection Act (FQPA).
- Grower Services — services and leadership development for the organization's 30,000 individual members and 44 state-affiliated organizations, in addition to membership recruitment.

The Corn Action Teams, which are scheduled to meet several times this year, will prepare and approve the organization's action plans for addressing these issues on behalf of the U.S. corn grower.

NCGA Urges EPA Consideration Of Growers In Insect Resistance Debate

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) expressed concern that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is on a course toward restricting insect-protected crops to the point that they will no longer be practical for farmers to use.

"We want to utilize these hybrids for the economic and environmental benefits they bring to corn production" said NCGA President Bill Ryland Utlaut of Grand Pass, Mo. "And we caution EPA against taking steps that would restrict this technology."

EPA is considering establishing insect resistance management (IRM) programs to prevent insects from developing resistance to proteins from Bacillus thuringiensis (Bt), a naturally occurring soil organism which can be used in place of chemical insecticides to control certain agricultural pests. This effort apparently in response to the threat of lawsuits from certain anti-technology interests.

A central component of IRM programs is a recommendation that growers plant some of their acreage in non-Bt hybrids. this non-Bt "refuge" would provide an adequate supply of Bt-susceptible insects to mate with any very rare resistant insects that might survive exposure to the Bt crops The offspring of their mating would most likely be susceptible to Bt

"We believe in the need for a refuge and will strongly encourage our members to plant one," Utlaut said. "But we fear if the refuge requirements are too onerous, growers will not be able to justify using the technology from an economic perspective."

Growers currently have two options in establishing a refuge: 1) Leave a portion of non-Bt corn unprotected or 2) leave a larger refuge but use a chemical spray to protect it. Bt is proving to be an effective tool in controlling certain agricultural pests.

"Growers feel that if they have to spray a high percentage of their corn acres, they might as well spray it all to realize the economic efficiency," said Tim Hume, NCGA board member from Walsh, Col.

"Bt corn has shown us just how much yield we are losing to corn borers, and we are not willing to accept that yield loss anymore," Hume said. "Raising the refuge requirement moves growers away from Bt and back to sprays, and I don't think that's what anyone envisioned when we first heard about the promise of this new, environmentally compatible technology."

Utlaut and Hume called on EPA and other working to establish refuge requirements to accept the best science-based recommendation that would allow maximum grower usage of the technology.

"We want to protect this technology for years to come, but we also want to be able to use it on our farms," Hume said.

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.

Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Newly registered herbicide thwarts Canada thistle

In Pennsylvania, the issue is not if you have Canada thistle, but how much But newly registered Distinct™ herbicide for corn takes down Canada thistle as well as other tough annual and perennial broadleaf weeds

Unlike other herbicides, Distinct immediately begins restricting plant hormone movement when sprayed Since the hormones cannot be transported throughout the weed for development, they accumulate at the growth points, the weed overdoses on hormones and dies

"We saw a fast take-down of Canada thistle and slower grass control that seemed to keep new seedlings from coming up," says Felton, Penn corn grower Bill Rinas, who had an Experimental Use Permit (EUP) plot on his farm during the 1998 season

"Distinct looked good," he continues "I was impressed with control of Canada thistle and other broadleaf weeds, including lambsquarters We also saw residual grass control "

Herbistatic grass control or suppression, in addition to broad-spectrum, broadleaf weed control, are not the only advantages Distinct offers corn growers "Distinct is not prone to resistance," says BASF Field Biologist Gar Thomas, Chesapeake City, Md "Effective across all tillage types, Distinct has no rotation restrictions or carryover concerns "

That is important for growers like Rinas who raise other crops such as soybeans "We did not have drift problems," says Rinas, who sprayed the EUP plot himself "Distinct was easy to mix, and the sprayer was easy to clean out "

Thomas recommends growers use Guardsman® herbicide as a preemergence treatment to keep weeds from getting too big before applying Distinct postemergence when corn is small

"Distinct provides excellent knockdown and in-season residual control through crop canopy," says Thomas "It's just plain better than anything else on Canada thistle "

EPA Registers Distinct For Use

BASF Distinct® herbicide has received registration from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and is now available to corn growers for use A postemergence broadleaf herbicide, Distinct offers growers a full-service package of benefits, including stand-alone control of all key broadleaf weeds

Distinct contains a new active ingredient, diflufenzopyr [dye-floo-FEN-zo-peer], and is the first herbicide developed with the semicarbazone class of chemistry

"Distinct will set a new standard in broadleaf weed control," says Robert Ratliff, BASF Southern corn market manager "It begins working on weeds within four hours, provides control to canopy and has no carryover concerns to the following year's crop "

This new chemistry is critical to corn producers' success, as they battle weeds that are increasingly tough to control or are resistant to ALS and triazine herbicides With Distinct, yield-robbing weeds are stopped quickly and completely, allowing corn plants to grow, canopy and minimize any competition for nutrients, sunlight and moisture

Once applied, Distinct immediately begins to restrict the movement of growth hormones through the plant Instead of being transported throughout the weed for development, the hormones are forced to accumulate at the growth points of the weed, resulting in excellent control

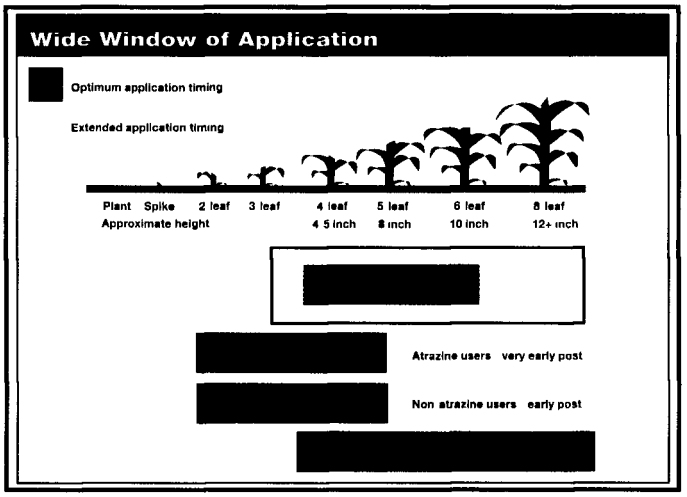
"Distinct is unique because it not only rapidly knocks down tough weeds, it offers significant residual for up to six weeks," says Ratliff "Diflufenzopyr blocks the auxins (plant hormones) at the growing regions throughout the plant This unique action, coupled with a synthetic auxin product, which is dicamba, provides the unique control of Distinct " The herbicide fills a void in the postemergence corn herbicide market, because it controls all key annual and perennial broadleaf weeds, including waterhemp, ragweed, velvetleaf, cocklebur, pigweed, lambsquarters, morningglory, sunflowers and Canada thistle Distinct also has herbistatic activity on grasses such as foxtails The label allows application on corn from 4 inches up to 24 inches To maximize weed control and yield potential, the herbicide is recommended for postemergence application on 4-inch to 10-inch tall corn (see Wide Window of Application chart)

"Distinct did an ideal job of controlling thistles and picked up all annual broadleaf weeds, such as lambsquarters, giant ragweed and velvetleaf," says Ed Corrigan, risk manager of Hintzsche Fertilizer Inc , Maple Park, Ill , who supervised a 5-acre EUP plot in 1998 "Distinct also picked up grass escapes that were 3-inches to 4-inches tall No other postemergence grass product was required, and the canopy also helped suppress grass at that time "



Canada thistle meets its match

Canada thistle was introduced to North America from the Old World in the early 1800s Since then, this colorful but troublesome weed has infested millions of acres and caused economic hardships for corn growers

In addition Canada thistle is tough to control due to its efficient reproductive abilities and sheer hardiness From one Canada thistle seedling, a stand can spread 60 feet in all directions Each stem has 680 seeds the wind can carry up to a half mile, and each seed is capable of staying dormant for up to 21 years in undisturbed soil

Chemical mechanical and biological methods of control have been tried against Canada thistle throughout the years, but none has produced consistent results Distinct herbicide provides a new measure of control

A full service, postemergence broadleaf solution for corn, Distinct contains a new chemistry, diflufenzopyr [dye-floo-f EN-zo-peer], which blocks growth hormones throughout the plant Distinct starts to work within four hours of application and gives control to canopy Distinct is fully effective without a tankmix partner on Canada thistle

The most successful strategy for reducing Canada thistle and other weeds is to adopt an on-going control program — for two to three successive years — that includes herbicide use

"People do need to realize that Canada thistle has an extensive root system, and in order for anything to be effective, they must apply a continuing program," says Merrill Ross, professor of weed science, Purdue University "The fact that Canada thistle recovers from treatment so consistently is one of the things that concerns me the most "

Distinct provides growers with an extremely wide window of application Plus, the herbicide gives residual control to canopy to stop secondary flushes Distinct can be used in corn that is 1 inches to 2 1 inches The herbicide is most effective when used in fields with 4-inch to 10-inch-tall corn
